PREFACE

The present volume, as was suggested in the preface to this series, presents material relating to the traffic which originated in or brought slaves to the Continental Colonies. Read in the light of the information contained in the earlier volumes, it should, in spite of its narrow range, depict the American trade as part of a larger commerce the significance of which extended far beyond the bounds of the thirteen colonies. The same methods of supply were used, the same orders issued, for traffic to the Caribbean markets and to the markets of the north, and many of the documents here printed throw light not only on the commercial relations between the West Indies and the Northern colonies but also on the slave supply of the island plantations. This however is incidental to the main purpose of the volume, which, it is to be remembered, is to illustrate the trade which pertained to those colonies subsequently a part of the United States. Even with such limitation, to present the history of the trade of the colonies in extenso was impossible. Yet to print a few illustrative documents for each colony did not seem a particularly useful service. Economic sources do not lend themselves to concise treatment. Diplomatic history can often be illuminated by a single protocol. The history of a long series of negotiations may be summed up in one decisive document but to the student of economic history an event assumes importance because of its recurrence. The small thing which happens over and over again becomes significant by reason of its repetition. To present this recurrence by means of original material requires large space. A few colonies have therefore been treated in detail, the others in briefer fashion. Even this plan did not make it possible to present the American material in a single volume, as was originally intended. The present work deals with the traffic of New England and the Middle Colonies, and leaves to a fourth volume the documents relating to the Southern Colonies.

No liberties have been taken with the texts except such as seemed necessary in order to make them intelligible. In this attempt many of the accounts have been reduced to more orderly form than that of the original manuscripts but the student will still find some puzzling discrepancies which may result from mistaken transcriptions or from inaccuracies on the part of early accountants. The usage as to capitalization, punctuation, and abbreviations follows that of earlier volumes.

Without the generous aid of such institutions as the library of Harvard University, the Library of Congress, the historical societies of Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New York, and Newport, and the Essex Institute the work could never have been completed and for their courtesy the editor wishes to express her warmest appreciation. Among many individuals who have helped to bring the volumes into existence the assistance of Miss Cornelia M. Pierce and of Miss Jean Trepp deserve special recognition.

DOCUMENTS ILLUSTRATIVE OF THE HISTORY OF THE SLAVE TRADE TO AMERICA

THE NEW ENGLAND COLONIES

INTRODUCTION

The story of the slave trade of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, the two New England colonies of importance in this traffic, is set forth in such detail in the pages which follow that little need be said here. The significance of their connection with this traffic lies not in the amount of their importation, which, though probably larger than is generally realized, was insignificant as compared with that of the Southern colonies, but in the economic importance of their slave-carrying business and to a lesser degree of their commerce in rum, on which in its later years the slave trade rested. Massachusetts took a hand in the commerce in negroes at a surprisingly early date and continued to deal in them throughout the period covered by these volumes. Rhode Island, entering the trade somewhat later, soon commanded a larger share of it. While much has been written on this New England commerce, many obvious questions concerning it remain unanswered. Some of these may never be answered; others find partial solution in the material here printed.

Though other New England colonies are less important than are the two mentioned, the minor rôles of New Hampshire and Connecticut deserve recognition. The record of New Hampshire's slave trade here printed begins with Governor Dudley's reply to the enquiry of the Board of Trade sent out in 1708: "There are in New Hampshire negro servants to the number of 70. And about 20 of them in nine years past have been brought in."¹ We also know that later in the century a number of vessels cleared from Portsmouth for Africa: Samuel Moore made a Guinea voyage in 1728 and in 1731; Captain Dickinson in 1732; Captain John Major, in a Portsmouth schooner, was murdered on the coast of Guinea in 1732. Whether these vessels were owned in Boston or represented an actual New Hampshire investment cannot be determined with certainty.²

For Connecticut, likewise, the annals of the trade are brief. Negroes were to be found in New Haven as early as 1664 but there is no information as to their source. On July 15, 1680, Governor William Leete reported to the Lords of the Privy Council:

And for Blacks, there comes sometimes 3 or 4 in a year from Barbadoes; and they are sold usually at the rate of 22 li. a peice, sometimes more and sometimes less, according as men can agree with the masters of vessells, or merchants that bring them hither.³

The next official statement on the subject is that made by the governor at the time the Commissioners for Trade and Plantations collected material for the report of 1709:

Your Lordships' letter of April 15, 1708, came not to our hand till December 22, in obedience to which wee have made strickt enquiry what number of negroes have been imported June 1698-December 1707, and find that their hath not been one vessell either of the Royall Affrican Company's or of separate traders, that hath imported any negroes hither in that space of time, nor any since or before, that wee can heare of. Their are but few negroes in this Government and those wee are supplied with from the neighbouring provinces for the most part, except that sometimes half a dozen in a year may be imported from the West Indies. As to the half yearly accounts of negroes imported from December 25, 1707, their is now a year from that time run out and none imported, nor any like to be in vessells from this Colony, their being none employed in that trade.⁴

Similar report was made by Deputy Governor Saltonstall for the period from 1708 to July, 1710.⁵

There follows a period for which we have no information. Some time between 1710 and the middle of the century a small number of vessels entered the trade. Captain Williams arrived in Connecticut in 1752, from the African coast;⁶ in 1763 the mate of an African vessel arrived in Hartford;⁷ Captain Joseph Miller, in a New London sloop, died on the African coast in 1764. The same year Captain Faggot, commander of a New London brig belonging to Messrs. Forsey of New London, lost his life in a slave uprising at Goree.⁸ W. C. Fowler wrote of three Middletown sea captains engaged in the slave trade—D. Walker, Captain Gleason, and Captain Easton. These masters were believed to have brought full cargoes to Connecticut which, when that market was overstocked, were carried to New Hampshire and Vermont. Captain Easton may have been the Captain Eaton referred to as on the coast in 1763 with a Captain Waterman, also of Connecticut.⁹

That there was importation of negroes into Connecticut is clear from the legislation of 1769, which forbade further importation into that colony, "whereas the increase of slaves is injurious to the poor and inconvenient."¹⁰

In the renewal of the carrying trade after the Revolution Connecticut took some part though probably a small one. The abolitionists of Rhode Island, led by Samuel Hopkins and Moses Brown, were obliged to extend their activities to Connecticut and New Hampshire in order to prevent Rhode Island slavers from clearing from those states after the prohibition of the trade by Rhode Island. In Connecticut their allies, Levi Hart and Jonathan Edwards, were the prime movers in obtaining the law of 1788 prohibiting the trade, and the amendment of 1789 which strengthened the original act. At least one Connecticut prosecution, that of Mather vs. White, was brought under this law.¹¹ In 1791, three years after the trade was prohibited to Connecticut residents, Captain William Wignall of New London was killed in a negro uprising in Africa.¹²

1. EXTRACT FROM JOHN WINTHROP'S JOURNAL, 1638.¹

26 [February]. Mr. Peirce, in the Salem ship, the Desire, returned from the West Indies after seven months. He had been at Providence,² and brought some cotton, and tobacco, and negroes, etc., from thence, and salt from Tertugos. Dry fish and strong liquors are the only commodities for those parts. He met there two men-of-war, set forth by the lords, etc., of Providence with letters of mart, who had taken divers prizes from the Spaniard, and many negroes.³

2. BODY OF LIBERTIES, 1641.¹

It is Ordered by this Court and the Authority thereof; That there shall never be any Bond-slavery, Villenage or Captivity amongst us, unless it be lawful Captives taken in just Wars, [and such strangers] as willingly sell themselves or are sold to us, and such shall have the Liberties and Christian usage which the Law of God established in Israel concerning such persons doth morally require; Provided this exempts none from servitude who shall be judged thereto by Authority.

² The Desire was a Marblehead vessel of 100 or 120 tons, in which Capt. William Pierce had in 1637 carried Indian captives to Providence Island in the Caribbean, returning with the cargo here described. In 1638 when Josselyn, on his first visit to New England, lodged with Samuel Maverick he found him possessed of at least three negroes, whom he may have purchased from Captain Pierce (Winthrop, Journal, I. 187, 331; John Josselyn, Account of Two Voyages to New England, Boston, 1865, p. 26). For an account of the early trade of Massachusetts Bay in captive Indians see G. H. Moore, Notes on the History of Slavery in Massachusetts, pp. 1-7, 30-48.

³ For want of any other explanation it has been assumed that an item of March, 1639, concerning Richard Davenport, who was allowed "for charge disbursed for the slaves which when they have earned it he is to repay back againe," related to a part of the cargo of the Desire. The amount was £3 8 s. Massachusetts Colonial Records, I. 253.

[2] ¹ The Laws of Massachusetts of 1672 (facsimile, ed. Whitmore, 1884) omitted the bracketed words. For a discussion of this act and the legal status of slavery under it see Moore, Notes on Slavery, pp. 12-18, and Emory Washburn, "Slavery as it once prevailed in Massachusetts," in Lectures before the Lowell Institute (1869), pp. 191-225. To Moore this law gave to Massachusetts precedence over all other colonies in the sanctioning of perpetual bondage; to Washburn it proved that slavery was abhorrent to the colonists.

[April 13, 1645.]

One of our ships, which went to the Canaries with pipestaves in the beginning of November last, returned now, and brought wine, and sugar, and salt, and some tobacco, which she had at Barbadoes, in exchange for Africoes, which she carried from the Isle of Maio.² . . .

[July (?), 1645.]

The said Mr. James Smith³ with his mate Keyser were bound to Guinea to trade for negroes. But when they arrived there they met some Londoners, with whom they consorted, and the Londoners having been formerly injured by the natives (or at least pretending the same,) they invited them aboard one of their ships upon the Lord's day, and such as came they kept prisoners, then they landed men, and a murderer,⁴ and assaulted one of their towns and killed many of the people, but the country coming down, they were forced to retire without any booty, divers of their men being wounded with the negroes' arrows, and one killed. . . .

For the matter of the negroes, whereof two were brought home in the ship, and near one hundred slain by the confession of some of the mariners, the magistrates took order to have these two set at liberty, and to be sent home; but for the slaughter committed, they were in great doubt what to do in it, seeing it was in another country, and the Londoners pretended a just revenge. So they called the elders; and desired their advice.

5. PETITION OF RICHARD SALTONSTALL, 1645.¹*To the Honoured General Court,*

The oath I took this yeare att my enterance upon the place of assistante was to this effect: That I would truly endeavour the advancement of the gospell and the good of the people of this plantation (to the best of my skill,) dispencing justice equally and impartially (according to the laws of God and this land) in all cases wherein I act by virtue of my place. I conceive myselfe called by virtue of my place to act (according to this oath) in the case concerning the Negers taken by captain Smith and Mr. Keser; wherein it is apparent that Mr. Keser upon a sabboth day gave chace to certaine Negers; and upon the same day tooke divers of them; and at another time killed others; and burned one of their townes. Omitting several misdemeanours which accompanied these acts above-mentioned, I conceive the acts themselves to bee directly contrary to these following laws (all which are capitall by the word of God; and 2 of them by the lawes of this jurisdiction.)

The act (or acts) of murder (whether by force or fraude) are expressly contrary both to the law of God, and the law of this country.

The act of stealing Negers, or of taking them by force, (whether it be considered as theft, or robbery) is (as I conceive) expressly contrary, both to the law of God, and the law of this country.

The act of chaceing the Negers (as aforesayde) upon the sabboth day (beeing a servile worke and such as cannot be considered under any other heade) is expressly capitall by the law of God.

These acts and outrages beeing committed where there was noe civill government which might call them to accompt, and the persons by whome they were committed beeing of our jurisdiction, I conceive this court to bee the Ministers of God in this case; and therefore my humble request is that the severall offenders may be imprisoned by the order of this court, and brought unto their deserved censure in convenient time; and this I humbly crave, that soe the sinn they have committed may be upon their owne heads, and not upon ourselves (as otherwise it will).²

7. EMANUEL DOWNING TO JOHN WINTHROP, 1645.¹

To his evere-honored brother John Winthrop Esqr. at Boston.

Sir, . . . If upon a Just warre [with the Narragansetts] the Lord should deliver them into our hands, wee might easily have men woemen and children enough to exchange for Moores, which wilbe more gaynefull pilladge for us then wee conceive, for I doe not see how wee can thrive untill wee get into a stock of slaves sufficient to doe all our buisness, for our children's children will hardly see this great Continent filled with people, soe that our servants will still desire freedome to plant for them-selves, and not stay but for verie great wages. And I suppose you know verie well how wee shall mayneteyne 20 Moores cheaper than one Englishe servant.

The ships that shall bring Moores may come home laden with salt which may beare most of the chardge, if not all of it. . . .

8. RECORDS OF THE GENERAL COURT OF

[November 4, 1646.]

The Genrall Corte, conceiving themselves bound by the first oportunity to bear witnes against the haynos and crying sinn of man stealing, as also to proscribe such timely redresse for what is past, and such a law for the future as may sufficiently deterr all othrs belonging to us to have to do in such vile and most odious courses, justly abhored of all good and just men, do order, that the negro interpreter, wth othrs unlawfully taken, be, by the first oportunity, (at the charge of the country for present,) sent to his native country of Ginny, and a letter wth him of the indignation of the Corte there-

[7] ¹ Winthrop Papers (Mass. Hist. Soc., Collections, fourth ser., VI.), II. 64-65. Emanuel Downing, husband of Winthrop's sister Lucy and father of the more famous Sir George Downing, had come to New England in 1638. From that year until 1643 he was a member of the General Court. In 1644 and at least part of 1645 he was in London; in 1646 he was again in Salem.

[8] ¹ Records of Mass. Bay, II. 168, 176. Though Massachusetts protests against the slave trade began at an early date it is hardly possible to ascribe them to this episode, as do some writers. The burden of the objection to the importation of 1646 was not against the trade but against the violence by which the slaves had been acquired. Had they been purchased upon the coast it is quite possible that no questions would have been asked.

abouts, and justice hereof, desireing o'r honored Govrnr would please to put this order in execution.² . . .

The Secretary, Mr. Auditor Genr, Capt. Atherton, and Mr Sparhawk are appointed a committee to examine witnesses and draw up the case about Capt. Smith and Mr. Kezar kiling, stealing, and wronging of the negers, etc.

9. VOYAGE OF THE FORTUNE, 1649.¹

This is to certify all whom it may concerne that the Shipp called the Fortune whereof Thomas Willoughby is master together with her Cargo, belongeth to John Parrish of Charlestowne in New England merch't and is now bound for the coast of Ginney, thence to Barbados and so for New England. In testimony of the truth whereof the merch'ts under written have hereunto sett their hands this 6 (10) 1649.²

10. AARON WILLIAMS TO ———, 1650.¹

BOSTON, this 4th Jan. 1649 [1650].

Loveing friends and gent., Capt Henry Gay and Mr. Richard Spanwick: haveing recd. a letter of credit from you unto New England for the getting out of yo'r vessell for Guiney, and at my arrivall here Major Generall Gibbons have accepted it, per wch power ²The same order is found in volume III. of the Records (p. 84) with the addition, "By both howses." The troubles of this voyage furnished further matter for consideration by the General Court. When the Rainbow arrived at Barbados, the mate, Keyser, seized it and brought it home, leaving the master to return as best he could. Smith demanded recompence both for the loss on the goods which he might have sold in Barbados and for the expense he incurred in making his way from Barbados to Boston. The General Court after hearing the case decided, Oct. 18, 1645, that Keyser must pay damages for all the cargo but the negroes: "For the negroes, they being none of his but stolne, wee thinke meete to allow nothing." Ibid., III. 13, 46, 49, 58, II. 115, 129; Mass. Arch., LX. 144; Winthrop, Journal, II. 252-253.

[9] ¹*Aspinwall Notarial Records*, p. 411. Though it may not be possible to prove that Parrish (or Parris) had negroes as his object in sending a vessel to Guinea, it seems a reasonable assumption. He had been trading with the Dutch, who were carrying negroes to the West Indies, and his business relations with them may well have suggested to him the possible profit to be obtained by disposing of negroes in Barbados.

[10] ¹*Aspinwall Notarial Records*, p. 287. The item which precedes this is a list of charges against a vessel, the accounts of John Parris, Richard Spanwick, Capt. Henry Gay, and Capt. Aaron Williams, Drs. The credits allowed are 265 lbs. elephants' teeth and 21 oz. gold. This suggests a Guinea voyage (possibly that of the Fortune) which had not carried negroes. The inclusion of these items in a collection relating to the slave trade may be questioned, but two references in later letters show that Parris's ventures even if not primarily for slaves sometimes carried a few and it has been thought justifiable to print these as illustrating New England's early connection with the African coast. Gibbons, Williams, Spanwick, and Gay were apparently concerned in a number of joint ventures. Ibid., pp. 294, 309, 311.

BOSTON, September 6, 1675.

Acknowledges receipt of the King's commands subscribed by his Lordship and 16 of the Privy Council, dated 2nd December 1674, by the hand of Thomas Deane, agent to the Royal African Company, on 21st June 1675. Is ready to afford him due assistance according to the King's command and as their service may call for, which he thinks, will not be in haste. For 40 years there has not been any attempt on that navigation by any of our Massachusetts adventurers, only some from England or some Barbadoes merchants that have sent upon that voyage, and taken this way to repair their vessels.²

15. GOVERNOR BRADSTREET TO THE COMMITTEE OF TRADE AND PLANTATIONS, 1680.¹

BOSTON, May 18, 1680.

There hath been no Company of blacks or Slaves brought into the Country since the beginning of this plantation, for the space of Fifty yeares, onely one small Vessell about two yeares since after twenty months' voyage to Madagasc[r] brought hither betwixt Forty and fifty Negro's most women and Children Sold here for ten 15£ and 20£ [14] ¹ Cal. St. P. Col., 1675-1676, p. 274. Endorsed: "Recd. at Com'tee, 4 Feb., 1675-1676." John Leverett was governor of Massachusetts Bay 1673-1678. The Lord Privy Seal was the Earl of Anglesey.

² The "navigation" to which reference is here made is that to Africa. Though Governor Leverett could not support the letter of his statement that no such voyage had taken place for forty years (Joseph B. Felt records the death of an inhabitant of Salem on the Guinea coast in 1663, Annals of Salem, II. 235), he is quite right in thinking that New England mariners offered no competition to the Royal African Company. The number of negroes in Massachusetts was increasing, but most of the increase came from the West Indies. Not long before this, one small importation had gained considerable attention. Nicholas Leech and William Hobby came to Boston, some time before 1670, bringing with them three negro women, one negro man, and one Indian woman, purchased at St. Christopher about 1665. In 1670 Robert Granby sued them for the price of these negroes and for 16,000 lbs. of sugar. The inclusion of the sugar leaves doubt as to how much of the £600 sued for should be considered as the value of the negroes. Suffolk Court Files, no. 1016.

17. SIR HENRY MORGAN TO LORD SUNDERLAND, 1680.¹

PORT ROYAL, November 12, 1680.

. . . There lately arrived here a ketch empty, with only two men on board. Their statement on oath is that they were bound from New England to Guinea, where they loaded with negroes, elephants' teeth, and dust gold, and sailed for Nevis. On their way they called at an island called St. Martin's under the French Government, to wood and water, and were first invited into the harbour with much friendship, but afterwards suddenly seized and the ship unloaded. The master and his mate stayed there to obtain redress, but consented that these two men should adventure by stealth to this island, and when I have ascertained the whole story of the master, I shall transmit it to your Lordship. . . .

² There can be little question but that Boston at this time provided some market for negroes. A French refugee who visited the city in 1687, to gather information looking toward a settlement of fellow refugees, wrote: "You may also own Negroes and Negresses; there is not a House in Boston, however small may be its Means, that has not one or two. There are those that have five or six, and all make a good Living. . . . Negroes cost from twenty to forty Pistoles, according as they are skilful or robust; there is no Danger that they will leave you. . . . for the Moment one is missing from the Town, you have only to notify the Savages, who provided you promise them Something, and describe the Man to them, he is right soon found. But it happens rarely that they quit you, for they would know not where to go, there being few trodden Roads, and those which are trodden lead to English Towns or Villages, which, on your writing, will immediately send back your Men. There are Ship-Captains who might take them off; but that is open Larceny and would be rigorously punished." N. B. Shurtleff, Topographical and Historical Description of Boston (1871), I. 48.

Of these John Saffin was a successful Boston merchant, Boston deputy to the General Court, and Speaker of the colonial House of Representatives. Between 1654 and 1658 he had lived in Virginia (Colonial Society of Massachusetts, Transactions, I. 85-86 n.). Of Andrew Belcher, father of the more famous Jonathan, the Boston News Letter wrote at the time of his death (Nov. 4, 1717): "On Thursday Night, last, Died the Honourable Andrew Belcher, Esq.; One of His Majesty's Council for this Province, and a very great Merchant, in the 71st Year of his Age: He has left a considerable Estate; and that which is much better A Good Name: having Obtained and Preserved to the last, the Character of a Religious, Prudent, Honest Man, both in his many Publick Offices, and in his Private Affairs and Business, which for many Years Exceeded any one Man in the Province."

A short extract from Sewall's well-known pamphlet is sufficient to set forth his argument. The episode which called it forth is described at length by Abner C. Goodell in "John Saffin and his Slave Adam" (Col. Soc. Mass., Transactions, I. 84-112). Sewall writes in his Diary June 19, 1700: "Having been long and much dissatisfied with the Trade of fetching Negroes from Guinea; at last I had a strong Inclination to Write something about it; but it wore off. At last reading Bayne, Ephes. about servants, who mentions Blackamoors; I began to be uneasy that I had so long neglected doing any thing. When I was thus thinking, in came Bro'r Belknap to shew me a Petition he intended to present to the Genl. Court for the freeing a Negro and his wife, who were unjustly held in Bondage. And there is a Motion by a Boston Committee to get a Law that all Importers of Negroes shall pay 40 s per head, to discourage the bringing of them. And Mr. C. Mather resolves to publish a sheet to exhort Masters to labour their Conversion. Which makes me hope that I was call'd of God to Write this Apology for them; Let his Blessing accompany the same." ("Sewall Papers," Mass. Hist. Soc., Colls., fifth ser., VI. 16). Sewall's reading was Paul Baynes's Commentary on the First Chapter of the Ephesians (1618, Col. Soc. Mass., Transactions, I. 85 n.). In the archives of the Massachusetts Historical Society is a broadside, "The Selling of Joseph, a Memorial," Colophon: "Boston of the Massachusetts, Printed by Bartholomew Green and John Allen, June 24th, 1700." Articulate criticism of the trade in negroes may be said to have begun in Massachusetts with the publication of this pamphlet, which brought to Sewall support of which he later wrote: "Amidst the Frowns and hard Words I have met with for this undertaking, it is no small refreshment to me, that I have the Learned, Reverend, and Aged Mr. Higginson for my Abettor. By the interposition of this Brest-work, I hope to carry on and manage this enterprise with Safety and Success" (Apr. 13, 1706, Sewall to the Rev. John Higginson, Letter-Book of Samuel Sewall, I. 326, Mass. Hist. Soc., Colls., sixth ser., I.). Sewall's special reference here is to his return to the subject of the pamphlet written six years earlier. See post, no. 23 n.

Town and Town; Provincial, or National: Every War is upon one side Unjust. An Unlawful War can't make lawful Captives. And by Receiving, we are in danger to promote, and partake in their Barbarous Cruelties. I am sure, if some Gentlemen should go down to the Brewsters to take the Air, and Fish: And a stronger party from Hull should Surprise them, and Sell them for Slaves to a Ship outward bound: they would think themselves unjustly dealt with; both by Sellers and Buyers. And yet 'tis to be feared, we have no other kind of Title to our Nigers. Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do you even so to them: for this is the Law and the Prophets Matt. 7. 12.

21. SAFFIN'S "BRIEF AND CANDID ANSWER," 1700.¹

Obj. 3. The Africans have Wars one with another; our Ships bring lawful Captives taken in those Wars.

To which our Author answers Conjecturally and Doubtfully, for ought we know, that which may or may not be; which is insignificant and proves nothing. He also compares the Negroes Wars, one Nation with another, with the Wars between Joseph and his Brethern. But where doth he read of any such War? We read indeed of a Domestick Quarrel they had with him, they envyed and hated Joseph; but by what is Recorded, he was meerly passive and meek as a Lamb. This Gentleman farther adds, That there is not any War but is unjust on one side, etc. Be it so, what doth that signify: We read of lawful Captives taken in the Wars and lawful to be Bought and Sold without contracting the guilt of the Agressors; for which we have the example of Abraham before quoted; but if we must stay while both parties Warring are in the right, there would be no lawful Captives at all to be Brought; which seems to be ridiculous to imagine, and contrary to the tenour of Scripture, and all Humane Histories on that subject.

24. ACT FOR THE BETTER PREVENTING OF A SPURIOUS AND MIXT ISSUE, 1705.¹

And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid,

[Sect. 6.] That from and after the first day of May in the year one thousand seven hundred and six, every master of ship or vessel, merchant or other person, importing or bringing into this province any negro or negro's, male or female, of what age soever, shall enter their number, names and sex in the impost office; and the master shall insert the same in the manifest of his lading, and shall pay to the commissioner and receiver of the impost four pounds per head for every such negro, male or female; and as well the master, as the ship or vessel wherein they are brought, shall be security for payment of the said duty, and both or either of them shall stand charged, in the law, therefore to the commissioner, who may deny to grant a clearing for such ship or vessel until payment be made, or may recover the same of the master, (at the commissioner's election), by action of debt, bill, plaint or information, in any of her majestys' courts of record within this province.

[Sect. 7. A master failing to make entry shall forfeit £8 for each negro imported.]

[Sect. 8.] And if any negro, imported as aforesaid, for whom the duty is paid, shall be again exported within the space of twelve months, and be bona fide sold in any other plantation, upon due certificate thereof produced, under the hand and seal of the collector or naval officer, in such other plantation, the importer here shall be allowed to draw back the whole duty of four pounds by him paid, and order shall be given accordingly. And the like advantage of the drawback shall be allowed to the purchaser of any negro sold within this province, in case such negro happen to dye within the space of six weeks next after importation, or bringing into this province.²

[24] ¹ Acts and Resolves of Mass. Bay, I. 578-579 (1692-1714). The selectmen of Boston, on May 26, 1701, voted that their representatives are desired "To promote the Encouragement the bringing of white serv'ts, and to put a Period to negros being Slaves" ("Selectmen's Records, 1701-1715," Report of the Record Commissioners, 1884, p. 5). In 1709 an "Act to Encourage the Importation of White Servants" placed a duty on Indian slaves, as is here done upon negro importations, while it bestowed a bounty of 40 s. per head on the importation of white male servants. After 1712 the importation of Indian slaves was forbidden. Acts and Resolves, I. 634, 698.

² The underlying purpose or purposes of this act can be conjectural only. There may have been advocates of it whose repugnance to the slave trade led them to hope to abolish it by means of a duty; some may have desired to protect the incoming white population from slave labor, though at this period that does not seem a reasonable explanation; some may have desired, as the title suggests, to protect the colony from racial intermixture. No one can assert with confidence that this law checked or did not check the importation of negroes. It assuredly did not prevent it.

June 10, 1706.

Three Negro Men Slaves, and three Negro Women, to be Sold; Inquire of John Campbell Postmaster, and know further.

February 17, 1707.

Any Person or Persons that has a Negro Man Slave or Slaves to Sell, or to be Transported to Virginia² for a Market, may repair to John Campbell Post-master of Boston, where they may know further; Those to be Transported shall have their Passage free for their Labour thither.

26. THE IMPORTATION OF NEGROES INTO MASSACHUSETTS, 1706.¹

By last Years Bill of Mortality for the Town of Boston in Numb 100 News Letter,² we are furnished with a List of 44 Negroes dead last year, which being computed one with another at 30 l. per Head,³ amounts to the Sum of One Thousand three hundred and Twenty Pounds, of which we would make this Remark: That the Importing of Negroes into this or the Neighbouring Provinces is not so beneficial either to the Crown or Country, as White Servants would be.

For Negroes do not carry Arms to defend the Country as Whites do:

Negroes are generally Eye-Servants, great Thieves, much addicted to stealing, Lying, and Purloining.

They do not People our Country as Whites would do whereby we should be strengthened against an Enemy.

[25] ¹ News Letter. Notices similar to the first one appeared on Aug. 26 and Sept. 9. Writers eager to prove the unpopularity of the slave trade in Massachusetts have instanced the anonymity of such advertisements as these as showing the unwillingness of the vendor to make his name public. The use of the name of the postmaster or some other well-known official was equally common in the advertisements of houses or furniture and signified only that the advertiser, having no place of business, wished to provide a place generally accessible where the public might apply for information.

² The sale of New England negroes in Virginia was probably not uncommon, though the evidence for it is scant. Philip A. Bruce cites an instance in 1678: "Know all men by these presents that I John Endicott, Cooper, of Boston in New England, have sold unto Richard Medlicott, a Spanish Mulatto, by name Antonio, I having full power to sell for his life time, but at the request of William Taylor, I do sell him but for ten years from the day that he shall disembark for Virginia, the ten years to begin, and at the expiration of the said ten years, the said Mulatto to be a free man to go where-soever he pleases. I do acknowledge to have received full satisfaction of Medlicott." Economic History of Virginia in the Seventeenth Century, II. 81; William and Mary College Quarterly, VI. 117.

[26] ¹ News Letter, June 10, 1706.

² News Letter, Mar. 18, 1706.

³ The valuation placed upon negroes for tax purposes at this time was: "Each male negro above fourteen years of age, at twenty pounds value; each female negro of fourteen years of age and upwards, at fifteen pounds value: except said trustees, by reason of their age or infirmity, shall see just cause to make any abatement of said value, which they are hereby allowed." Acts and Resolves, I. 615.

By Encouraging the importing of White Men Servants, allowing somewhat to the importer, most Husbandmen in the Country might be furnished with Servants for 8, 9, or 10 l. a Head, who are not able to Launch out 40 or 50 l. for a Negro the now common Price.

A Man then might buy a White Man Servant we suppose for 10 l. to Serve 4 years, and Boys for the same price to Serve 6, 8 or 10 years: If a White Servant die, the Loss exceeds not 10 l. but if a Negro dies 'tis a very great Loss to the Husbandman. Three years Interest of the price of the Negro, will near upon if not altogether purchase a White Man Servant.

If Necessity call for it, that the Husbandman must fit out a man against the Enemy; if he has a Negro he cannot send him, but if he has a White Servant, 'twill answer the end, and perhaps save his Son at home.

Were Merchants and Masters Encouraged as already said to bring in Men Servants, there needed not be such complaint against Superiors Impressing our Children to the War, there would then be Men enough to be had without Impressing.

The bringing in of such servants would much enrich this Province, because Husbandmen would not only be able far better to manure what Lands are already under Improvement, but would also improve a great deal more that now lyes waste under Woods, and enable this Province to set about raising of Naval Stores, which would be greatly advantagious to the Crown of England, and this Province. . . .

Suppose the Government here should allow Forty Shillings per head for five years, to such as should Import every of those years 100 White Men Servants, and each to serve 4 Years, the cost would be but 200 l. a year, and a 1000 for the five years: the first 100 servants being free the 4th year, they serve the 5th for Wages, and the 6th there is 100 that goes out into the Woods, and settles a 100 Families to strengthen and Baracade us from the Indians, and so a 100 Families more every year successively.

And here you see that in one year the Town of Boston has lost 1320 l. by 44 Negroes, which is also a Loss to this Country in general, and for a less Loss, (if it may improperly be so called) for a 1000 l. the Country may have 500 Men in 5 years time for the 44 Negroes dead in one year.

A certain person within these 6 years had two Negroes dead computed both at 60 l. which would have procured him six white Servants at 10 l. per head to have Served 24 years, at 4 years a piece, without running such a great risque, and the Whites would have strengthened the Country, that Negroes do not. 'Twould do wel[1] that none of those Servants be liable to be Impressed during their Service of Agreement at their first Landing.

That such Servants being Sold or Transported out of this Province during the time of their Service, the person that buys them be liable to pay 3 l. into the Treasury.

27. PETITION OF DAVID JEFFRIES, 1707.¹

June 12, 1707.

To his Excellency Joseph Dudley Esqr. Capt. General and Governour in Chief and to the Hono'ble the Council and House of Representatives of the Province of the Massachusetts Bay now in General Court assembled June 12th 1707.

The Petition of David Jeffries of Boston Merch't, Humbly Sheweth,

That your Petitioner had a negro woman named Bilhah and four Small children one that Sucked at her Breast consign'd to him in the sloop Rebecca John Pitts Ma'r from Jamaica who arrived here in October last. And your Petitioner was forced to pay four pounds a head for their Importation which your petitioner thinks very hard in regard some these sd Children were not worth the Money and therefore

Yo'r Petitioner humbly prays the favour of this great and General Assembly that so much thereof may be remitted him as Shall seem Equitable and reasonable.²

28. GOVERNOR DUDLEY TO THE BOARD OF TRADE, 1708.¹

BOSTON NEW ENGLAND Octob'r 1st 1708.

My Lords, Your Lordships Commands of the fifteenth of April last past, referring to the Affrican trade for Negros, carryed on by the Affrican Company, and other Seperate Traders to Her Ma'tys Province of the Massachusetts, came to my hand from Barbados on [27] ¹ Acts and Resolves, Mass. Bay, vol. VIII., App., vol. III., pp. 770-771, from Council Records, VIII. 335, and Mass. Arch., IX. 157.

² "In the House of Representatives, June 13: 1707, Read and Referrd to next Session, Novr. 11: 1707. Read and Committed." Endorsed: "David Jeffries. Petition, June 13: 1707. Refer'd to next Sessions." On Nov. 15 the House granted the petition by remitting the duty on the youngest child. This received the assent of the governor on Nov. 25:

"Order for abating Four Pounds of the Duty due by David Jeffries of Boston, on a Negress and Four Children consigned to him in the sloop Rebecca, from Jamaica, John Pitts, Master.

"Upon reading the petition of David Jeffries, merchant, praying an abatement of the duty for four small negroe children imported,

"Ordered That the Sum of Four Pounds be abated to the Petitioner, in regard one of the Said negroes, was a Sucking child." Acts and Resolves, vol. VIII., App., vol. III., p. 248.

[28] ¹ C. O. 5: 865, no. 8; Cal. St. P. Col., 1708-1709, p. 110.

the Twenty eighth of Septemb'r past. And I have used all possible application to make my letters ready from this Province, as I hope to do from the Province of New Hampshire, and this is the first conveyance since.²

And that I might perfectly Satisfy your Lordships what Negro's have been Imported into this Province from the Twenty fourth of June, 1698 to the 25th of Decemb'r, 1707, I have caused the Officers of the Revenue to Attend me, and have had Conference with the principal Merchants and Planters referring to the Number and prices of Negro's brought in.

And I find by the best Computation that I can make (which cannot faile me to any Degree) That there are in Boston Negro Servants to the Numb'r of 400 above halfe of them born here.....400
In One hundred Towns and Villages in this Province.....150
Total.....550

That in the sd Nine years and halfe last past of the above said Number Arrived Two hundred.

That none of these were brought in by any Ships of the Affrican Company, nor Separate Traders directly from any part of Affrica, but from the West Indies, That is to Say, Barbados, Jamaïca, the Leward Islands, etc. Nor can I learn from any Merchants or Planters here, that before this time, The Affrican Company had any Ships or Factory here; But Some Traders on their own Accompts, a long time Since, have been upon the Coast of Guinean and brought Slaves, the last was Thomas Windsor in the year 1700, who brought in Twenty five negroes. Copy of the Dutys paid to the Affrican Company is Inclosed. Since which here is an Officer, Mr. Benja. Alford, Impowrd to receive the Ten per Cent. As by Act of Parliam't given for the Affrican Company,³ whose Commission is Dated 25th Feby. 1700/1.

Every Body is sensible of the Absolute necessity and great benefit of that trade for the West Indies, but it is not so Serviceable for these Northern Plantations.

Because the Winter halfe year Admits of little Service from them, but Demands a great deal of Clotheing, which is very dear in these Provinces.

² On Oct. 10 Governor Dudley wrote that there were seventy negro servants in New Hampshire, about twenty of whom had been brought in during the past nine years (ibid., p. 111). On Jan. 26, 1709, Eleazar Kimberly reported to the Board of Trade that after strictest inquiry, he found that no negroes had been imported into Connecticut by the Royal African Company or the separate traders; that perhaps half a dozen a year might come from the West Indies. In 1710 Deputy Governor Saltonstall made a similar report. Ibid., 1708-1709, p. 209; 1710-1711, p. 123.

³ Act of 1698. See this work, I. 421-429.

The Negroes so brought in from the West Indies, are Usually the worst Servants they have, which are therefore Sent to be Solde. The prizes are Usually between Fifteen and Twenty five pounds per head.

These Plantations being upon the Continent Admit of their running from their Masters, whereas upon the Islands they are soon Recovered.

Upon all which Accounts they have been found so little profitable and the Planters here do so much prefer White Servants from Great Britain, Ireland, Jersey, and Guernsey, who are Serviceable in the War presently, and after become Planters, that they have Set, by a Law three years Since, Four pounds per head upon all Blacks imported, to Encourage the bringing in of White Servants.

This my Lords is the past and present State of that Trade in this province.⁴

November 10, 1712.

A Young negro girl born in Barbadoes that speaks good English, to be sold by Mr. Grove Hirst,² merchant, and to be seen at his house in Trea-mont Street, Boston.

April 13, 1713.³

A very likely Negro Man, aged about 18 or 20 years, lately arrived from Jamaica, to be Sold by Capt. Gilbert Bant and to be seen at his House in Middle-Street, Boston.

August 3, 1713.

Three Negro Men and two Women to be Sold and seen at the House of Mr. Josiah Franklin at the Sign of the blue Ball in Union-Street Boston.⁴

¹ To this letter the Board of Trade replied on Jan. 12, 1709: "We take notice that you say the Assembly of the Massachusetts Bay have, by an Act passed about three years ago, laid a duty of £4 per head on negroes, you ought to have acquainted us with the year the said Act was passed in, and have given us the title of the Act, for we can find none such among those we have; and therefore we expect that you transmit it to us by the first opportunity. One of the reasons you give why negroes are not desired in New England, is because it being on the Continent the negroes have thereby an opportunity of running away; the same reason will hold in Carolina, Virginia, and Maryland, which are also upon the Continent, where negroes are so valuable." C. O. 5: 913, pp. 44-46.

² Grove Hirst was Samuel Sewall's son-in-law.

⁴ The Blue Ball, at the corner of Hanover and Union streets, was purchased by Josiah Franklin in 1712 and remained in the possession of the family 41 years. See Shurtleff, Description of Boston (pp. 626-634), for a history of the house; Winsor, Memorial History of Boston (II. 273), for a picture of the sign which gave it its name.

37. ACCOUNTS OF HUGH HALL, 1728-1733.¹

Sam'l Seddon of Hampton, 1 Neg'e boy Imported 2d Sept'r 1727 per Capta. George Lee.

²The section omitted records the sale of the general merchandise and the rum on board. The description of the cargo of lumber carried by the Katherine to the Leeward Islands, amounting to £466 17 2³/₄, and a list of the expenses of her "outset," amounting to £331 5 4¹/₂, are in no sense peculiar to a slaver. The vessel was apparently reloaded in Boston and sent to Africa for a second slave cargo. The accounts are in such confusion that it is well-nigh impossible to separate those items which relate to the voyage under Captain Plaisted from those which belong to the voyage under Captain Atkinson. The instructions sent to Captain Atkinson (post, no. 39) supply the names of the owners, among whom was the captain himself. In items of Aug. 19, 1729, he is charged "To 1/4 of £500 Starling Insuerance on the Sloop Catharine from Boston To Guiney and Back againe and Reinsurance from Antiago When have the acc'tt from Loyde and Rusk Shall Charge yr. 1/4 parte." One fourth of "Nete Prosede of acc'tt Sales of Negroes Rum etc. from antigo" is entered as £516 15³/₄. The sale of this cargo offers more evidence on the price of slaves in Massachusetts than the editor has elsewhere come upon. Massachusetts currency at this time was valued at 17 s. per oz. of silver, though it was 8 s. per oz. in 1712. W. B. Weeden, Economic and Social History of New England, II. 473.

A few scattered examples of earlier and later prices may furnish some basis for comparisons, though most of these are for seasoned or country-born rather than new negroes. The inventory of the estate of James Lloyd, a Boston merchant, in 1693, valued a negro man at £30 (Papers of the Lloyd Family, 1927, p. 121). In 1707, for purposes of taxation, negro men over fourteen were valued at £20, women at £15 (Acts and Resolves, Mass. Bay, II. 615). The News Letter of Mar. 10, 1718, gave the average valuation of the negroes in the colony as £30. In 1727 a new negro man was valued at £20 (Mass. Arch., IX, 202 a). By 1776 a negro man who had cost £60 was offered for sale at £50, a woman whose cost was £35 could be obtained for £30. Medford Historical Register, III. 120.

[37] ¹The items which follow are those relating to negroes, selected from an account book of Hugh Hall which was presented to the Massachusetts Historical Society by Mrs. Mary Baurly Jackson Rathbone, great-great-granddaughter of Hugh Hall. The small volume is labelled "Small Accounts not posted," and the entries are frequently so abbreviated as to be unintelligible. For 1727 we also have several items relating to Hall's business: "Several very likely Young Negro's of each Sex (just Arrived) to be Sold at Six or Twelve Months Credit, on good security, by Mr. Hugh Hall Merchant,

38. ACT FOR LAYING A DUTY ON NEGROES IMPORTED, 1728.¹

An Act more effectually to secure the duty on the Importation of Negroes.

Whereas the payment of the duty of four pounds per head laid upon negros imported into this province, is often evaded by bringing them in, in a clandestine manner; for remedy whereof,

Be it enacted by His Excellency the Governour, Council and Representatives in General Court assembled, and by the authority of the same, [Sect. 1.] That henceforth the master of any ship or vessel whatsoever that shall bring into this province any negro or negros shall be obliged to give in upon oath a true account or list of the negros he has on board or brought with him, on penalty of one hundred pounds for failure therein or for giving a false list.

And whereas negros are frequently landed in the neighbouring provinces or colonies, and brought thence into this province in order to save the duty,

[Sect. 2.] Be it enacted by the authority aforesaid, That whoever shall purchase or bring into any town of this province as aforesaid, any negro or negros for which the duty has not been already paid, shall be obliged, within fourteen days after the said negros being so brought in, to make an entry with the clerks of the town where the said negro shall be brought, and to pay the duty of four pounds per head to the said clerk, to be by him transmitted to the commissioner of impost in Boston, on penalty of eight pounds to be paid for each negro not entred as is hereby required, to be recovered by action, bill, plaint or information in any of his majestie's courts of record, by the said town clerks respectively; one-half thereof to his majesty for the use of the province, one-fourth to the town clerk who shall sue for and recover the same, and one-fourth to the poor of the town where the forfeiture is made: provided, the prosecution be within twelve months after the bringing in of such negro or negros.

[Sect. 3.] And be it further enacted, That from and after the publication of this act, the duty paid for any negros who shall dye within the space of twelve months from the time of their importation, shall be drawn back by the owner of such negros; any law, usage or custom to the contrary notwithstanding.

[Sect. 4.] This act to continue in force for the space of seven years, and no longer.²

BOSTON Decem'r 28th 1728.²

² This measure was re-enacted in January, 1739, the only important change being the substitution of a period of ten for seven years as the term for which it was to be effective. Acts and Resolves, II, 981-982.

[39] ¹ Library of Congress, Vernon-Wager MSS., no. 3. On Oct. 7, 1729, agents of the Royal African Company at Cape Coast Castle wrote to the company that the chief mate and three men of the Guinea packet, Captain Martin, had been "panyard" at St. Andrews River, "on Acco't of a Caboshier panyard by a Boston Ship, Capt. Atkinson" (T 70: 7, p. 159). On Oct. 22, 1730, the agents reverted to the subject, writing, "The natives have contracted an aversion to the Sort of Vessels called Sloops since their ill treatment from Capt. Atkinson from Boston" (ibid., p. 168). Another version of the story of Captain Atkinson's misdemeanors reported that he had stolen many negroes on the coast and sold them. The treasure on board had tempted his crew, who rebelled and threw him into the sea. Some of the negroes escaped and reported the mutiny, whereupon the crew were seized and were in gaol in Antigua (Weekly Journal and British Gazetteer, Dec. 13, 1729). Several other English papers also contained the story. This is in all probability the same William Atkinson who in 1726 was captured by pirates while a passenger on a North Carolina sloop, turned the tables on the pirates, and aided in bringing them into Boston as prisoners. For an account of his adventure see News Letter, July 7, 1726.

² For the years 1728 and 1729 the notices not already quoted are:

- 1728, Sept. 12, Two new negroes
- Sept. 19, Three likely negroes
- Sept. 30, Two negroes, Jonathan Sewall
- Oct. 21, A parcel of likely Negroes just imported, Jacob Royall
- Nov. 14, Two young negroes, William Green
- 1729, June 19, A Parcel of young negroes, Edward Thomas
- July 3, Four negro boys, Christo. Ceely
- July 3, A Parcel of young negroes, Benony Waterman
- July 17, Several young negro women, Clark and Kilby
- Sept. 4, A parcel of young negro boys and girls, Gerrish and Harris
- Oct. 23, Four negro men and a negro girl

The customs entries from the News Letter are:

1729, July 19, entered in from Guinea, Peter Jump

During the year 1729 Captain Cutler, probably the commander of the Jolly Batchelor a few years later, cleared for Africa. Captain Jump, on the schooner William, must have returned to Africa not long after this, for early in 1731 the English papers reported his death on the coast, where he had been surprised by negroes and all his crew but three killed. Read's Weekly Journal and British Gazetteer, Jan. 28, 1731.

³ The instructions are signed: "Your Loving Friends Jona. Belcher, Peter Pusulton, Willm. Foy, Eben'r Hough, Wm. Bant, Andw. Janvill." Jonathan Belcher, a prosperous Boston merchant, was a member of the council from 1718 to 1729 and governor of Massachusetts from 1730 to 1741.

[40] ¹ Jour. House of Representatives, Mass., 1732-1734 (Mass. Hist. Soc., 1930), p. 23; News Letter, June 15, 1732. There seems to be no evidence that Massachusetts contemplated changing her duty act at this time. These instructions, the result of Virginia legislation, were sent to all colonial governors, irrespective of the conditions in the particular colonies.

[41] ¹ Weekly Rehearsal, Apr. 17, May 1, 8, 1732. The notices for 1730 are: May 7, "Likely negroes from 12 to 20 Years," Jacob Royall, Dorchester; June 4, "Parcel of choice negroes . . . many of which have had the small pox, Inquire of Brattle Oliver." The one outward entry for Africa is John Payne for Guinea, Oct. 8, 1730.

For 1731: Aug. 5, "Choice parcel of negro boys and girls," Merret and Fletcher; Sept. 23, "Sundry likely negroes," James Allen. The customs entries are, May 6, Robert Ball entered from Africa; Sept. 16, Robert Ball, outward bound.

The News Letter, Mar. 4, 1731, states that between December, 1729, and Dec. 4, 1730, two vessels cleared for Guinea. The Portsmouth, N. H., clearings for Dec. 6, 1731, included Samuel Moore for Africa (Weekly Rehearsal, Dec. 6, 1731). In the year 1731 appeared Paul Dudley's Essay on the Merchandize of Slaves and Souls of Men, which was advertised in the News Letter for Aug. 26, 1731, with the advertisement of a "likely Negro Lad" not far from it.

³ News Letter, Dec. 28, 1732, Jan. 4, 11, 1733; also in Weekly Rehearsal, Jan. 18, 1733. The following are the customs items for 1732:

May 25, cleared for Africa, Thomas Dickinson; Oct. 5, outward bound for Africa, Robert Ball; Oct. 19, outward bound for Africa, Richard Cole; Nov. 22, outward bound for Africa, Samuel Moor.

For the years following 1731 the naval officers lists from Virginia (post, vol. IV.) add to the names of New England vessels carrying negroes.

[42] ¹ Weekly Rehearsal, Aug. 6, 20, 27, Sept. 3, 1733. The only customs entries pertaining to Africa are those of John Avis and Thomas Kennelly, one entering in from Cape Verde, the other clearing for Cape Verde. News Letter, Sept. 6, Nov. 1, 1733.

June 16, 1737.⁵

To be Sold A very likely lusty Negro Man about Twenty-two Years of Age, lately imported from Guinea. Inquire of the Printer hereof.

⁴ Governor Belcher had a short time before recommended Capt. Daniel Goffe to Sir Charles Wager for marshal of the admiralty. Mass. Hist. Soc., Colls., sixth ser., VI. 517.

⁵ News Letter, June 16, 23, 30, 1737. The customs entries are:

1735,	May 22,	entered in from Africa, Wyer
	Oct. 16,	cleared out for Cape Verde, Silk
	Dec. 11,	outward bound for Cape Verde, Williams
	“ 25,	cleared out for Africa, Mousell
1736,	Jan. 29,	cleared for Cape Verde Islands, Robertson
	Aug. 5,	entered in from Cape Verde, Mousell
	Nov. 25,	cleared out for Africa, Ball
	Dec. 1,	entered in from Africa, Thurston

	May 26,	entered in from Africa, Ball
	Sept. 1,	entered in from Gambia, Robertson
	Oct. 20,	cleared out for Cape Verde, Mousell

Though most of the information to be gleaned from these records pertains to Boston, it is of course true that a few negroes were coming in to other ports of Massachusetts. Such items as the following suggest a procedure probably not uncommon, "I wrote to Mr. Salmon of Barbadoes to send me a negro." From the diary of Matthias Plant, June 22, 1735, Joshua Coffin, History of Newbury, app. H, p. 338.

43. VOTE OF THE BOSTON SELECTMEN, 1733.¹

At a Meeting of the Selectmen, July 11, 1733. Capt. John Sheffield master of the Brig. Orange Tree, being Stopt at the Castle, informs that he has been 30 Days from Spikes's² in Barbadoes with his Brig. with Rum, molasses, Six Bags of Cotton and Twenty Negroes, and that on the 12 may, he was himself at Bridge Town in Barbadoes, where the Small pox was then very rife, but that he took in his Loading at Spikes's and that all the time of his Loading and in his passage, he has had none of his people ailing or complaining, and desires he may have Liberty w'th his Brig. to come up into the Harbour.

Voted, That Messrs. Armitage, Jeffries, Winslow and Saltonstal be desired, with a Justice to go on board the Brig. and to examine into the affair.

Accordingly the above Committee with Justice Sewall went down, and Examin'd the Master and Mate upon Oath, and apprehending no Danger to the Town, of the Small pox, from the Said Brig. etc. A Certificate was Granted.

44. EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM CAPTAIN MOORE, 1733.¹

[SANTIAGO, July 20, 1733.]

On the 17th of June last, as we were coming down the River Gambia, at Twelve o'Clock in the Night, the Natives fired at us, upon which began a very smart Engagement, which lasted till day light: Mr. Lowder was most of the Time in the Cabbin loading small Arms, some of our People not having Discretion to do it themselves, till by an unhappy contrary Wind, the River narrow, and the Vessel not answering her Helm, we fell along the Shore, the Natives rus'd on in great Numbers in order to board us, but were so received that they thought proper to Retreat: In which Conflict Mr. Lowder came upon Deck, and (being in a Consternation) was shot thro' the Body; He went immediately down, and had all imaginable Care taken of him: He being in the Height of Action, his Wound was with great Difficulty stop'd bleeding. He liv'd Twenty four Hours, sensible of his approaching Dissolution, and spent his little Time in making his eternal Peace.

45. SAMUEL WALDO TO CAPTAIN SAMUEL RHODES, 1734.¹

BOSTON, March 12th 1734.

Sir, With my Sloop Affrica which you command I desire you'll make all possible dispatch for Barbadoes where I have recomended You to my Friend Mr. James Pemberton who will I hope be capable of Serving you in disposall of Some considerable part of your Cargo² att a good rate and giveing You as much Cash for the same as the amount or near it. Bill Lading you have with You also Invoices Inclosed that of the Cargo to be disposed of in the West Indies am's to £2763. 17. 8 the other which contains some part of the Cargo fitt for Guinea am's to £1462.4.11¼ in Sale of the whole I doubt not You'll do your endeavours to Serve my Intrest and be the Success what it may I shall acquiesce. What of your Cargo You may not have Opportunity of selling att Barbadoes att a good rate (so for Cash), You may probably dispose of att some one or more of the Leward Islands takeing either money or Rum in Pay which done you are to proceed for the Island of St. Eustatius there applying to Mr. Fredrick Gysen to whom I now write to take your directions in Investing the whole Value of what Effects he may have of mine in his hands to be shipt on board your Sloop or the Scooner Gambia Capt. Masters for the Coast of Guinea or part in one and part the other. what Effects of mine that you left last Voyage in said Island, You'll also with full Produce of the West Indies Cargo You have now aboard Invest in a Cargo of Rum for Guinea, I compute my Effects will be near extensive enough to load your Sloop with Rum, also to purchase a good Quantity of Gunpowder and many other Goods that You may think as suitable and reasonable as you can propose to gett on the Coast. You have herewith Copys of Mem'o, given me att London of what Goods are suitable for the Coast, and If You think your Cargo will admitt thereof without prejudice to the Voyage, buy an assortment;

² The cargo consisted of fish, candles, wine, shoes, desks, silversmiths' wares, pork, oil, staves, bricks, lead, brass, steel, iron, pewter, beads, cowries, muskets, and dry-goods. Suffolk Court Files, no. 46995.

as Trade Guns and Musketts are a very necessary part of your Cargo I would advise You to omitt no Opportunity of purchasing till you have obtained what You think a Sufficient Quantity. As soon as You arrive att the Island of St. Eustatius I am of Opinion it will be best to dispatch the Scooner Gambia with about 4000 Gall. of Rum for the Cape de Verde, with orders att the Isles of May with all possible Expedition to take aboard a Loading of Salt, and to engage att St. Jago such a Quantity of the Cape de Verd Cloths as may be necessary to assort You, as there may probably be some hazard in taking them aboard it may be best to have that omitted, till your Arrival there when the Scooner may take them: and You after There is no hazard may take such part as you think proper out of her, as You'll also do by the Salt or any other Goods She carrys She being intirely under your Care and Direction and if the Master Capt. Moses Masters does not answer your Expectations you may either remove him, or sell the Vessell; if he behaves well he may greatly advantage our Voyage which I hope he will do. Copy of his Orders signed by him You have herewith, also Invoice of his Guinea Cargo from here [?] and Bill Lading which You'll take due care of. From the Cape de Verde You'll with all possible Expedition go for Guinea, there Trade in such manner and Places as You think best. You will be a Judge of what may be most for my Intrist, so I shall intirely confide that You'll act accordingly in the Purchase of Negros, Gold Dust or any other the produce of that Country with which You'll as soon as possible make your Return to me either by way of the West Indies or Virginia where You'll sell Your Slaves either for Gold Silver or good Bills of Exch'e, in which You'll be very carefull not only to have a good and substantiall Drawer but a Prospect of due Payment which without much Difficulty You may be Informed in, and when there appears any hazard You had best avoid the Bills unless some good Man will endorse the same, all which Bills You are to remitt by different Conveyances to London making One half the same payable to Messrs. Parkin, Sibwell [?] and Co., the other half to Messrs. Bullock and Moller. what Gold You may gett from your Slaves, and Dust (or on the Coast) it may be best to bring with You. The Scooner Gambia I hope You'll be able to sell on the Coast, and bring the full Produce of her and Cargo with You, but if You can't sell her, and she takes from the Coast a Cargo of Slaves it will be best the same be consigned to Mr. Pemberton att Barbadoes if a Markett there, and at the other Islands to whom you think best able to serve me, but if You are obliged to take a large Number of Boys and Girls and you find the time of Year for coming hither agreeable You may send him directly home to me but it would be more Pleasure to me to have her well sold, You'll give the Master a Caution to take care of her Bottom, and You'll also consider the hazard of sending up the Rivers that unless You think the Master will be prudent it may be best to avoid any hazard that way, tho the Prospect of Advantage thereby may be considerable. I am told You have frequent Opportunity on the Coast of Selling Slaves for a good Price on [illegible] Bills to Liverpool, and often to Lisbon. if any thing the former way offers You'll be under Difficulty to know the Circumstance of the [illegible] drawer and so You'll take all needfull Caution to prevent Loss and from the letters I apprehend if any of the English Factory are concerned in the Vessell You'll be safe, and the Recomendations of any of them in favour of any Portuguese Gentleman may be satisfactory, If by anything unseen our Cargo should not be so extensive in Value as to afford a Prospect of Gain, If by tarrying and tradeing some reasonable time upon the Coast You find You can make the Voyage better You'll do it, but If you meet a quick Markett for your Rum and Your Voyage will answer, the sooner You gett of the Coast the better, as your Voyage will be the shorter and very probably your Compy and Slaves in better health, and all our Risques will be the less, and as we may very likely try the Voyage again. should You be unsorted and any small part of your Cargo remain that is not perishable You'll be able to Judge whether it may be best to wait the Sale thereof or bring it back. As You'll want from the West Indies an additional small number of Men I hope You'll be able to engage Mullins and Crew, who You may give some small Encouragement that may tempt him. Capt. Masters Mate I promised a hogshead of Fish so lett him have No. 44 which You'll compute the cost of, and take of him what it amounts to more than his Months pay which Masters ought to Pay You if he paid not his Mate here.³ . . .

Herewith you have abstracts from Mr. Wilk's Letters of the Insurance I ordered which it will be for my Intrest and Safety that You observe and I do recommend your proceedings to be accordingly Else we not only lose the Premium, but in case of Accident my whole Intrest. You must send me Bills Lading for yours and Masters whole Cargo from St. Eustatius by different Conveyances that I may be able to prove my Intrest, and write me if you have Opportunity from Guinea of what occurs respecting Sale of the Cargo there, and what of each sort You may be able to purchase, and may actually have purchased, and as Opportunity direct may not offer You can make use of any to any part of the West Indies under Cover to any of the Acquaintances there. If Your coming from off the Coast with Slaves will bring it towards Winter or late in the Fall before You can reach Virginia it will be best to go for the West Indies where by trying more or less the Islands You may probably do better than by selling att Virginia, and if You have any number of very Young Slaves which do not render as well att the Places where You sell Your large or Well grown ones it may be adviceable to bring them here with You especially if theyll not render equall to £65 or £75 this money each. If in your Return hither from Virginia You think well of taking a moderate Loading of wheat You'll do it as from the West Indies You'll endeavour the bringing a Cargo of Molasses, or anything else You may think will do better than Pistolls or Bills Excg. . . . I have att Barbados some knowledge of Mr. Peters Oliver also Mr. Clarke who You may apply to in case Mr. Pemberton will not serve You on as good Terms as You can reasonably desire. You'll be able to judge there whatever may most conduce to my Intrest, and as I can't expect your waiting there the Sale of your Goods You'll leave such things there as you think will best answer taking as much Cash with you on Account thereof as You can persuade them to advance, in which [illegible] will be room for the Person You engage with to liberate and thereby he may recomend himself to a Com's on the Slaves in case of your sitting down att that Island for a Markett; I can't avoid earnestly recomending to you the utmost dispatch from the West Indies that You may be with your Rum on the Coast before the Rd. Islanders or any others from these parts by which You'll doubtless reap great advantage. For your own Safety as well as mine You'll have the needfull Guard over your Slaves, and putt not too much confidence in the Women nor Children least they happen to be Instrumental to your being surprised which may be fatall. I have wrote Mr. Kirby if he has not shipped (nor engaged freight for) the Effects he has of mine I shall esteem of his Paying em to You, so If you think you shall need em You may order accordingly, or If You do not want it and Everard makes his Return from St. Kitts hither he may take 'em but probably you may there meet some Musketts and India Goods which may be agreeable for Your Voyage, in which case You'll take 'em with You. . . . Capt. Masters has with him 10 bbs. of Carroline Pork which he signed no Bill Lading for, he had that Quantity for Hubbard, the like from Holmes. What Beeffe or Pork You may think necessary for your Compa You'll take the best Opportunity for the buying of in the West Indies. . . . You must att Barbadoes esteem your Wines part of your Guinea Cargo which its my Intention they shall be unless You meet an agreeable sale for them this I mention to obviate any Pretence they may make to oblige You in said Island to Pay a Duty on them there or else where unless you sell them. there is one Mr. Nath'l Haggett in sd Island who has a good Understanding with the Governour to whom I Pray You'll tender my Service, as he may be capable of doing You Service in Return, on Acct. of Your Wine.⁴ . . .

June 11, 1737.

A Memorial of the Commissioners of a Special Court of Admiralty, now sitting in Boston, for the trial of Piracies, Felonies and Robberies upon the Sea, shewing that on the 7th Instant, Samuel Tyley Gent. Register of said Court, exhibited certain Articles of Felony and Murder against Samuel Rhodes of Boston, Mariner, charging him with killing and murdering a Negro Man called Frederick's Slave, on the 2d of January 1735, upon the high Seas and within the Jurisdiction of the Admiralty of Great Britain, viz. on board the sloop Africa, whereof the said Rhodes was then Commander, lying at Anchor in the River Gambia on the Coast of Guinea near unto Fort St. James, and about sixteen Leagues up the River, that the said Rhodes on his Arraignment pleaded the Matters alledged are not in the Jurisdiction of the Court, and of that prayed Judgment; and the Matter being attended with great and uncommon Difficulties, praying the Court to give such Directions to the Agent upon the State of the Case, to be transmitted to him, as may be deemed necessary for clearing up the Difficulties as attend the present and may attend future Cases of this Nature. This is no inconsiderable sum to come out of our cargoe nor is there any possibility for you to think I did not well improve the other part, when you consider and you ought to Do me that Justice That I purchased for you more than two hundred Slaves, more than one tonn of wax and half a tonn of Ivory, which had it pleased God, would have made me more in the gs: sales than twenty thousand Pound at a very moderate computation. . . . you have a number of times objected to me my Long Stay on the Coast, I was forct to stay trading from October until June (about Eight months) theres no man alive but must have done the same at that time nor can your frowns (which I deserve not) ever make me say that I am herein taxable, I beg your patience Sir, while I recount to you the detention of other rum men at the same time, two Snows of Road Island one of 140 the other of 90 Slaves the first stayed to Dispose of their Rum all most eight months, the other between 6 and 7 months, a sloop of Boston another of Road island each about 45 slaves was on the coast one five months the other six, two sloops of Barbad one 90, the other about 35 Slaves one stayed nine months, the other 7 months and at this rate might every rum vessel be counted one small one excepted who had a lucky dispatch, you object that I had some dry cargoe and ought not to have stayed at Gambia which is no rum country. I have to say that had I known the country then as I know it now I would not have continued so long there but my account of the Leward coast being full of Rum did not deceive me and my design herein was nothing, more than advanceing your Interist, as to our haveing Dry cargoe enough to shorten our tarrying on the Coast there's nothing in it at all, both the Barbadians were sorted Dry yet could they not draw their rum sooner, ther's one objection of yours which I am confident you dont want answerd namely that what time the Plux came among our slaves I should havd destroyed one part of our Cargoe (to say the rum) to save the other this you have told me a number of times yet I dont think you were serious in it, You impute the Mortallity among the Slaves to our Long tarrying, I have no notion of thats makeing it absolutely necessary and expected, because there is so many instances the contrary, you very often seem to Repine and say that such a mortallity never was before, if it was the greatest that ever was this ought by no means to make you angry with me, but though I can't se[e] what good they can do us we are not without company. Isaac Holmes from South Carolina will tell you that two angolamen this summer lost so many slaves that the Remaining would not pay mens wages, there is now at newport not long arrived a small Guineaman who buried all the Negroes except a few which had As good have gone with the rest being of no value² . . . the negroes was dyeing and meagre. this may be evinced from the Death of 16 of them presently after sageran bought them this was all most half of them.³ I must have either have sold them all together (some just Dead excepted) and take the Coacoa⁴ the price 66 ps as I remember, or else have half of them turnd aside and have sold at a prime price, and it was my opinion that the Former would be our best acc't . . . when Sageran first saw and markt the negroes, we did not talk about the Cocoa we were at first wide in the price which coming to Sageran's Partner one John De Bergist sayd they could not pay all cash and mentiond the Cocoa which I afterwards to my sorrow took, but Sir had I then insisted upon all money I must have kept the negroes. no person in Eustatius but these men would have give anything for them but Rum Sugar or some thing Contra: Bando, a few only Excepted, I should have had the charge of them and they would have Died on our hands, had I known the Cocoa was not merchantable I would not have taken it but would have sold the negroes as I could which how many and at what price would have gone off may be estimated from Sagerans acco't who sold as many of them again for Rum molasses etc, which he wanted for the Road island men as he cou'd and Lost (which I can now Prove) Eight Hundred Ps. . . .

December 7, 1737.

Petition of Isaac Royal late of the Island of Antigua, now of Charlestown in the County of Middlesex, Esq.; shewing that he has removed with his Family from Antigua to this Province, and brought with him considerable of his Substance, and among other Things and Chattels, a Parcel of Negros designed for his own Use in the Management of his particular Affairs, and not any of them for Merchandize, praying he may not be obliged to pay the Duty of Impost, ² On July 20, 1738, the sheriff was ordered to seize Rhodes's goods to the value of £5000. The charge against him was that he had stowed the rum casks carelessly in sand ballast and had failed to inspect them. The jury found for the defendant and directed Waldo to pay the costs. Suffolk Files, nos. 46995, 47713, 48317. See post, no. 49.

[48] ¹ Mass. Arch., House Journal, p. 70. The petition was considered Dec. 21, 1737, but was not granted (ibid., p. 100). On at least two occasions, while Royall was a resident of Antigua, Governor Belcher wrote to him for a negro boy (Mass. Hist. Soc., Colls., sixth ser., VI. 255, "Belcher Papers"). After his removal to Massachusetts he occasionally sold slaves. In 1743 two are advertised about which "information may be obtained from Jacob Royal of Boston or Isaac Royal of Charlestown." News Letter. Feb. 24, 1743.

July 10, 1739.

John Robinson, Master of the Schooner Mermaid from the Coast of Guinea, being sent for appear'd, and was Sworn by Mr. Justice Lyman and being Examin'd, on oath, Declares, as follows, That he came from the River Gambo, Two and Forty Days ago, with Eleven White men on board, and Fifty Slaves; That they had the Small Pox, on board, five Months ago, for about Ten Weeks, one Hundred and Forty leagues up the River Gambo; that he buried Two Whites and One Black; that afterwards he burnt Brimstone in the Vessel and Cleansed her with all possible care Vizt. in February last, Since which no Person has been Sick of that Distemper, but that they have had the Measles, and Flux on board, that the Flux continues among the Slaves, but the measles is not now among them, That they have lost Fifteen Slaves of the Flux, in said River and in their Passage and that they buried two in Sight of Cape Cod, Yesterday: That 3 Whites and 4 Blacks have had the Small Pox, that all the White men on board have had the Small Pox; That the negroes are all young under Twenty years of age; That he took out all his Water Casks and Cleansed them, but the Ballast had not been Shifted.

⁴The News Letter, Oct. 1, 1741, suggests one source of New England slaves: "Last Tuesday Night several Black Slaves, which were lately taken by Capt. Rouse in the Spanish Prize and brought in here, and who have been disposed of to several Persons in Town, being join'd and assisted by several other Black Servants, made their escape out of the Harbour in a Long-Boat which they stole." One young man, just imported, was offered for sale in 1742; in 1743 Charles Apthorp offered for sale a parcel of both sexes, and "a parcel of likely negroes just imported from Guinea, and to be sold on the Post Boy," was advertised (News Letter, Feb. 4, 1742, Aug. 8, 1743; Boston Evening Post, May 3, 10, 1742). The customs items in the Evening Post are:

- 1741, Feb. 12, cleared for Africa, Dickinson
- June 29, outward bound for Africa, Stocker
- Nov. 23, outward bound for Africa, Cutler
- 1742, July 29, cleared for Africa, Beer (or Beard)
- Oct. 11, cleared for Africa, Ball
- Nov. 25, outward bound for Africa, Freeman
- 1743, July 11, entered in from Africa, Beer
- Aug. 4, entered in from Africa, Ball
- Dec. 5, cleared for Africa, Ball
- Dec. 5, cleared for Africa, Beer

The melancholy end of Beer's trading is recounted in the News Letter, May 7, 1747: "By a Letter from the Coast of Guiney, via Barbadoes, dated the 14th of January last, we have Advice, that Capt. Bear in a Vessel belonging to Rhode Island, being off Cape Coast Castle with a Number of Negro Slaves, and a considerable Quantity of Gold Dust on board; the said Slaves found an Opportunity to rise against the Master and Men, and kill'd the said Master and all the Crew, except the two Masters [Mates], who by jumping over board and swimming ashore sav'd their lives. What became of the Vessel and Negroes afterwards the Letter does not mention."

The Select men having Considered the above Declaration, are of Opinion it is Convenient the said Vessell be visited, and therefore Voted, That Capt. Armitage, Capt. Forsyth, Caleb Lyman Esqr. and Mr. Clarke be and are hereby desired to take a Doctor, with them, and to go on board said Schooner, Now in the Road, and to make a Strict Enquiry into the Circumstances of said Vessel, and Slaves, and that they Report thereon as soon as may be.

The Gentlemen above named, accompanied by Doctor Davis and Doctor Rand having Visited the said Schooner, They Report as follows, Vizt,

That they found about Twelve of the Slaves on board Sick of the Fever and Flux, and that there is a very dangerous Stench on board, and 'tis their Opinion, It is necessary for the safety of the Town, that the said Vessell be not permitted to come to the Wharf, for the present, but that she be sent down to Rainsford Island, or some other Convenient place, in order for the Airing and Cleansing the vessell, and Shifting her Ballast, and for airing and taking Care of the Slaves, and that they put on Shore all their Casks.

Accordingly a Number of His Majesties Justices being present, a Warrant was drawn for carrying the said Schooner down to Rainsfords Island and there to remain until further order from lawful Authority; Signed by the Hon. William Dudley and Anthony Stoddard Esqrs. Samuel Sewall, Samuel Adams, Caleb Lyman and Daniel HENCHMAN Esqrs. with the Select men.

52. CASE OF THE JOLLY BATCHELOR, 1743.¹

The Libel.

George Birchhall, Charles Wickham *et al.*² vs. Jolly Batchelor.
Colony of Rhode Island etc.

[52] ¹The manuscripts relating to this case are in a bundle of admiralty papers in the archives of Rhode Island, but since the owners of the Jolly Batchelor, Peter Faneuil, John Jones, and Captain Cutler, all lived in Boston, it has seemed better to place the case with the Massachusetts material. After a catastrophe on the coast George Birchhall had rescued the Jolly Batchelor, placed Captain Wickham in command, and sent her to New England. An announcement of Captain Wickham's arrival at Newport was published in the Evening Post, Aug. 15, 1743: "We have now certain Advice, that Capt. John Cutler, late Commander of a Snow belonging to this Town, who sail'd for Guinea some time ago. as he was trading in the River Sierra Leona, was murdered, with 2 or 3 of his Men, by some Portuguese who are settled on that River. They rifled the Vessel, and took away his Slaves, etc. but by the Assistance of an honest English Man who is settled in those Parts, some of the Slaves were recovered, and the Vessel again fitted for the Sea, and last Friday she was brought into Newport by Capt. Wickham of that Place, who had himself been taken by a Spanish Privateer on the Coast of Guinea some Time before." Shortly after the arrival of the vessel Birchhall brought suit against the representatives of the owners for salvage, and libelled the snow. W. B. Weeden, in Economic and Social History of New England (II. 467-472) and in "Early African Slave Trade in New England" (Proceedings of the American Antiquarian Society, new ser., V. 124-128), gives a brief account of the fate of this venture.

²In a letter to Godfrey Malbone, written Sept. 12, 1735, Charles Wickham is referred to as a Newport captain (Commerce of Rhode Island, I. 44). He, with Alexander Mackensie, William Wyat, and Silvester Sweet, had shipped from Newport on

To the Hon'ble John Gidley Esq. Judge of the Court of Vice Admiralty for the Colony aforesaid³

The Libel and Appeal of George Burchil now residing at the Banana Islands⁴ on the Coast of Guinea in Affrica Mercht against the Snow Jolly Batchelor and her Cargoe, whereof John Cutler Deceased was late Master, And your Appellants come into this Hon'ble Court and do Libel Appeal and Say that on or about the Ninth Day of March A D 1742 That at the River Saralone⁵ on the Coast of Guinea the said Vessel was Seized apprehended and Taken and the Master thereof with Two of the Marriners were barbarously Murdered by the Natives on Shore, and who at the Time aforesaid took Possession of said Vessel and her Rigging and Sails afterwards took and Carried on Shore together with her Slaves then on board and then did leave and abandon sd Vessel and afterwards to wit on the ninth Day of April following the Appellants with much Labour Hazard and Care retook said Vessel and procured for her partly by purchasing of the Commanders of Some English Vessels then on the Coast Suitable and Necessary Sail and Rigging for her and also procured from the Natives Twenty Slaves and some of those stores that they Carried from the Vessel aforesaid and Appointed Charles Wickham Master thereof who hath now brought her into this Port. Wherefore as this a Matter of Salvage and therefore Cognizable in this Court the Appellants prays the Advisemon of this Court on the Premises and as he apprehends he hath a right to Salvage for sd Vessel and Cargoe for his great Pains Expences and Labour sending her into this Port aforesaid and that the usual process of the Court may be Issued forth against said Vessel and Cargoe and the Owners thereof Notified to Answer this Libel and abide your Honours Decree thereon and they will in Duty bound ever pray etc.

the Eagle, Sept. 8, 1742. The Eagle was seized by a Spanish privateer, hence Wickham and his three men were on the African coast without a vessel and thus were free to bring the Jolly Batchelor home. Wickham's sailors believed that enough of the cargo of the Eagle had been preserved to yield the amount of their wages and appealed for them to Judge Gidley's (Gridley?) court. The record does not show the outcome. Weeden, "Early African Slave Trade," Am. Antiq. Soc., Procs., new ser., V. 126 n.

⁴ The Banana Islands, near the mouth of the Sierra Leone River, became of increasing importance to the slave traffic as the century advanced. John Clarkson, in his account of his mission to America in 1791 (New York Hist. Soc., MS., I. 121), described them as the "Paradise of Africa."

Deposition of Alexander McKenzie.

Alexander McKenzie aged about 35 years, testifieth and Saith that at farron Bay on Serrelone River on the Coast of Guinea abt the 8th of March last past, he went on board the Snow, called the Jolly Batchelor John Cutler Commr with a design to get a pasage with sd Cutler (the vessel he was before in being lately taken by the Spain-yards) the sd Cutler accordingly shipt him, and in two or three Days after the sd Cutler being then in good health, Sent on shore the Yawl to look for the Long boat, (in wch he the Deponent went with two Blacks) wch had been mising a day or two before, in looking for wch he was sent out one Day about 9 a Clock in the morning and returnd the next Day about 7 a Clock with the Long boat with the two negroes before mentioned. when he came on board two Portuguese Negroes laid hold on him the Deponent and presented two Cockt pistoles at his breast, and forced him on board the Snow where were about twenty other negroes who were Confederates in the murder of Cap Cutler, who's body half an hour after he saw dead upon the half deck and some of the negroes tying stones about his hands and then they threw him over. In an hour or two after this all the slaves in the vessel to the number of about Seventy or Eighty were Caried on shore in the Long boat and Yawl, while some others were plundering the sd Vessel, and in the Evening they caried the deponent with some others on shore at atown called Senr Lewis's[?] town and kept them there till the next day, when the deponent one Rich'd Smith and Jno Kendall had leave to go from them and they by the direction of two negroes in three Days and a half arrived at a place called the Ban-nanoes where they inform'd Cap Burchall and Cap Wickham that Cutler was murdered With two of his men and his vessel taken. In seven or Eight Days after the sd Burchall fixed out three shallop and a smaller boat with abt thirty men black and white with fire arms within three or four days, after they arrived at Sarelone river where they found the vessel Lying like a wreck without any running riging or Sails to the Yard. when they came on Board there was no person there, then Mr. Burchall and Capt Wickham borrowed a Shallops Main Sail and fore Sail and brought the Vessel to White Mans Bay about four Miles distant and then said Burchall and Wickham procured the Forestay Sail Main Sail and Fore Sail and Maintop Sail, with about Thirty five of the Slaves that were carried out of the Vessel, and the Foretopsail Cut to pieces, and proceeded with the Ves-sel to the Island of Bananos and their bought Rigging etc. and re-fitted the Vessel. But wanting provision and some other Necessaries were obliged to keep sd Vessel thereabouts Six Weeks and upon

Arival of Capt Pitman in a Ship from Bristol were Supplied and then they returned to Serralone River to Water the Vessel, and Capt. Wickham Sailed from [illegible] with Twenty Slaves on the Owners account, for Newport in Rhode Island where We arrived the Eleventh Day of this Instant August and further saith not.⁷

*Deposition of Charles Wickham.*⁸

Charles Wickham of Newport, Mariner On Oath in Open Court Declared, That he was at the Bannanoes on the 12th or 13th Day of March last at the House of Mr. George Burchall, and saw an English Ensign hoisted over upon the Main and as soon as he saw it Capt. Burchall dispatched a Canoe over which returned in about two Hours and brought three White Men Over with him, who travelled by Land from Serralone who told us they belonged to the Snow Jolly Batchelor and declared that Capt. John Cutler the Master of sd Snow had been about four Days before cut off by about twenty Portugese and Negroes who came aboard sd Snow armd and killed the sd Cutler and two of his Men and carried away the running Rigging and Sails of sd Snow together with the Slaves and Cargo and forced all the Seamen and Mariners on Shoar at Senr Lewis' Town in Sierra Leon River. About the 28th of the same Month of March Capt. George Burchall fitted out from the Bonanas three Shallops and a Yawl maned with about thirty men blacks and Whites well armed in order to go to the sd River and retake sd Snow. About eight and forty Hours after we arrived at Whiteman's Bay in Sierra Leon River where Capt Burchell and the Deponent immediately went on shoar to John Cumberbur's Town and upon advising with him went in our Shallops and Yawl to a Portugese negro named Joseph Lopez and desired him to Assist us that we might recover sd Snow. He promisd he would Whereupon we returned to Whiteman's Bay where we expected him the next Day there. We waited about Eight Days without hearing anything of sd Lopez and then one of his Men came with Orders to Senr Lewis to deliver up the Vessel and Slaves And the same Day sd Lewis sent Word to Us that we might go up to Farrons Bay and take the Vessel. The next Day we went in two of our Shallops and Yawl only the other Shallop being gone to get Provision and took possession of the Snow, Likewise her Main sail and Foresail were delivered at the same Time, Top sails and Fore-staysail We purchased of the Natives and a small Quantity of the running Rigging and after we had got her a small matter fitted we carried her down to the Bannanoes and after we had been there some Time Came Capt Pitman from Bristol, who supplied us with Cordage sails and provisions to fit her for the Sea. There was no English Vessel at the River Sierolone at the Time the sd Snow was taken and for some Time afterwards. I received at several Times Thirty four Slaves of Senr. Lewis, two of which Died and twelve were Sold for the Necessary Stores and provisions for the Vessel, to wit Eight to Capt. Burchall and four to Capt. Pitman and the remaining Twenty the Deponent [hath ?] now brought into this port in sd Snow. And the Deponent further Saith That One of the Mariners belonging to sd Snow told the Deponent that the Slaves on Board sd Snow were Numbered the Night before sd Capt. Cutler was Murdered and that there were Seventy five of them then on Board and further the Deponent saith that after they had taken possession of sd Snow they went and lay at Whiteman's Bay about Ten Days in Order to recover the Slaves of sd Vessel but could not get any more than the above Thirty four, and one that was sent down to sd Snow at the Bannanoes who afterwards run away.

⁹The value of the bar in terms of English money differed widely from time to time. One writer familiar with African commerce in 1690 gave its value as about 6 s.; another as 6 s. 8 d.; Park, at the end of the eighteenth century, thought it worth about 2 s. Weeden gives 12 bars as the equivalent of £1 sterling, a low valuation for any period. It should be understood that bars were more frequently the money of account than an actual medium of exchange.

Letter of George Birchall.

Gentlemen, The Mellancholly Subject on wch I now write you, I do not Doubt but you have heard ere this comes to your Hands, as Capt. Noris Sail'd for your parts While I was Endeavouring to recover your Sneau, and so Miss'd the Oppertunity of Acquainting you, that on the 12th of March I hade Advice that there was an English flagg Hoisted on the Main land Opposit to the Island on wch we Reside, and as it was a thing Uncommon, I Ordered one of my Cannoes to goe see for what it was Hoisted, and my Canoe soon return'd wth the Deceas'd Captn. Cuttler's Boy, and some of the Remains of his people, who Inform'd me that Captn. Cuttler wth two others of his People were Murder'd in the River Sierralione, by some Portugees that live there and his Ship cutt off and Plundered, and as I found it was by a Particular Sett of People, and the Natives had not any Hand in it, I did not Doubt but I should recover her, I therefore tooke three Shalops and a Yall wth me well mann'd and sail'd for the River and at my Arrivall, I found her Laying like a wreck, Strip'd of her Sails, Riggin, Provisions, Stores and in Short every thing but a few old Rum Hoggsheads fill'd wth fresh Water. when I found in what Condition she was, I did not think it worth while to meddle wth her, Unless I could have the Slaves Deliver'd up, wch they Inform'd me was Eighty four when She was Cutt off, (I therefore haveing an Acquaintance wth the Great King of this Countrey, and Mr. Josepf Lopez who abhor'd the Action and of Great Powre in the Country,) Apply'd my self to these two, first Setting forth the Baseness of what had been committed, and of what Determt [detriment] it was Likely to be to the River, If they did not give the Owners Satisfaction for what they hade Suffer'd. they both Promis'd to doe all in there Power and they Immediately Sent to the Vilain, to Deliver every thing up to me, but the Slaves and every thing else belonging to her, was so Distributed about it was Imposable to Collect them; her Riggen, Stores and Sail's was Cutt, and Devided therefore it was not to be got, but by Implying one of the Natives to give the others Incouragement to bring them in, which was done, I then got the Sneau and what Sailes etc. I could with thirty four Slaves and being at much Expencess, and Provisions not to be got in the River, I sail'd with her for the Bannanoes, and there to remain Untill I could Provide Provisions and Necessarys for the Voage Home, and for want of Provisions was Oblig'd to land the Slaves, and put them into my Plantacion that they might not Starve before I could make Provision for them, I Ordered all my Boats out in Pursute of Provisions, with the best of Goods to Purchase it, but it came but Slowly in, there being a Scarcity at this Juncture all over the Country. the first Assistance we met with was from Captn. Pitman who Arrived here from Bristoll, and as I traded with him for neare a Thousand pounds Sterling, it Engaged him to Spare me what Sailes were Necessary and wanting, likeways Provisions, as youll see by his bill of Parcels Inclos'd, this Enableing her to goe off the Coast, after she was Wooded and Water'd. I Proceeded again with her to Sierralione in Order to Compleat it, and at the same time to try what more of the Slaves I could recover, A list of which I here send you, I have had much more trouble in this affair than I at first could have Expected; besides neglecting my own Business and factorys, which I have sufferd much by, but doe not repine at it as I did it to serve my deceased friend, his Friends and family, whose virtues and honour, the Unfortunate Deceasd used often to mention to me, with so much Satisfaction, that we used often to wish our Selves with you, to whome he had Promisd to interduce me, in my way to old England, this makes me Mellancholly therefore I must Conclude this Subject, and add that as Captn Wickam hade the Misfortune to Loose his Ship by a Spanish Privateer, he with his mates and People came to the Bannanoes in Order to gett a Passage off the Coast, and as this affair Happn'd, While he was with me, I haveing known him before, allthough he had an Oppertunity of getting off some time before with Captn. Jno. Noris, who likeways Promis'd to give him his Passage, and his Slaves with him freight free, therefore I thought it was but Justuce to give him the freight as he was disapointed to serve the Sneau, of which he has hade a Share of the Trouble, and on these terms and Obligeing the Sneau, and Effects to Pay him and his people Wages as pr the Incloasd List, I Prevail'd on him to Stay, and take Charge of the Ship to bring her home to you, as after the Expencc was Paid as pr the Incloased Acct. their was but few Slaves Remaining, as youll See by the Incloas'd Bill of Ladeing, and not any Papers to be found where you hade Order'd her, I thought to send her to you Directly wch was far the best way; I have Endeavour'd much but to no Purpose to gett his Papers and Books of Accts, they Allways Denying that they knew any thing of them Although John Kendell has Seen them in their Hands, hade I Recover'd his Books it would have Enabl'd me to have Settled all Accts, to your Satisfactions, as allso to my own, for Captn. Cuttler dealt wth Severall People as well as with my self, where he sometimes left goods, without being Paid Directly for them and at other times recd. Slaves, and not haveing right Sortments was Left Untill he hade. Just before the Unhappy Mellancholly time, he Left in my Hands a Large quantity of Flints desireing me to give them storehouse room, and when he return'd from Sierralione, If we could agree for them I was to have them, we Disagreed about the Price, he wanting Seven and Sixpence pr Thousand, and I Insisting on Paying him five Shilings only, as they were a Large Parcell, but what quantity Exactly I cannot tell as we Did not Agree, he only tooke the weight of them and kept it to him Self, but there Appears to be about Fourty Thousand. I hade allso two Hoggsheds of Rum Containing two Hundred and Sixteen Gallons, and a Small Parcell of Loose Beads of no value, when he was wth me Last. I hade made a Memmorandum, in my Accts. wth him wherein he hade Overcharged me in Somethings, which he Promisd to Draw out fair again and en[illegible] the overcharge to my Satisfaction, but never return'd the Acct. Again to me, therefore without the Books Its Impossable to be at any Certainty, but as these Rogues are Roman-catholicks, and their is a Priest here, I hope to Prevail wth him to Procure them, if they are not destroy'd, then I shall be able to Collect in his Debts, of which I know there is some, but must have a powre before I can make any Demand; I recd. for Capt. Cuttler Just before he Died three Slaves, and a Tooth weight fifty two pounds, from Mr. Henry Tucker, who is yet indebted to him, but cannot tell how much. this Person as soon as he heard news of what hade Happend at Sierralione, made a Demand of the Slaves and Tooth, but I let him know though I hade no Power to Demand the Debts, I hade Power to keep what was put in my hands on the Owners Acct. therefore gave him a Receipt, and shipd the Tooth, and two of the Slaves on board the Sneau, the other Slave Died at my House. I allso have sent a Boy Slave which Captn. Cuttler Left in my Hands verey Ill, but since well recoverd, allso rec'd one Woman sent by Mr. Lopez to me, he finding She was the Sneaus Property, there is likeways here a verey Poor man, who Assisted Captn. Cuttler in tradeing and Borrow'd his Long boat to Trade in, and when he return'd from his Voage, Put his Effects into Captn. Cuttlers Hands in hopes of Buying his Long boat, and he being well Acquainted in this Country, went to gett Rice for the Sneau, but before he returned the Ship was Cutt off, and the Poor man has little or any thing left, his Debt is something above three Hundred barrs, and I belive is Justly due to him, as he sent his Acct. To Capt. Jno Noris to Settle it for him before the Sneau was cutt off, therefore the Man ought to be Paid out of what may hereafter be recover'd, there is four Slaves due for the Long boat, but will not be paid Untill the Person has Some Satisfaction for his goods, which was Carried off by Captn. Edward Tarleton, and what Contributed much towards the Captns Unhappy End, as the whole relation will be too tedious to mention here, I refer it to the Captn and People that are now in the Sneau, I have put the Gold Watch which Belongs to the Deceased, into Captn. Wickhams hands, to Deliver to Mrs. Furnel the Deceas'd Sister,¹¹ who I have heard him say so much of that hade he lived, I belive he had Bestow'd it that way, therefore I hope it will come safe to her.

Gentlemen I think I have nothing further to add then that I have Impowerd Capt. Wickam, to Receve whatsoever may become Due to me, on Acct. of my Recovering the Sneau, and Slaves, which I hope at Least will be a Third of all, and when that is done I do Ashure you I shall be a Looser. I hope you give him immediat Satisfaction, that everything will be done Agreeable to him. Gentlemen, I am very Sorrow that after recovering those Slaves, I have to Acquaint you that ten of your Slaves Run away wth one of Island Cannoes five of which I have gott back again, I lost 23 at the Same time and Capt. Wickam three, I have only got one of my own as yet, but am in Pursute of them, hope to recover them, and be Ashured If I can gett yours allso, you Shall have them paying the Charges, my best Endeavours shall not be wanting to Serve you as far as Lays in my power. when Captn. Wickam Acquaints you wth the Custome of this Country, wch he is now Acquainted with, and you are Strangers to, youll find how much I have allready favour'd you, one Instance is this at the Time I Advanc'd my money for your Use, I have charged my Self Sixty Bars pr Head for the Slaves which I am paid in, and at the same time the greatest Price we Livers in this Country, we pay but fourty five, an other, I have not made a Charge for any Provisions which was Expended at my House, for the Up of between thirty and fourty of your Slaves, Dureing the time of their Stay, which was more than Six Weeks. Sir I have sent by Captn. Wickam, a bundle of Papers which is all that was put into my hands by John Kendell, I hope it will come safe to your hands.

Gentlemen the reason of my sending the Ship to Road Island, is because all the people and officers are Inhabitance of that place, and hade she been orderd Elsewhere I am not certain whither they would have proceeded in her as they Started severall Difficulties about it. Gentlemen I hope this will meet wth a favourable recption as I have done it purely with Intention to Serve you.

¹³ Peter Faneuil died Mar. 3, 1743. In the absence of a will his brother Benjamin became administrator of his estate (Brown, Faneuil Hall, pp. 16-17, 102). No evidence has come to light to give positive support to Brown's statement that Peter Faneuil, "like his contemporaries, was often found engaged in the trade in human beings," though it is probable that he frequently received a slave or two from the West Indies, along with other commodities. The present seems to have been his only venture to Africa. In 1737 he wrote to Thomas Kilby, "Captain sends you for his private account two young negro men, wch, if you can get a good price for, pray dispose of them" (ibid., p. 45). His letter to Capt. Peter Bulkley (or Buckley), commander of the Byam, ordering a young lad for a house boy is well known. It is to be found in Mass. Hist. Soc., Procs., VII. 418 (August, 1864); L. M. Sargent, Dealings with the Dead (Boston, 1856), II. 532; Brown, Faneuil Hall, pp. 32-33; Winsor, Memorial History of Boston, II. 262.

[55] ¹These items appear in the News Letters of the dates given and in subsequent issues. In May, Arnold Welles advertised "A few very likely negroes chiefly boys to be sold at a reasonable rate". Evening Post, May 14, 1759.

²"Gwinn for Africa" was "outward bound" Jan. 9, and "enter'd in from Africa" Aug. 6 (News Letter, Jan. 10, Aug. 7, 1760). Gwinn (or Gwyn), Ball, Innis, and Day all cleared for Africa in the closing months of 1760 (ibid., Sept. 25, Oct. 16, Nov. 6, 13, Dec. 11, 1760). The News Letter of Sept. 24, 1761, writes of Captain Day, of the sloop Thomas: "By Capt. Day who arriv'd since our last from the Coast of Africa, with a Number of fine Negroes: whilst they were on the Coast, they got open the Hatches and rose upon the Crew, but were soon overcome and subdued, their Ring leader being Shot and kill'd, and others wounded."

³"Gwin from Africa" appears in the custom-house record as printed in the News Letter, July 16, 1761. He was reported "in a Schooner of Boston", on the coast of Africa, in February of that year; by Aug. 12 he was once more outward bound for Africa (ibid., June 4, Aug. 13, Sept. 4, 1761). Other inward entries from Africa during the year were Carpenter, June 24, Ball, July 29; outward to Africa were Binney, May 13, and the sloop Thomas, Gresham Spear, Oct. 22. Ibid., May 14, June 25, July 30, Oct. 22, 1761.

14th January, 1759.

Sir, The Snow Caesar is fully loaded and equipped for sea. My orders are to you, that you embrace the first favorable opportunity of wind and weather, and proceed to the coast of Africa; touching first, if you think proper, at Senegal, where, if you find encouragement, you may part with such part of your cargo as you can sell to your liking, and then proceed down the coast to such ports or places as you judge best to dispose of your cargo to advantage, so as to purchase a cargo of two hundred slaves,² with which you are to proceed to South Carolina, unless a peace should happen, or a good

[56] ¹ Charles Brooks, History of the Town of Medford (1886), p. 437. The advertisements and customs records are far from satisfactory and one can be certain that they fail to disclose the total amount of trade between Massachusetts and the African coast. For example, Captain Lindsay, whose voyages to Guinea in the '50's have been described by G. C. Mason ("The African Slave Trade in Colonial Times", American Historical Record, I. 315 ff.), had Boston as well as Rhode Island owners (News Letter, Aug. 31, 1758). Captain Mersyer, arriving in New York on May 12, 1754, reported the arrival of a snow from Boston just before he sailed from the Gambia River. Ibid., May 23, 1754.

² The return cargo was 153 adult slaves and two children. Brooks, Medford, p. 437.

opportunity of coming off with a man-of-war, or some vessel of force, for the West Indies. In that case, I would recommend the Island of St. Christopher's, being handy to St. Eustatia's, for the sale of your slaves. Buy no girls, and few women; but buy prime boys and young men. As you have had often the care of slaves, so I think it needless to say much upon that head in regard to keeping them well secured and a constant watch over them.

Your cargo is good, and well assorted. Your rum,³ I make no doubt, will hold out more than it was taken in for; having proved some to hold out more than the gauge. As you have guns and men, I doubt not you'll make a good use of them if required. Bring some of the slaves this way if not too late.

I am, with wishing you health, success, and happiness, your assured friend and owner,

58. NEWS ITEMS RELATING TO SLAVE TRADE, 1763-1765.¹

BOSTON, July 7 [1763].²

We hear from Hartford in Connecticut, that one Day last Week, the Mate of a Vessel lately arrived there from the Coast of Africa, being delirious, took a Negro Boy into his Arms, and jump'd into the River, and drowned both himself and the Boy.

NEWPORT, June 25 [1764].³

Capt. Wanton, who left the Coast in February last, informs us, that Mr. Ebenezer Washbourn, of that Place, who was Mate of the Brig ———, Capt. Rhodes⁴ of Piscataqua, lost his life at Cape Malpas, on the Coast of Africa, the latter End of December or Beginning of January last. He being acquainted with the Coast, and desirous of going ashore to trade, took the Long Boat, with several men, and a Quantity of Goods, for that Purpose: but the Negroes having been injured by a Vessel just before, detained these People, being the first they met with, as Objects of their resentment: But Capt. Rhodes having a Number of them in his Possession, they agreed to exchange, and accordingly delivered up all the Men except the Mate, who on a Dispute arising concerning the Goods, which the

² The custom-house items as they appeared in the Gazette and News Letter for Jan. 20, Mar. 10, June 9, Aug. 12, Dec. 1, 9, 1763, are:

J. B. Felt records that a Salem vessel sailed for Guinea on May 21, 1763 (Annals of Salem, II. 261). Captain Binney arrived in Boston on July 14, having disposed of a cargo of slaves in Martinique (Gazette and News Letter, July 14, 1763). One additional item of this year suggests a well-developed trade. On Nov. 17, 1763, Thomas Hancock and Company advertised for sale the Adventure, Boston built, 250 tons, with dimensions suitable for the Guinea trade. Ibid., Nov. 17, 1763.

³ News Letter, July 5, 1764.

⁴ This may have been the Captain Rhodes who entered out from Boston to Guinea Oct. 24, 1750. News Letter, Oct. 25, 1750.

Negroes had applied to their own Use, jumped overboard, and was instantly followed by one of the Blacks, who swam under him, and by some Stabs in his Body, killed him.

BOSTON, September 17 [1764].⁵

By a Vessel from the West-Indies we learn, That Capt. Joseph Miller, in a Sloop from New London, died on the Coast of Africa, and all his Hands, except two, and that the Negroes soon after availing themselves of that Opportunity, came off from the Shore and killed the two surviving Men, and then took Possession of, and pillaged the Vessel.

BOSTON, March 7 [1765].⁶

Last week was committed to Goal in this Town, William Preest,⁷ who, as he says, was Chief Mate of the Brigantine Hope, Thomas Goold, Master, belonging to Messers Forseys, which Brig sailed from New London about a Year ago, bound to the Coast of Guinea; that at Senegal in the Night time the Crew of the said Vessel murdered their Captain, and threw him overboard, and one Taggart, who had been appointed chief Mate in the Room of Preest, occasioned by a Dispute between him and the Captain, took Command of the Brig and went to St. Thomas's; that in their Passage the Negroes rose on them and killed one or two of the Crew; and they killed seven or eight of the Slaves; that they went from St. Thomas's to Porto Rico, where the Spaniards seized the Vessel and Slaves, upon which the Crew ran away with the Boat at St. Domingo, and then separated themselves. It is said Preest confesses that he assisted in throwing the Captain over-board after he was dead, but that one Huntington, second Mate, and one Miller, a Foremast Man, knocked the said Capt. Goold in the Head, while he lay asleep, which was on the 15th of May last.⁸

⁵ For this year the Gazette and News Letter, Jan. 5, Feb. 23, Sept. 20, and Oct. 25, gives:

Probably in August, 1764, the schooner Mary of Marblehead, Richard Boyd, master, arrived at Jamaica with 78 Gambia slaves. Georgia Gazette, Jan. 17, 1765.

⁷ On Mar. 28 the Gazette and News Letter recorded the death of William Preest while in gaol.

July 11, 1765.⁹

We hear that Capt. Spear of this Place is arrived at South-Carolina, from the Coast of Africa: He has been from hence near 18 Months, and buried his Mate, Boy, and every Hand on the Coast: he lost a great Number of Slaves, while he waited for the Arrival of some Man of War to supply him with Hands to bring off his Vessel.

August 22, [1765].¹⁰

Capt. Grounsell,¹¹ who is arrived at Marblehead from the West-Indies, informs that he spoke with Capt. Ball, of this Port, 13 Days ago, bound for South Carolina from the Coast of Guinea, having on board about 200 Slaves.

59. EFFORT TO CHECK THE IMPORTATION OF SLAVES, 1767.¹

. . . About the time of the Stamp Act, what before were only slight scruples in the minds of conscientious persons became serious doubts, and, with a considerable number, ripened into a firm persua-

¹⁰ Gazette and News Letter, Aug. 22, 1765. The significant customs entries, from the issues of June 20, July 4, 23, and Oct. 3, are:

June 19, outward bound for Africa, Gwinn

July 3, cleared out for Newfoundland and Africa, Kent

July 23, entered out for Africa, M'Carty

Oct. 2, outward bound for " , Godfrey

Thomas Irving's "Account of Vessels entering inward and clearing outward," Oct. 10, 1765, to Oct. 10, 1766, gives 3 as clearing from Boston to Africa in this time. Mass. Hist. Soc.

Report reached Boston in August, 1766, that Captain McCarthy had arrived in Barbados; by October Gwinn was back in Boston, from St. Croix (Gazette and News Letter, Aug. 14, Oct. 23). Dole cleared for Africa Dec. 11. One further item testifies to the importance of the African trade in Boston at this time: "To Be Sold By James Griffin, Sundry Goods Imported for the Coast of Guinea, viz. French, Danish, and Trading Small-Arms, Nicanees, Tapsails, Chelloes, Guinea Knives, Iron properly drawn for the Coast, Britannia's. Also, Hemp, Duck, Ozenbrigs, Cordage, Anchors, etc." Ibid., Feb. 21, 1765.

¹¹ "Grounsell", in the dialect of Marblehead, meant Crowninshield.

[59] ¹ Mass. Hist. Soc., Colls., fifth ser., III. 385. Samuel Dexter to Jeremy Belknap, Feb. 23, 1795. In 1795 Judge Tucker of Virginia sent to the Rev. Jeremy Belknap of Boston "Queries respecting Slavery and Emancipation of Negroes in Massachusetts". Copies of these questions Dr. Belknap distributed to about forty gentlemen of prominence who might be able to give information on the subjects. The questions themselves, with Belknap's reply compiled from the correspondence which he had elicited, are to be found in Mass. Hist. Soc., Colls., first ser., IV. 191-211; the letters received by Dr. Belknap, ibid., fifth ser., III. 382-416. The letter here printed, though written in 1795, is given this place because of its account by a member of the House of Representatives of the attempt to check the importation of slaves in 1767.

sion that the slave trade was malum in se. Pieces against it appeared in newspapers, and some pamphlets were written.²

March 4, 1767, a bill intituled "An Act to prevent the importation of slaves into this Province" was read a first time in the House of Representatives.³ On a second reading the next day, it was committed for alteration. On the 13th it appeared again, and was read a first time under the title of "An Act for preventing the unnatural and unwarrantable custom of enslaving mankind in this Province, and the importation of slaves into the same." On a second reading (the 16th)⁴ a vote for a third reading did not obtain; but a committee was appointed to bring in a bill for laying a duty on slaves imported. Such a bill was brought in the next day, intituled "An Act for laying an impost on the importation of negro and other slaves into this Province," and read a first and second time, and on the 18th read a third time, and passed to be engrossed. I was then a member of the House, and active for the bills under every form. The Council made many amendments, the House non-concurred, and thus died the bill. Had it passed both Houses, Gov. Bernard would not have signed it. The duty was laid high.⁵

² One of these publications was a portion of a sermon preached by the Bishop of Gloucester, before the S.P.G.F.P., Feb. 21, 1766 (Gazette and News Letter, Apr. 2, 1767); another outburst against the slave trade is to be found in the News Letter, Aug. 2, 1770. The growing opposition to the trade can also be followed in the pamphlet literature which preceded the Revolution. In 1772 appeared an Oration on the Beauties of Freedom, dedicated to the Earl of Dartmouth, which contained a plea for the liberty of the negro. The author of this plea stated that he had offered it to the newspapers but had been refused space. James Swan's Dissuasion to Great Britain and the Colonies from the Slave Trade, one of the most ambitious of the pamphlet publications, was addressed to the Governor, the Council, and the House of Representatives of Massachusetts Bay. Another evidence of increasing interest in the moral aspect of the slave trade is to be found in A Forensic Dispute on the Legality of Enslaving the Africans, held at the public Commencement in Cambridge, New England, July 21st, 1773, by Two Candidates for the Bachelor's Degree (Boston, 1773). The debaters were Theodore Parsons and Eliphelet Pearson, both natives of Newbury.

³ The instructions of the Boston town meeting to the representatives, James Otis, Thomas Cushing, Samuel Adams, and John Hancock, in 1766, were, "that you move for a law, to prohibit the importation and purchasing of slaves for the future". The next year the question was put as to whether to adhere to this clause in the previous instructions and it was determined to do so. "Town Meetings, 1758-1769", Report of the Record Commissioners (1886), pp. 183, 200.

⁵ The customs entries which appear during this year in the Gazette and News Letter, Jan. 22, Oct. 1, 22, Dec. 10, are:

Jan. 21,	cleared for Africa,	Dole
Sept. 30,	" " "	Gwin
Oct. 20,	" " "	Sally, McCarty
Dec. 10,	" " "	Cordis

The day on which Capt. Daniel McCarthy cleared he advertised for two runaway seamen who were to be returned to him or to Thomas Boylston, the owner of the Sally. Samuel Dexter, in a letter to Dr. Belknap, writes of "McCarthy, and I believe Job Prince" as the captains of Thomas Boylston in this trade. Prince's name does not appear in the customs entries which have been noted, but one reference to his adventures we possess: "Boston, July 6, 1761. The Same Day Saturday last Capt. Prince came to Town from Salem, who informs that on his Passage from New-york to Guinea in a Ship, he was taken by a French Privateer of 14 Guns, and carried into Martinico. Capt. Prince had 2 Men killed before he struck." News Letter, July 9, 1761.

60. THE VOYAGE OF THE SLOOP FRIEND, 1768.¹

BRIDGETOWN, BARBADOES, June 2, 1768.

Sir, I improve this opportunity to inform you of the ill success of our voyage: we arrived at Anaboa² on the Coast of Africa the 28th of March, where we purchased 102 slaves and had 31 freighted by the Governor of Cape-Coast Castle for the Island of Granada; the 17th of June we sailed from Oppom,³ which is 30 leagues to leeward of Annamaboe: the 20th, Captain Dole was taken sick with a violent fever, attended with a bleeding at the Nose, and after using our utmost efforts, he recruited: the 29th made the Island Fernand Po, having very unsettled weather from our sailing from Oppom, and only one observation during the eleven days between Oppom and Fernand Po: After beating several days in the bite of Biafra the captain was taken with a relapse; we met with several fresh gales of wind, which put the sloop very much out of repair; and it was the captain's desire, with the advice of a master of a vessel, who had taken passage off the coast, and was acquainted with the Cameroons, to bear away for that river in order to clean and repair: The 23d of July arrived at the Cameroons, where we found the ship Union of Liverpool, Thomas Hewes, commander, which had a surgeon on board, who attended captain Dole during our stay here, which was 9 days in cleaning and repairing the vessel: the whole time the captain was very low, and it was the surgeon's opinion very dangerous: July 31st we put to sea, found the weather very unsettled and the wind continually from W.S.W. to S.W. which is directly into the bite: August 23d being 3 leagues from the Island Ferdnand Po, captain Dole departed this life after 64 days sickness: I continued beating till the slaves provisions were expended, except 5 days at a short allowance; we met with a fresh gale of wind that split our main-sail, it being very bad before rendered it quite unserviceable; [with?] advice of the vessels company I bore away again for the Cameroons: The 6th October we arrived there and found the snow Katherine of London, Joseph Valens, master and capt. Hewes; the latter having no provisions to spare, I applied to capt. Valens for a supply, who knowing my necessity required £75 sterling for a quantity of yams for 6 weeks; which to prevent the slaves suffering, I was obliged to comply with: Having repaired the vessel in the best manner possible we proceeded to sea; and went to Fernand Po, where I purchased three boats load in order to help out: We continued beating till the 6th December, all the people being sick but myself and one more, and having carried away three of our starboard shrouds in a very severe gale of wind, the vessel springing a leak, and for 6 hours with 3 feet of water in her hold, during which time we never perceived to gain upon her, pumping and baleing continually, the sails and rigging past repair, and no canvas or twine on board, we were obliged to bear away the third time for the Cameroons: where the vessel after a proper survey was condemned. I freighted the slaves on board the brig Henry, Joseph White, master belonging to Liverpool, having buried 33 slaves belonging to the cargo, and 8 of the freight. During our passage in the brig from the Cameroons, which was 3 months and 7 days, we buried 19 of the sloop's cargo and 9 of the freight, which makes in the whole 66: what remains is 46 cargo and 17 freight: We arrived at Barbados the 31st of May: having buried 4 of the people and 2 drowned during the voyage: only myself, the carpenter, and 2 people now survive. Being now bound to Granada, shall from thence give a more particular account of our misfortunes.⁴

For 1769-1770 the News Letter offers the following customs items:

62. INSTRUCTIONS TO THOMAS DENNY, REPRESENTATIVE
FROM LEICESTER, 1773.¹

May 19, 1773.

. . . And, as we have the highest regard for (so as even to revere the name of) liberty, we cannot behold but with the greatest abhorrence any of our fellow-creatures in a state of slavery.

[61] ¹ Gazette and News Letter, for the dates given.

² Professor S. E. Morison finds eight clearances from Boston for Africa in 1773 (“The Commerce of Boston on the Eve of the Revolution”, Am. Antiq. Soc., Procs., new ser., XXXII. 38). This disproves the conclusion Dr. Belknap reached in 1795, that not more than three ships a year from Boston were ever engaged in the slave traffic (Mass. Hist. Soc., Colls., first ser., IV. 196). Vessels from other Massachusetts ports were also on the African coast. “Salem, July 13. We hear that the Schooner ———, belonging to this Place, and late commanded by Capt. John Masury, is arrived in the West-Indies, from the Coast of Africa; and that the Captain and three Men were dead; but that the Mate and one Hand, the only two of the Crew left, performed the arduous Task of navigating the Vessel from the River Gambia to Dominico in 19 Days, having at the same Time 25 Slaves under their Care.” Gazette and News Letter, July 15, 1773.

Therefore we strictly enjoin you to use your utmost influence that a stop may be put to the slave-trade by the inhabitants of this Province; which, we apprehend, may be effected by one of these two ways: either by laying a heavy duty on every negro imported or brought from Africa or elsewhere into this Province; or by making a law, that every negro brought or imported as aforesaid should be a free man or woman as soon as they come within the jurisdiction of it; and that every negro child that shall be born in said government after the enacting such law should be free at the same age that the children of white people are; and, from the time of their birth till they are capable of earning their living, to be maintained by the town in which they are born, or at the expense of the Province, as shall appear most reasonable.

Thus, by enacting such a law, in process of time will the blacks become free; or if the Honorable House of Representatives shall think of a more eligible method, we shall be heartily glad of it. But whether you can justly take away or free a negro from his master, who fairly purchased him, and (although illegally, for such is the purchase of any person against their consent, unless it be for a capital offence) which the custom of this country has justified him in, we shall not determine; but hope that unerring Wisdom will direct you in this and all your other important undertakings.²

63. RESOLUTION OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, 1776.¹

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENT. Sepr. 13, 1776.

Whereas this house is credibly informed that two Negro men lately brought into this State as prisoners taken on the high seas are advertised to be sold at Salem the 17th instant by public auction,

443. In 1771 a second attempt to forbid importation was made by the legislature, but the bill was vetoed by Governor Hutchinson (W. E. B. Du Bois, Suppression of the Slave Trade, pp. 31-32, citing House Journal, 1771, pp. 211, 215, 219, 228, 234, 236, 240, 242-243). In 1773 Salem representatives were instructed to use their endeavors to prevent future importation of negroes, as "repugnant to the natural rights of mankind, and highly prejudicial to the Province" (Gazette and News Letter, May 27, 1773; also Gentleman's Magazine, XLIII. 358). The town meeting of Sandwich voted: "That our representative is instructed to endeavor to have an Act passed by the Court, to prevent the importation of slaves into this country, and that all children that shall be born of such Africans as now are slaves among us shall, after such Act, be free at 21 years of age" (F. Freeman, History of Cape Cod, Boston, 1862, II. 114-115). The negroes of Massachusetts sent in numerous petitions for the passage of such a measure. Mass. Hist. Soc., Colls., fifth ser., III. 387, 432-437.

²A bill for the purpose here described passed both houses, and went to Governor Hutchinson for his signature on Mar. 8, 1774. He refused his assent on the ground that he had no authority from the crown to confirm such a bill, in which position he was undoubtedly right. The same position was taken by Gage a few months later. Mass. Hist. Soc., Colls., first ser., IV. 201; Du Bois, op. cit., p. 32, citing House Journal, March, 1774, pp. 224, 226, 237, June, pp. 27, 41.

[63] ¹Mass. Arch., CCXV. 96.

Resolved That the Selling and enslaving the human Species is a direct violation of the natural rights alike vested in all men by their Creator and utterly inconsistent with the avowed principles on which this and the other United States have carried their Struggle for liberty even to the last appeal, and therefore that all persons concerned with the said Negroes be and they hereby are forbidden to sell them or in any manner to treat them otherwise than is already ordered for the treatment of prisoners of war taken in the same Vessel or others in the like employ and if any Sale of said negroes shall be made, it hereby is declared null and void.²

64. INSTRUCTIONS TO CAPTAIN ———, 1785.¹

November 12, 1785.

Captain, Our brig, of which you have the command, being cleared at the office, and being in every other respect complete for sea; our orders are, that you embrace the first fair wind and make the best of your way to the coast of Africa, and there invest your cargo in slaves. As slaves, like other articles, when brought to market, generally appear to the best advantage; therefore, too critical an inspection cannot be paid to them before purchase; to see that no dangerous distemper is lurking about them, to attend particularly to their age, to their countenance, to the straightness of their limbs, and, as far as possible, to the goodness or badness of their constitution, etc., will be very considerable objects.

Male or female slaves, whether full grown or not, we cannot particularly instruct you about; and on this head shall only observe, that prime male slaves generally sell best in any market. No people require more kind and tender treatment to exhilarate their spirits, than the Africans; and, while on the one hand, you are attentive to ² This was sent to the Council, where a new draft was drawn up and returned to the House on Sept. 14. This the House refused to accept, and returned its own resolution. On Sept. 16 however it agreed to a second draft sent to it from the Council. As actually passed the resolution read: "Whereas this Court is credibly informed, that two Negro men, lately taken on the High Seas, on board the sloop Hannibal, and brought into this State as prisoners, are advertised to be sold at Salem the 17th instant by public Auction, Resolved, That all persons concerned with the Said Negroes be and they hereby are forbidden to sell them or in any manner to treat them other ways than is already ordered for the treatment of prisoners taken in like manner; and if any Sale of the said Negroes shall be made, it is hereby declared null and void. And that whenever it shall happen, that any Negroes are taken on the High Seas, and brought as prisoners into this State, they shall not be allowed to be sold, nor treated any otherways than as prisoners ordered to be treated, who are taken in like manner" (Mass. Arch., CCXV. 95-96). The softening of the indictment of slavery may have been insisted upon by the Council to spare the feelings of the southern colonies. The sale of negro prisoners of war, here forbidden, was a sore point with the promoters of Sierra Leone twenty years later than this.

[64] ¹Felt, Annals of Salem, II. 289-290. The brig was probably the Favorite. See Felt, II. 287, 291; Moore, Notes on Slavery, p. 66.

this, remember that on the other hand, too much circumspection cannot be observed by yourself and people, to prevent their taking the advantage of such treatment, by insurrection, etc. When you consider that on the health of your slaves, almost your whole voyage depends; for all other risques, but mortality, seizures and bad debts, the underwriters are accountable for; you will therefore particularly attend to smoking your vessel, washing her with vinegar, to the clarifying your water with lime or brimstone, and to cleanliness among your own people, as well as among the slaves.

As the factors on the coast have no laws but of their own making, and of course such as suit their own convenience, they therefore like the Israelites of old, do whatsoever is right in their own eyes; in consequence of which, you ought to be very careful about receiving gold dust, and of putting your cargo into any but the best hands, or if it can be avoided, and the same despatch made, into any hands at all, on any credit. If you find that any saving can be made by bartering rum for slops, and supplying your people with small stores, you will do it; or even if you cannot do it without a loss, it is better done than left undone; for shifts of clothes, particularly in warm climates, are very necessary. As our interest will be considerable, and as we shall make insurance thereon, if any accident should prevent your following the track here pointed out, let it be your first object, to protest publicly, why, and for what reason, you were obliged to deviate. You are to have four slaves upon every hundred, and four at the place of sale; the privilege of eight hogsheads, and two pounds eight shillings per month; these are all the compensations you are to expect for the voyage.

Your first mate is to have four hogsheads privilege, and your second mate two, and wages as per agreement. No slaves are to be selected out as privileged ones, but must rise or fall with the general sales of the cargo, and average accordingly. We shall expect to hear from you, by every opportunity, to Europe, the West Indies, or any of these United States; and let your letters particularly inform us, what you have done, what you are then doing, and what you expect to do. We could wish to have as particular information as can be obtained, respecting the trade in all its branches on the coast; to know if in any future time, it is probable a load of N. E. Rum could be sold for bills of exchange on London or any part of Europe; or for gold dust; and what despatch in this case might be made.

You will be careful to get this information from gentlemen of veracity, and know of them if any other articles would answer from this quarter. We should be glad to enter into a contract, if the terms would answer, with any good factor for rum, etc. If any such would write us upon the subject, and enclose a memorandum with the prices annexed, such letters and memorandums shall be duly attended to. We are in want of about five hundred weight of camwood, and one large elephant's tooth of about 80 lbs., which you will obtain. If small teeth can be bought from 15 to 30 lbs., so as to sell here without a loss, at three shillings, you may purchase 200 lbs. Should you meet with any curiosities on the coast, of a small value, you may expend 40 or 50 gallons of rum for them. Upon your return you will touch at St. Pierres, Martinico, and call on Mr. John Mounreau for your further advice and destination. We submit the conducting of the voyage to your good judgment and prudent management, not doubting of your best endeavours to serve our interest in all cases; and conclude with committing you to the almighty Disposer of all events. We wish you health and prosperity, And are all your friends and owners.²

65. JOSEPH AND JOSHUA GRAFTON TO MESSRS.
HARRISON AND MATTHEWS, 1787.¹

SALEM 6th Jany, '87.

Gentn., Your esteemed favour of 8th Jany last came duly to hand, the contents of it merits our best thanks which we beg leave to present. We purposed our Brigtn. *Gambia*² for your Coast again this Winter but the quantity of Rum that was shipped in the fall from Rhode Island has induced us to lay her by for the present, in the Spring we probably shall try an African Voyage. . . . The bearer hereof Captn. Wm. Robinson having a Cargo of Rum, Tobacco and Lumber we have desired him to give your House the preference of it and have given him a Letter for that purpose. Mr.

² The owners may have been Joseph and Joshua Grafton. Of the New England trade after the Revolution one English sojourner on the African coast wrote: "they have now here, from Boston and its vicinity, six vessels, five of which, I am told, have positive orders to take slaves only, and more are daily expected. By reason of some disagreement or misunderstanding among their captains, the price of slaves is much enhanced; and the factories all along the coast, are so well supplied with rum, that the demand, and of course the price, are considerably lessened. But such enterprising geniuses are the New Englanders, that I expect to hear of their sending vessels for slaves round the Cape of Good Hope: for when they find (which they will soon do) the great disproportion between the profits of some of their vessels voyages and those that are now about leaving the coast, and when to this they will add the prospects of markets hereafter, and the embarrassments they are liable to from our frigates, methinks the time is not far distant for such an event to take place." Charleston Evening Gazette, Oct. 25, 1785.

[65] ¹ Essex Institute, "Log of the Romulus, 1781," letter no. 7. Harrison and Matthews were located at the Isles de Los (or Delos). Letter no. 5 relates to the affairs of a deceased Captain Chilcutt, who had evidently been trading on the African coast for the Graftons. The Isles de Los, much frequented by the American traders of this period, are the Ilhas dos Idolos mentioned by Hawkins (this work, I. 48 n.), close to the mouth of the Sierra Leone River.

² Felt says that the Gambia had made an African voyage in 1785.

Morriarty his Mate being intrusted by our Judge of Probate with papers to prove the Will of the late Capt. Joseph Robinson of our ship Africa, we shall esteem it very Kind (as it was made at Cape Coast Castle) if you have any acquaintance with Governour Mourgue³ there, for an introductory line to him in order that he may meet with no difficulty in accomplishing his Bussiness.⁴ . . .
By Brig. Favorite, Robinson.

66. JOSEPH AND JOSHUA GRAFTON TO CAPTAIN EDWARD BOSS, 1787.¹

SALEM 21st Sept. '87.

Sir, . . . As we wrote you in Decem'r last, so we again say, "if you are not engaged when we are in want of a commander we shall give you the preference". We should, ere this, have fixed our Brig. for Africa, had not we been so disapointed from Charleston in payments but from the latest accounts from the Coast, we find prime Slaves were not to be purchased for less than 200 Galls. Rum eac. and even at that rate, they could not be purchased at the factories. We shall again write you whenever we intend our Brig. for Sea. . . .

We probably shall in a short time fix her for Charleston, for to give 200 Gals. Rum for a Slave will not answer, more especially to sell 'em in the West Indies.

the Sale of Slaves at Charleston being prohibited,² has so far frustrated our entended plans, that except some new channel should be open for the Sale of them we shall be quite discouraged from carrying on the Trade.³ . . .

³ James Morgue, governor at Cape Coast Castle 1784-1787.

⁴ Another letter of the same date, repeating a part of this one, adds, "If our Trade to Africa should fail we shall be at a loss how to improve [i.e., employ] our Vessells". The writers then explain the restrictions which have been laid upon that trade, and discuss the possibility of sending small cargoes of rum to the coast (Essex Institute, ibid., no. 10). The Graftons were restoring a business which had been largely to the coast of Africa. On Feb. 3, 1787, Messrs. Perkins and Burling, who had established a house in Santo Domingo, wrote to the Graftons, evidently in response to enquiries, that it would be difficult to introduce slaves into Santo Domingo since the strictest scrutiny would be observed (L. V. Briggs, History and Genealogy of the Cabot Family, II. 472). Capt. George Crowninshield also sent a vessel from Salem to Africa in 1787, the Polly and Sally, Thomas Thomas, 50 tons, sent out Aug. 6, 1787. This had not been heard from on Apr. 11, 1788. Essex Institute, no 40, letter of Apr. 11, 1788.

[66] ¹ Essex Institute, "Log of the Romulus," no. 163. The letter is addressed to Swansea. Captain Boss had sold slaves in Charleston, S. C., in 1786.

² South Carolina prohibited the trade in 1787. For a time at least the Graftons considered African cargoes other than slaves. In one letter to London correspondents they enquired concerning the bills of exchange drawn on Messrs. Harrison and Matthews, Isles de Los, James Crawdson (?), Popo, and Governor Morgue, Cape Coast Castle, and expressed an interest in ivory, camwood, and gold dust, but not in slaves. On Mar. 26, in a request to John Coffin Jones of Boston for capital, they stated that they were interested in trade in gold dust. Essex Institute, nos. 14, 65.

67. WILLIAM FAIRFIELD TO REBECCA FAIRFIELD, 1789.¹

CAYENNE, April 23, 1789.

Honour'd Parent: I take this Opportunity to write Unto you to let you know of a very bad accident that Happen'd on our late-passage from Cape Mount, On the Coast of Africa, bound to Cayenne, we sail'd from Cape Mount the 13th of March with 35 Slaves greatly depleted by disease (Annals, II. 292). In spite of the obstacles in the way of profitable trade at this time, scattered evidence testifies to a continued interest in the traffic in slaves. The schooner Collector, John Carnes, possibly owned by Messrs. Pierce and Cabot of Boston, carried slaves to Charleston in 1786. While it is not possible to assert with finality that an African insurance in which William Robinson and Nathan Goodale were concerned was on a slave vessel, it is probable that such was the case (Essex Institute, nos. 66, 69, 83). In 1791 the St. John, Grafton, of Salem, and the Speedwell, Burdett, of Boston, were trading between Africa and Surinam (Salem Gazette, Sept. 6, 1791). The African news which reached Boston that year was scarcely of an encouraging nature: "Boston, Oct. 3. . . . A letter of a late date from a gentleman on the coast of Africa, to his friend in this town says, 'That Mr. John Ormond, (a famous chief and factor) of the Rio Pongas, is no more. His white people are all massacred by the natives, and his property become a prey to his own slaves. Numbers of people are sufferers unfortunately I am one. This event has caused such tumult and confusion, that the trade is almost at a stand'" (ibid., Oct. 4, 1791). In 1794 the Favorite and Two Brothers cleared for Africa; in 1795, the Ruth, the Hope, and the St. John. Ibid., Jan. 7, Feb. 11, 1794, Sept. 15, Oct. 6, Dec. 8, 1795.

[67] ¹*Essex Institute Historical Collections*, XXV. 311-312. The letter is addressed to Salem. The Rev. William Bentley wrote of the departure of William Fairfield, sr., from Salem: "September 23. Capt. Wm. Fairfield, Felicity, Sch., sailed, according to the Clearance, for Cape de Verd Islands. It is supposed from the Cargo, this latter carried, and the character of the owner, that this Vessel is intended for the slave trade. The owner confesses he has no reluctance in selling any part of the human race. The event in its probable consequences gives great pain to thinking men, and in consideration of the owner's easy circumstances, is supposed to betray signs of the greatest moral depravity" (Diary of William Bentley, Salem, 1905, I. 104). The next week Bentley wrote: "The Law against Slavery, the outward bound passage of a vessel for Guinea, as mentioned (p. 318), led me to think of the general conversation on the Slave Trade, and as the Clergy were mentioned as having procured the Law against it, to think what had been said against them. It so happened that the owner of the Guinea Vessel uttered in the preceeding week many hard things upon the subject of the Clergy, etc." (ibid., Sept. 28, 1788). The law to which Bentley referred, passed Mar. 25, 1788, is quoted at length in the "Case of the Abeona," post, no. 74. Its passage had been hastened by the kidnapping of three free negroes in Boston. They had been put to work on a vessel in Boston harbor, then carried to the island of St. Bartholomew and offered for sale. Indignation over this outrage brought a number of petitions to the legislature, one of them being from the Boston clergy, and hastened the passage of the Massachusetts act abolishing the slave trade. Meantime Governor Hancock and the French consul had communicated with all the West India islands, the governor of St. Bartholomew had stopped the sale in that island, and the kidnapped negroes were returned to Boston in 1788. Mass. Hist. Soc., Procs., LI. 356-358; see also Robert Rantoul, "Negro Slavery in Mass.," Essex Inst. Hist. Colls., XXIV. 94-96.

Judge James Winthrop, in his reply to Belknap's queries in 1795, wrote: "The construction of the act is such that it must extend the prohibition to every part of the world. . . . I cannot forbear adding that it would be more worthy of an enlightened legislature to regulate a trade which is woven into our nature, and has been carried on and considered as lawful from the earliest antiquity, than to try to abolish it. If abuses have crept in, they ought to be guarded against; but abuse alone will not justify abolishing a trade which manifestly tends to preserve life and to increase the quantity of productive labor in the whole world. Wars among savages may in some small degree be promoted by the trade, but the lives of the prisoners are saved." Mass. Hist. Soc., Colls., fifth ser., III. 390-391.

On bord, the 26th day of March the Slaves Rised upon us, At half past seven, my Sir and all hands being Forehead Except the Man at helm and my self, three of the Slaves took Possession of the Caben, and two upon the quarter Deck, them in the Caben took Possession of the fier Arms, and them on the quarter Deck with the Ax and Cutlash and other Weapons, them in the Caben, handed up Pistels to them on the quarter Deck. One of them fired and killed my honoured Sir, and still we strove for to subdue them, and then We got on the quarter Deck and killed two of them. One that was in the Caben was Comeing out at the Caben Windows in order to get on Deck, and we Discovered him and Knock'd him over-bord, two being in the Cabin we confined the Caben Doors, so that they should not kill us, then three men went forhead and got the three that was down their and brought them aft And their being a Doctor on bord Passenger that Could speak the tongue he sent one of the boys down and Brought up some of the fier arms and Powder And then we Cal'd them up and one Came up and he Cal'd the other and he Came up. We put them In Irons and Chained them and then the Doctor Dres'd the Peoples Wounds they being Slightly Wounded. Then it was one o'clock they buried my honoured Parent, he was buried as decent as he could be at Sea the 16 of this month. I scalt myself with hot Chocolate but now am abel to walk about again. SALEM 9th Mo 11th 1792.

Respected Friend, . . . He [Capt. Stephen Cleveland]² is a person I have long been personally acquainted with, is one whom I esteem for his principles of equity and Benevolence to the oppressed Affricans and is the prossecutor of one of the Traffickers and his Associate and partner in Iniquity, the noted Sinclair and Waters³ who have transported many of those unhappy People from their native land to the West Indies and sold them there, the Circumstances of the evidence etc. may be best given thee by himself, his Circumstance is singular in this place, being the first who hath boldly stood forth in the Cause, and altho many are wishing well to him, yet he hath to Combat with a Considerable number, of whom it is no breach of Charity to say are the very worst of mankind. I hope he will not be discouraged but persevere on to the bringing to Justice such Inhuman Violaters of Justice, Humanity and Law.⁴ . . .

³ On Nov. 12, 1790, Bentley wrote: "It is reported that Sinclair has returned from a Guinea voyage with the loss of all his crew. Notwithstanding the laws of the Commonwealth, there is not one man of spirit to stand forth and make enquiry into these detestable practices. I am informed that the daring wretch, who has made me so much mischief, is engaging in such a voyage." On Aug. 2, 1792, his entry was: "The Slave Trade engages the public attention. Sinclair returned into this port, and being without the affections of the people, was a fit subject for the Law. S. Cleveland, of the G. Jury, with a precept and Sheriff, taking such assistance as they pleased went to his Vessel, but found he was at his house, to which they went directly. He was in the room below and received them but soon suspecting their design he slipped up stairs, and fastened the door, threatening death to any person who should approach him. The officer burst the door. Sinclair threw down his arms, and jumped out of the window, and was apprehended by the guard below. He was conducted to close prison, his property attached, and that of Capt. J. Waters for this infamous trafick" (Diary, I. 212, 384-385).

Bentley's implication that Sinclair was not the only violator of the law is borne out by an entry in Felt's Annals (II. 296): "Reported that another of our vessels, the St. John, had arrived at Surinam from Africa. This shows, that a few of our merchants, like others in various sea ports, still loved money more than the far greater riches of a good conscience, more than conformity with the demands of human rights, with the law of the land and the religion of their God." The vessel to which reference is made here and in the papers which follow (post, nos. 71, 72, 74) was the Abeona, Sinclair, which cleared from Salem for Goree on Mar. 8, 1791. An Abeona of Salem, under one Captain Smith, was reported at Havana on June 19, 1792. Salem Gazette, Mar. 8, 1791, June 19, 1792.

The Subscriber in the practise of Law at Salem in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts does hereby certify that Sometime in the Month of July last past, he instituted a Suit at the Request of Captain Stephen Cleveland, against Joseph Waters and John Sinclair wherein the said Stephen Cleveland as well for the commonwealth of Massachusetts as for himself declared against them in debt for transporting ninety Inhabitants of Africa in the Schooner Abeona whereof they were owners, to the Havanna and there selling them as Slaves.

That the Writ is made returnable to the Court of Common Pleas next to be holden at Newburyport within and for the County of Essex on the last Tuesday of September instant, that the said Stephen Cleveland, has taken unwearied Pains to procure the necessary Evidence, that he has taken the depositions of two of the Crew belonging to said Schooner which amounts to full Evidence of that fact, that he has duely subpoenaed a John Waters who was mate of the said Schooner and who now is in Salem, that the Writ has been duely served on the said Waters and Sinclair, on the said Waters by attaching property in two or more Vessels, on the said Sinclair, by arresting his Body, who has procured good and substantial bail, and that said Stephen Cleveland has taken every proper and legal step to support the said Action.

he could not then determine, if he had engaged in the Case, Cleaveland against Sinclair as the Minutes of the Causes he had undertaken were at his Office, but he would let me know on Monday Forenoon. I again waited upon him at that Time, or rather attempted to, as I found he had just set out for Worcester Court. He had however left a Letter, the purport of wch was, to say, he had been applied to in the Case of Cleaveland Superior Court at Salem, but that the action at Taunton, wch he mentioned to me on Saturday as a leading Cause, by wch Cleaveland's would be determined would be argued first and that he was to argue it in Support of the Law of this State, and that he would do it with Energy being determined to exert himself in doing all he could for the Establishment of the Freedom of the whole Human Race. You will notice my Business with him on Saturday was to offer him the Fee of 20 Dollars you sent to me by Mr. Cleaveland wch he did not chuse to take then, as he had not with him his Minutes of his Engagements. Upon receiving his Letter abovementioned I was fully of his Opinion, that the Cause at Taunton will make a precedent for that at Salem. Consequently if Judge Sullivan would have received the money, it would in a Manner have been thrown away, as the Gentleman is already bound to defend against Parsons at Taunton, and he must do it with Force if he means to preserve any Consistency, having written and published a Pamphlet solely to advocate the Importance of the seperate Governments, in Opposition to the Idea of Consolidation² and Mr. Cleaveland having informed Me, that Mr. Pulling and Parsons could alone speak in his Case at Newbury, even if Sullivan and Dexter were both engaged, I have thought it best to omit speaking to Dexter, at least at present especially as I do not think he could now be brought in to do any Good at Taunton. These Determinations you must be sensible, are made, subject to your Controul as I am very willing my Opinions should be reversed by your superiour Judgment, and consequently I shall hold myself ready to obey your Orders.

I inclose you a Paper signed Edward Pulling, forwarded to me by Capt. Cleaveland. This latter Gentleman, I had never seen, till your Introduction of him. It appears to me, he has very great Merit in this Case. He is, as he tells me, in Advance Eighty Dollars wch from what he says of his Circumstances, he must not be suffered to lose. Our Society I trust, will enter with Spirit into the Business. It is enough, and more than enough, for Mr. Cleaveland to bear the personal Insults and Abuse he suffers. I am ready to pay any As-

[73] ¹ Briggs, The Cabot Family, I. 390. The originals of the letters which passed between Perkins and Burling in Santo Domingo and various Boston merchants the editor has not examined, but the selections printed by Dr. Briggs contain frequent references to aspects of the slave trade. On June 24, 1790, Perkins and Burling of Santo Domingo wrote to Theodore Lyman of Boston: "We by no means advise your sending any more (negroes). It is almost impossible to get rid of an infant negro." On July 27 they informed Simon Elliot of the safe arrival of the Betsey, Capt. Allen Hallet, with thirty-two slaves in whom they understood he was interested. On Dec. 16, 1791, Thomas Handasyd Perkins wrote to M. Jean Laroque: "When the disturbances of Yr Colony have passed, you will probably be in want of Cargoes for the Coast of Africa. Rum, Tobacco, and Coarse Cloths are always to be had here low, such as suit the Guinea Market" (ibid., I. 387, II. 478, 505). For a brief sketch of the connection of T. H. Perkins with Santo Domingo see New England Historical and Genealogical Register, X. 201-211. Simon Elliot, was his father-in-law.

² This may have been the Captain McNeil who in 1786 commanded the Thomas. "By her [Betsey] we learn that the ship Thomas, Capt. M'Neil, had arrived at that island [St. Thomas] from the Isle de Los, on the coast of Guinea, with a cargo of 200 slaves; Between 40 and 50 perished in their passage by the disease and cruelties peculiar to this inhuman traffick. Capt. M'Neil's crew had been very sickly. The mate, carpenter, cooper, and four hands were buried in the course of the voyage." New Haven Gazette and the Connecticut Magazine, Apr. 27, 1786.

⁴ In 1793 the same firm wrote: "If you cou'd buy more Slaves at 150 or 200 dollars, such for instance as went down in the Katy, and charter a vessel to take them to the Havanna, all on a/c of the Sachem, it wd do well. . . . They are worth 250 to 270 Ds." (Briggs, II. 505). Not only do the Perkins papers provide information on the relations between Boston merchants and the West India trade in slaves but they are said to contain over one hundred letters to traders in Africa, which might add much to our knowledge of the methods by which the African trade was carried on at this time. Ibid., I. 391.

Yet the said Joseph and John tho’ requested have not paid said sums or either of them, but unjustly detain them.⁴ . . . and still do refuse to pay the same, all which is to the Damage of the said Stephen who sues as aforesaid (as he saith) the sum of five thousand pounds, which shall then and there be made to appear, with other due damages, and have you there this writ, with your doings therein, Witness, Benjamin Greenleaf, Esqr. at Salem this Second day of July in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety two.

Stephen Cleveland	} Def'ts plea vs Joseph Waters and als.

And the said Waters and Sinclair come and defend the force and Injury, and pray Judgment of the writ aforesaid, and say, that the said Court of Common pleas here, Ought not to have Cognizance of the action aforesaid, because they say, that by the Constitution for the United States of America, ordained and Established by the people thereof, Since the making of the said Act (entitled an act to prevent the Slave trade and for granting relief to the families of such unhappy persons as may be kidnapped or decoyed away from this Commonwealth) and before the Cause of the Action aforesaid, if any hath accrued to the said Cleveland, is supposed to have accrued or the supposed Crimes and Offences in the said Writ alledged are supposed to have been Committed, it was, and is, among other things ordained and Established, that the Congress of the said United States, Shall have power, to regulate Commerce with foreign nations, and to define and punish Offences against the law of Nations, and that the Judicial power of the said United States shall Extend to all Cases of Admiralty and maritime Jurisdiction, and that the trial of all Crimes not Committed within any State, shall be at such place or places as the Congress may by Law have directed: And further, the said Waters and Sinclair say That by an act of the first Congress of the United States, pursuant to the said Constitution passed in the first session of the said Congress, Entitled an Act to Establish the Judicial Courts of the United States, it is among other things Enacted; that the District Courts, by that Act Established, shall have, Exclusively of the Courts of the several States, Cognizance of all crimes and Offences that shall be Cognizable under the Authority of the United States, Committed within their respective Districts, or upon the high Seas, where no Other punishment then Whipping, not exceeding thirty stripes, a fine not Exceeding one hundred dollars, or a term of Imprisonment not exceeding Six months, is to be Inflicted; and shall also have Exclusive Original Cognizance of all Civil Causes of Admiralty and Maritime Jurisdiction, and in and by the same Act it is further Enacted, that the Circuit Courts, thereby Established, Shall have Exclusive Cognizance of all Crimes and Offences, cognizable under the Authority of the United States, Except where that act otherwise provides, or the laws of the United States shall otherwise direct, and Concurrent Jurisdiction with the District Courts of the Crimes and Offences cognizable therein⁵— And so the said Waters and Sinclair say, that the Cause of the action aforesaid, if any hath Accrued to the said Cleveland, and the supposed crimes and offences in the said Writ alledged, if any have been Committed, did accrue to the said Cleveland, and were Committed on the high seas, within the Exclusive Jurisdiction of the Judicial Courts of the said United States, and not at Salem in the said County of Essex, or within the said state of Massachusetts, or Elsewhere, within the Jurisdiction of this Court of Common pleas here—And this the said Waters and Sinclair are ready to Verify; Wherefore they do not Suppose, that the said Court of Common pleas here will or Ought to have or hold further Cognizance of the action aforesaid.⁶

And the said Stephen Cleveland who sues as aforesaid, says the said plea of the said Joseph and John above by them pleaded and the matters and things therein Contained are bad and Insufficient in Law to proclude this Court from having and taking Cognizance of the Action aforesaid, and that by Law the said Stephen is not bound to Answer thereto, and all this the said Stephen is ready to Verify, wherefore for want of sufficient plea in this behalf, the said Stephen who Sues as aforesaid, prays Judgment, and that the said Joseph and John may Answer Over.

Per E. PULLING.

And the said Waters and Sinclair, say their plea aforesaid is good and sufficient in Law to preclude this Court from having and taking cognizance of the action aforesaid of the said Cleveland against them had, and because he has not answered thereto, pray Judgment of the writ aforesaid and that the same may abate—and for their Costs.⁷

[Letter of James Sullivan to Samuel Sewall.]

BOSTON 15th Sep'r 1792.

Sir, The inclosed plea⁸ is well. perhaps the only use to be made of it is, that should it be over ruled you can appeal and avoid a trial by Jury in the Common pleas. I believe the same advantage as intended by the plea may be had on the merits of the case for it appears to me that it brings up the question whether our act has the force of Law, if it has not, because Congress hath the cognizance of this kind of business then there is no act in existance agt the slave Trade, for the United States have made none. This question may be made on the issue or reserved for a motion in arrest of Judgment. The offence if there was one was committed on the high Seas, but there was none unless our Court had authority to make the Law. if they had, then the offence exists and is Cognizable in our Courts.⁹ arrived at Goree on said coast some time in the month of April following, that we caried on board said schooner from salem to said coast of Africa a cargo of Rum, Tanned leather, tobacco, etc. that we caried from Salem to said coast twentyseven pair of shackles, and twentysix pair of handcuffs', as I recollect, that we disposed of our cargo at sundry Islands on said Coast of Africa, that we there took on board said schooner ninety two or ninety three black Inhabitants of Africa which Captain Sinclair commonly called Slaves, some of which were brought on board said schooner in Irons and some not, that we sailed from said coast with the said black people on board, about the last of september one thousand sevenhundred and ninety one and arrived at maritnico in the west indies some time about the last of october following, where we landed the said black people, and afterward within a few days took them on board again, and carried them to the Havannah where we left them, and Captain Sinclair afterwards told me that the Slaves were all sold, except a little girl whom he called Abiona, her he carried with him to New York. I further say that I shipped on board said schooner as carpenter to go to the coast of africa for Slaves.

SALEM October 24th 1792.

The Jury find,¹⁰ that sometime in the month of March viz. on the fourth day of that month in the year One thousand seven hundred and ninety one, the Schooner called the Abeona mentioned in the second Count of the Plaintiffs Writ was fitted out by the said Joseph Waters and John Sinclair then Inhabitants in said Commonwealth and residents at said Salem with intent to be employed in the transportation of divers inhabitants of said Africa as slaves, which said Schooner was then and ever since has been owned by the said Joseph and John, and the said John was Master thereof, and did actually sail on said voyage within the same month of march in said Schooner, and arrived in the month of June in the same year to the Coast of Africa, and the said Schooner was there actually employed in the transportation of divers inhabitants of said Africa there received on board the said Schooner in the months of September and October in the year last aforesaid and not before and thence did transport the same to certain Islands in the West Indies and there afterwards sold them as Slaves in manner and form as the said Cleaveland in his second Count has alledged; and contrary to the said Act referred to in said Cleave-

¹⁰ The court's statement of the case is omitted as it covers familiar ground. It, as well as the sheriff's writ, enumerates three Abeonas, all committing the same offence in the same year. This, it seems clear, must be the result of the legal forms used, not of the facts.

land's Writ. And the Jury further find, that since the making of that Act and before the purchase of the said Cleaveland's Writ aforesaid another Act of the General Court of the said State of Massachusetts, entitled an Act for the Ease of the Citizens concerning Actions upon penal Statutes was made and enacted and is given in evidence in this Case.¹¹

And further the Jury find, that since the making of the said act to prevent the Slave Trade etc. in the said Writ mentioned and before the fitting out of the said Schooner as aforesaid, it was and is ordained and established by the Constitution of the United States of America among other things, that the Congress of the said United States shall have power, to regulate Commerce with foreign nations, and among the several states, to define and punish piracies and felonies committed upon the High Seas and Offences against the law of Nations, and that the Migration or Importation of such persons as any of the states now existing, shall think proper to admit, shall not be prohibited by the Congress, prior to the year One thousand eight hundred and eight, but a tax or duty may be imposed on such importation, not exceeding ten dollars for each person and that no state shall, without the consent of the Congress, lay any imposts or duties on imports or exports, except what may be absolutely necessary for executing it's inspection laws.

And whether the said Action of the said Cleaveland could be brought at the time of bringing the same, or can be duly maintained within the said County of Essex, and whether since the establishment of the said Constitution of the United States, any Action could accrue to the said Cleaveland upon the matters and things in his said second Count alledged, the Jury are wholly ignorant, and pray the advisement of this Court thereon. And if upon the whole matter this Court shall be of opinion that the said Cleaveland's Action might be brought and maintained as aforesaid, and that an Action has accrued to him as aforesaid, then the Jury find the said Joseph and John Guilty and that they have forfeited the said sum of two thousand pounds, in manner and form as the said Cleaveland has alledged in the said Count: but if otherwise of opinion, then the Jury find the said Joseph and John as to the said second Count not Guilty.

And as to the other Counts in the said Cleaveland's Writ aforesaid, the Jury find the said Joseph and John not Guilty, and that neither of them is Guilty.

1st. Since the act prohib'g the Slave Trade, the Constit. of Un'd Sts. has been establ'd wh has restrained the legisl. powers of the individ. That Cons. and the laws of the un'd Sts. made in pursu'e thereof are now the Supr. law of the land, and the judges in ev'y St. are bound thereby notw'g the Cons. or laws of any St. As that Supr. law might be supposed to affect the legisl. power of a state, the def'ts in this ac. might and may yet avail themselves of any defence aris'g therefrom upon the exam'n of the Merits of this act.: from which they must be at all events discharged, if the state Legisl. has not at this time the power of making the laws upon wh their supposed crime arises: but the object'n may we appreh'd be very properly consid'd under the present plea. And we need not on this quest, consider the power of the legisl. of the St. to declare any supp'd facts to be crim'l, but only whether they have power to establ. a tribunal for the trial of any facts, whether crim'l or not, happ'g under cert. local circumst's; We say may it please your hon[or] and it is admitted by the D C'rts and we appeal to the Writ in this Case, that the facts alledged as crim'l ag. the Def'ts in this Ac. are supposed to have happ'd on the High Seas and we argue that the Legisl. of any St. has not at the time auth'y to instit. a tribunal for the trial of facts happ'g there and we conclude that if they cannot and we shall further endeavour to shew that the constit. and Laws of the U. Jurisd. of matters arising upon the High Seas, the Jurisd. of This C'rt in This Case is therefore taken away The Sen. stat. upon wh this Ac. is grounded has been cons'd as a commerc. regulat. and in that view is I think abolished by the 10th Sect. of 1st Art. of the Cons. of the Un. It has been and I think is more properly consid'd as defining and punishing an Offence wh if com'd at all must be com'd on the High Seas or within the territory and Jurisd. of other States or Kingd's—and that view is an exen. of the author'y given to Congr. of defining and punish'g Pir's and fel's comm'd on the H'h Seas and off's ag. the law of nats. wh

¹³ In January, 1792, a suit was begun in Portland by John May against one Mr. Hodges, for fitting out the Eagle for Africa and importing slaves therein. "Mr. Lithgow informed the Court that Mr. Hodges was an alien, and that as such (the sum sued for being about 500 dollars) he had a right then to file a petition for the removal of the cause from that Court to the Federal Court of this District The question, however, was new, and in the opinion of the Court was important; a decision of it was therefore postponed till the last Tuesday in May next" (Salem Gazette, Jan. 17, 1792). This may have been the case referred to in July: "Portland, June 22 At this term an action, John May Esq. vs Henry Skinner and others merchants, for breach of an act of this Commonwealth, to prevent the Slave Trade etc. removed from the Court of Common Pleas of this County, because one of the Defendants is an Alien, went to a Jury, who returned a special Verdict against the Defendant; and the same is continued to September term for advisement." Ibid., July 3, 1792.

Gentn., I have received your favor of the 10th Ultimo and am Obligd for your kind offers of Service, but you will be informed e're this the African trade is not yet abolished. I am not at present in want of Shipping, but its probable I may send a Ship or Ships to your address to take in Rum such as you mention, to assort other goods upon the coast. If I should dispatch any Ship to you, or my agents on the Coast of Africa in my Name, to be loaded with Rum etca, I shall rely on you to use your endeavours for my Interest, and also to give the Vessels the quickest dispatch possible, and your Bills on me to the amount of whatever is Shipd for my account will meet due Honor, and you will please to observe I do not permit Goods to be Shipd on a Vessel of mine upon any pretence whatever but what is solely for my Own Account.²

SALEM, Novr. 30th, 1792.

. . . Sinclair is gone to New Yourk in a Small Ship Belonging to himself and other Guinea merchants, with a Compleat Cargo for [75] ¹Mass. Hist. Soc., Procs., XLIV. 668. John Dawson was at this time the holder of a contract to supply negroes to the Spanish markets of the West Indies (this work, II. xlv, 577 n., 656 n.). From this letter one may surmise that Montgomery and Company had written to the Liverpool merchant soliciting business in rum traffic, under the supposition that the slave trade was soon to be abolished in England. Ibid., p. lviii.

²Apparently at the time of writing this letter Dawson wrote to John Ashley, one of his African agents, directing him if he needed rum to send to Boston for it, as a letter of June 3, 1793, from Ashley to Montgomery and Company informs them that he is sending the Abby, under Capt. Joseph Winter, "for a Cargoe good strong Rum; which I must beg of you to have put on board with all possible dispatch; as I shall be much in want, having been lately much disappointed in the arrival of our Liquor Ships from Holland, owing to the Warr between France and England". Directions follow for the casks in which the rum is to be shipped, for lumber, and for carpenters who are to be sent out on the Abby. Ashley also wrote to Dawson explaining that he had been obliged to promise Captain Winter an emolument of £100 in lieu of the commissions he would have received on slaves had he not been sent direct to Boston for the rum. On the arrival of the Abby in Portland, where Captain Winter took on water and provisions, it was seized as an English vessel carrying American papers and evidently held for nearly five months. A letter from William Smith to Capt. William McNeill, Feb. 7, 1794, indicates that the rum cargo, comprising 138 hogsheads and 46 tierces of Medford rum, valued at three shillings a gallon, was at last shipped under Captain McNeill, consigned to John Ashley and Capt. Joseph Winter, who was a passenger on the Abby. Both Winter and Ashley were reminded in letters of instruction from Smith that "by the Laws of this State no Vessell belonging to it is suffered to bring off any Slaves from the Coast of Africa under the penalty of £50 for each Slave and £200 fine for the Ship". Smith also wrote to Dawson explaining the transactions which he, in the absence of Montgomery in Spain, had undertaken on Dawson's account. A letter of Dec. 23, 1794, advised Captain Winter that rum was then so high in Boston that there was no object in his returning for another cargo (Mass. Hist. Soc., Procs., XLIV. 668-683). This seems to have concluded Smith's efforts to share in the profits of the Spanish slave trade carried on by Dawson and Company.

77. HENRY THORNTON TO GOVERNOR SAMUEL ADAMS, 1795.¹

Sir, I have the Honor of addressing you on the Part of my Brethren the Directors of the Sierra Leone Company, a Society lately instituted for the purpose of Substituting a Trade in the natural Productions of Africa in the Place of that now Carried on for Slaves and with a view to the General Civilization Instruction and Improvement of the Natives of that abused Continent. We have been informed by the Governor and Council of our Settlement in Africa (Men of great coolness and perfect veracity)² that several American vessels have from time to time been trading in Slaves on that Coast Contrary as We are assured to the Laws of the States to which they respectively belong. Under these Circumstances We think it our Duty to put you in Possession of the Substance of the Intelligence we have received so far as respects those Vessels which appear to belong to the State of Massachusetts. And we shall continue to feel ourselves bound to transmit any Similar Intelligence which We may hereafter receive on such unquestionable Authority.

witnesses had brought suit against Sinclair for abuses on the coast of Africa, and had recovered £60 in the lower court. The appeal was still pending when Cleveland wrote. In all these cases the great difficulty was that of jurisdiction.

²On Mar. 4, 1793, Jonathan Edwards wrote to Moses Brown that a suit had been begun in New Haven by Dr. Mather, of Saybrook, against "White, Pratt, and Newel," African slave traders. On Sept. 24, 1793, this suit was still pending in the Connecticut courts. Whatever the outcome, it did not prevent Newell from a slaving voyage the next year. Zachary Macaulay writes of his presence on the Sierra Leone coast in July, 1794, and of the difficulties of that settlement with him. [78] ¹"Extract from the Letters of the Governor and Council at Sierra Leone to the Chairman and Court of Directors of the Sierra Leone Company."

²The Willing Quaker was reported at Havana in the summer of 1792. She sailed from the West Indies Dec. 15, 1792, where her cargo had been supervised by Perkins and Burling, agents of Capt. Daniel McNeil, one of her owners. Messrs. J. and T. H. Perkins of Boston may also have been owners. Of the cargo the agents Sierra Leone on the of April 1793, thence she went to the Bananas and the Isles de Los, and whilst she staid on the Coast lay mostly at one or other of these places. She took in Slaves at both places. In the month of July she left the Isles de Los with upwards of One hundred Slaves on board, bound it is supposed to Surinam. A. W. Hutchinson came out as Supercargo, but some difference arising between him and Adamson he was left on the Coast whence he took a passage to the West Indies in the Schooner Union of Salem, R. Fisher Master, also freighted with Slaves.

Witnesses. Crews of the Willing Quaker, Adamson of Boston, and of the Nancy, Cook of Providence.

The Schooner Union of Salem in New England.³ When she arrived on the Coast she was commanded by one Hall⁴ who dying at Bance Island, was succeeded in the Command by his Mate. She took on board a Cargo of Slaves from the Rio Nunez with which she left the Coast bound to the West Indies, or Surinam about the latter end of October last. The name of the Master who carried her off was Fisher.

On leaving the Rio Nunez as we heard he carried off several free people Natives of Africa, who were on board assisting the Mariners in doing the vessel's duty.

Witnesses. Crews of the Union, Fisher of Salem, and of the Kate, Conolly of Charlestown.

Brig Rachel of Boston, Leetch Master, and John Knight Super-wrote to Captain McNeil: "The Willing Quaker sailed from here the 15. . . . The want of Tobacco kept her here for some time . . . and we concluded to put on board of her 20 hhds. more Rum" (Briggs, The Cabot Family, I. 392; Salem Gazette, June 19, 1792). Captain Adamson carried a letter from McNeil to King Naimbanna of Sierra Leone, directing that seven slaves owed to him as the result of earlier trading be paid to Adamson in men and boys. The instructions from the owner to the captain charged him to see that the cargo was young and healthy, without defects in limbs, teeth, and eyes, and with as few females as possible. The slaves were to be "well fed, well used, and kept clean and dry." The men slaves were to be always in irons and the gratings locked at sunset. The price desired was $50 per head (ibid., I. 391-392). About the same time that the Willing Quaker was being fitted out Messrs. J. and T. H. Perkins were despatching the Clarissa to Havana with slaves, under Capt. William McNeil, nephew of Daniel. The Havana port was at this time open to American vessels only if they carried new negroes. It was therefore customary for American merchants to include in their cargoes a sufficient number of negroes to ensure admission, along with a mixed cargo of merchandize. This practice the letters between J. and T. H. Perkins in Boston and Perkins and Burling in Cape François frequently illustrate.

He has been an unfortunate man, and thus sought base means for his redress" (Dec. 19, 1793, Bentley, Diary, II. 77). Bentley later wrote: "A Second Guinea Captain has died this season, Burditt, who with Hall lived in this part of the Town, and were of the Eng. Church. The first belonged at Charlestown, and sailed from it near Boston. The last was a foreigner; both married in the Town. The news produced a bonfire on the Common, in all the rain and the people were alarmed, supposing it to be a building in flames." Jan. 23, 1794, ibid., II. 80.

There was one also belonging to Boston whose name we could not learn taking in Slaves at Goree and having taken in 40 Slaves, on her way down the Coast, the slaves rose and put the Captain 1st and 2d Mates and one man to death, the vessel drifted to the mouth of the Rio Nunez, where she went ashore and was taken possession of by Mr. Lawrence a trader in that River, after an engagement with the insurgents of 6 or 7 hours Continuance.

79. INSURANCE ON THE HOPE, 1803 (?).¹

By this Policy of Assurance Underwritten in the Office kept by N. P. Russell, Messrs. J. and T. H. Perkins for Mr. Robt. Corning

[79] ¹For this fragment of an insurance policy on a slave vessel the editor is indebted to Professor S. E. Morison. See his Maritime History of Massachusetts, p. 33, for a reference to it. It is probable that many such vessels were insured in Boston, though the evidence to prove that such was the case is difficult to unearth. In January, 1818, suit was brought in Charleston, for the payment of certain promissory notes given as premiums on insurance policies executed in Boston, on slaving voyages from Africa to Charleston in 1803. It was held by the court that the notes were void since by the act of 1788 Massachusetts citizens were forbidden to participate in that trade (Mrs. Helen T. Catterall, Judicial Cases concerning American Slavery, II. 306). All Boston companies were not willing to insure such cargoes, however. On Mar. 19, 1802, Thomas Davis, president of the Boston Marine Insurance Society, wrote to Eben Stocker, of Newburyport: "We have always declined writing on Vessels to the coast of Africa after Slaves. I suppose the one mentioned in your letter from Havannah must be of that description" (Mass. Hist. Soc., Papers of the Boston Marine Insurance Society, Letter-Book, May 1, 1799-Dec. 21, 1828). G. C. Mason published the fragment of an insurance written in New York on the brigantine Anstis (no date): "And touching the adventures and perils which we the assurers are content to bear, and do take upon us in this voyage, they are of the seas, men of War, Fire, Enemies, Pyrates, Rovers, Thieves, Jettizons, Letters of Mart and Countermart, Surprizals, Taking at Sea, Baratry of the Master and Marine[r]s and all the Perils, Losses and Misfortunes that have or shall come to the Hurt, Detriment or Damage of the said Goods and Merchandize, or of the said vessel her Tackel, Apparel and Furniture or any part thereof" (Am. Hist. Rec., I. 318-319).

A letter which falls outside the limits of this work is not without interest at this point. On Jan. 25, 1810, N. P. Russell wrote to Messrs. J. and T. H. Perkins: "At your particular request, I have offered to the underwriters in my office the two African risks, viz. the Ship Sn. Francisco de Asis and Cargo, and the Schr. Carlota, Capt. Fitzpatrick, and Cargo, at twenty five per cent. owing to recent news from the Coast of Africa, the underwriters absolutely decline insuring any vessels in the slave trade at present, and of course will not even name a premium on these or any others" (Mass. Hist. Soc., Perkins Papers). The inference seems to be that Messrs. J. and T. H. Perkins were still concerned in the slave trade, though after the act of Congress of May 10, 1800, they had apparently hesitated to deal further in negroes. "An Am. Vessell wd be as deeply implicated with one slave as with a load from the Coast—the forfeiture is the vessell and $2000 fine, and $200 pr head for each slave—this amounts to a pretty severe prohibition and we prefer losing a little upon a few horses than gaining upon human flesh—so that upon all sides we are opposed to getting our vessells in by Negroes." Havana, July 16, 1804 (?), J. and T. H. Perkins to James Graham, The Cabot Family, II. 517.

of St. Croix, doth make insurance and cause to be insured, lost or not lost, the sum of thirty-three thousand three hundred dollars, on the Danish Ship Hope and Cargo (one-third on Ship and two-thirds on Cargo) at and from the Coast of Africa to Havana, with liberty to touch and trade at St. Thomas, commencing the risk when the outward cargo is loaded.

[Premium 10 per cent. The assurers are liable for loss by insurrection, but not by natural mortality. Each slave is valued at two hundred dollars. This policy is meant to take up the risk where a former policy leaves it, meaning no. 15,884 . . . dated June 13, 1803.

Case on behalf of the Claimant and Appellant.

The above Ship, laden with an assorted Cargo of India Goods and other Merchandizes, in Virtue of his Majesty's Royal Licence, sailed from the Port of London to Loango, on the Coast of Africa, where the said Goods were bartered for Slaves, with which she sailed for the River La Plata, and on entering the same he found the Ports under Blockade by his Majesty's Squadron under the Command of Sir Home Popham; that the Master was warned not to attempt to enter any Port except that of Maldonado, then in Possession of the English; but he afterwards received Permission to go to Monte Video, which the Master attempted, but on his Arrival at Monte Video, he was warned off by the Spaniards; from thence he went to Rio de Janeiro, and after staying there about a Month, taking in Provisions and Water and repairing his Ship, he sailed for the Havannah, and on the 6th March, 1807, the said Ship and Cargo were captured by the Private Ship of War the Elizabeth, George Cunningham, commander, and carried into the Island of Dominica.

On the 24th March following, Proceedings were commenced against the said Ship and Cargo as Prize, at the Suit of the Captor, in the Vice Admiralty Court for the Island of Barbadoes.

On the 17th April, the Judge of the said Court, no claim having been entered for the Ship and Cargo, condemned the same as lawful Prize to the Captors. . . .

Jonathan Gorham Fitch, Master.

To the First Interrogatory this Deponent saith, That he was born at Nantucket, that he had been chiefly at Sea for the last seven Years, and that he is a Subject of the United States.²

3. That the said Ship and Goods were taken on Friday, the 6th March, 1807, in about the Latitude of fifteen Degrees; that he believed they were seized for being bound to the Havannah; that the said Ship was brought into the Port of Roseau; that she sailed under American Colours; that she had no other Colours on board; and that no Resistance was made at the Time of the Capture.

4. That he was the Master, and was first appointed to the Command of the Ship by John Mackay, of Boston; that he took Possession of her about three Years ago at Buenos Ayres; that Richard Curtis was the Name of the Person who delivered him the Possession; and he believed the Place of his Residence was at Boston.³

6. That the whole of the Lading on board belonged to the Examinant; that neither he nor any of the Officers or Mariners had any Part, Share, or Interest in the Ship, except that the Examinant belonged to her in the Capacity of Master; and that she was built at Weymouth, in the State of Massachusetts.

²In his deposition Captain Fitch describes in more detail his various voyages. This seems to have been his first venture in slaves.

³Among the papers carried by the vessel was a clearance dated Portsmouth, Dec. 7, 1801: "Thomas Jefferson, President of the United States of America, to all who shall see these Presents; greeting. Be it known, that Leave and Permission are given to Richard Curtis, Master or Commander of the Bark called the Mendon, of the Burthen of 137 29/95ths Tons, or thereabouts, lying at present in the Port of Portsmouth, bound for the Cape of Good Hope, and laden with Brandy, Shooks, Hoops, Grindstones, Canvas, Axes, Steel, Cordage, Butter, Beef, Coals, Anvils, Rum, and Dry Goods, to depart and proceed with the said Bark on his said Voyage, such bark having been visited, and the said Master having made oath, before the proper Officer, that the said Bark and Cargo belongs to one or more of the Citizens of the United States of America, and to him or them only."

7. That her Name was the Mendon; that she had been so called since she was built; that she had a Sea-letter on board; that during the Voyage before she was taken she sailed from London to the Coast of Africa, and from thence bound to the River La Plata, at which Place he arrived about the 20th November then last past, and found that it was blockaded by his Britannic Majesty's Ships of War; that he then sailed in her for the Rio de Janeiro, and that her last Voyage began at London and was to have ended there; that her Lading on her first Voyage was with Slaves, from the Port of Mosambique bound to the River La Plata, at which Place they were sold, when the Examinant took Charge of her and loaded her with Tallow for the Port of London, where it was delivered; that she then carried Dry Goods to the River La Plata, there loaded Tallow, which was delivered at London; that her last Cargo was an assorted one of India Goods, taken in at London and delivered at the Bay of Loango, in Africa; that the last Port she sailed from was the Rio de Janeiro, which she left about the 20th January last, but that no Clearances were given since she left the Port of London.

8. That the Lading she carried at her first setting Sail was an assorted Cargo of India Goods and about three Pipes of Spirits, and that she had on board when captured seventy-five Slaves and some trifling Articles remaining of her outward-bound Cargo.⁴

9. That Mr. Mungo Mackay was the Owner of the Ship; he knew him to be the Owner from Information of his Agent, who chartered her to the Examinant; that such Owner was by Birth an American and resided in Boston, where he believed he had always resided.

10. That a Bill of Sale of the said Ship was made by Philip Riley to John Mackay, the Brother of Mungo Mackay, on Account of the said Mungo Mackay, at Buenos Ayres in the Presence of two Witnesses, which was delivered up to the Captors.

12. That he, the Examinant, was the Lader, Owner, and Consignee of the Cargo on board; that he now lived in London, and carried on his Business and Trade there; that he had been established there as a Resident for twelve Months; that before he went to Sea his Residence was at Nantucket; that the Ship was bound to the Havannah, where the Cargo would have been delivered if permitted, and for the real Account, Risk, and Benefit of the Examinant; that, at the Time of the lading of the Cargo, and at the present Time, and also if the same should be restored and unladen at the destined Port, the same did, do, and would belong to the Examinant, and to no other Person.

⁴ The cargo laden in London amounted to £1715 15 9. William Brunton, the captain's clerk, stated that it consisted of India goods, crockery, rum, and paints, and that the paint was still on board when the vessel was captured.

15. That a Charter-party was signed, which was delivered up with the Papers; that such Charter-party was made in March or April last past, between the Examinant and a Mr. William Todd, the Agent for the Ship at London, the Contents of which were, that the Examinant, for the Sum of five hundred Pounds Sterling, paid to Mr. Todd by him, was to have the Use of the said Ship so long as he chose, he keeping her in Order at his own Expence.

16. That there were on board the said Ship at the Time of her taking her Departure from her last clearing Port, before her being taken as Prize, a Register, Sea-letter, Mediterranean Pass, Bill of Sale, Charter-party, one Bill of Lading, with a Consul's Certificate attached to the same, the King's Licence, Invoices, Accounts, and two Protests; that none of them were burnt, torn, thrown overboard, destroyed, or cancelled, concealed, or attempted to be concealed, except the two Protests, which were still in Possession of the Examinant, but he had been shewn to the Captain of the Privateer.

19. That on his Departure from London he left Instructions with Messrs. Foster, Brunton, and Goddard, of London, to insure the said Ship and Goods on her Passage from London to Africa, and from Africa to the River La Plata, and back to London.

20. That in case the said Ship had arrived at her destined Port, the Examinant was to have taken the Chance of the Market for the Sale of his Goods.

21. That the Negroes were of the Congo Nation,⁵ and the other Articles remaining on board were of the Manufacture of Great Britain.

27. That all the Passports, Sea-briefs, Charter-parties, Bills of Sale, Invoices and Papers, which were found on board, were entirely true and fair; and that none of them were false or colourable; and that he knows of no Matter or Circumstance to affect their Credit; that the Passport and Sea-brief were obtained by Mr. Harne, of Massachusetts, for this Ship only; that he believed they were obtained upon the Oath of the Persons therein described, and were to last as long as the Ship was sea-worthy; that there was a Duty or Fee payable, and he believed they were paid; and that there was a Duty and Fee to be paid whenever they were renewed; that such Passports had not been renewed, to the Knowledge of the Examinant, and he believed the Ship was in the Port when the Sea-brief and Passports were granted.

29. That the Ship was steering her Course to the Havannah at the Time of her being first pursued and taken, and that her Course was not altered by the Appearance of the Vessel by which she was taken; that her Course was at all Times, when the Weather permitted, directed to the Havannah.

30. That the Ship was first sold to Mr. Riley, by her then Supercargo, whose Name he did not know; that such Sale was made at Buenos Ayres, but he did not know at what Time, for what Sum, or what Consideration, or whether such Sum was ever paid; she was afterwards sold by Mr. Riley to Mr. John Mackay, for his Brother, Mungo Mackay, at Buenos Ayres, for about 11,000 Dollars, to the best of his Recollection, which Sum was paid; that it was a fair and true Equivalent, and he believed such Sale and Transfer to have been truly made, and not for the Purpose of covering or concealing the real Property; and he verily believed if the said Ship should be restored she would belong to Mr. Mungo Mackay, and to no other Person. . . .

6. That he believed the Captain to be the sole Owner of the Ship and her Lading.

7. That after he shipped on board the said Ship she sailed from Loango, bound to Monte Video, but was detained by a British Squadron under Sir Home Popham, and carried to Maldonado; that from Maldonado she sailed to Monte Video, by Permission of Sir Home Popham; that the Ship was not allowed to enter there, and she then sailed for Rio de Janeiro, from whence she sailed bound for the Havannah or Charlestown, which would be most convenient; that the only Cargo of which he had any knowledge was her last outward-bound Cargo, consisting of Cloths, Earthen-ware, Spirits, and a small Quantity of Cutlery, which was delivered at Loango, excepting a small Part thereof then on board, and that the said Ship sailed from Rio de Janeiro about the 19th of January, then last past.

8. That the said Ship when taken, had on board Slaves and a few Articles of her outward-bound Cargo.

9. That to the best of his Knowledge the Captain was the Owner of the Ship when taken; that he believed he was the Owner at the Time from his having so informed the Examinant.

12. That Captain Fitch was the Lader, Owner, and Consignee of the Cargo then on board, which was to have been delivered at Charlestown or the Havannah for the real Account, Risk, and Benefit of the said Captain Fitch; that his Belief was founded on what Captain Fitch had informed him; and that he could take upon himself to swear he believed that at the Time of lading the Cargo, and at the present Time, and also if the same should be restored and unladen, the same did, does, and would belong to the said Captain Fitch, and to no other Person.

20. That he believed if the Cargo had been unladen at the destined Port it would have immediately become the Property of the said Captain Fitch, and of no other Person; and that he was to have taken the Chance of the Market for the Sale thereof.

21. That the Slaves on board were Natives of Africa; and that the remaining Articles of the outward-bound Cargo were of the Manufacture of Great Britain.⁷ . . .

81. ACT OF THE GENERAL COURT, MAY 19, 1652.¹

Whereas, there is a common course practised amongst English men to buy negers, to that end they may have them for service or slaves forever; for the preventinge of such practices among us, let it be ordered, that no blacke mankind or white being [be] forced by covenant bond, or otherwise, to serve any man or his assignes longer than ten yeares, or untill they come to bee twentie four yeares of age, if they bee taken in under fourteen, from the time of their cominge within the liberties of this Collonie. And at the end or terme of ten yeares to sett them free, as the manner is with the English servants. And that man that will not let them goe free, or shall sell them away elsewhere, to that end that they may bee enslaved to others for a long time, hee or they shall forfeit to the Collonie forty pounds.

⁹The cause was heard Apr. 17, 1807, before the judge of the vice admiralty court of Barbados, and the vessel and cargo were condemned as prize. An appeal from this decree was entered by Jonathan Gorham Fitch and John Mackay of Boston, brother and heir of Mungo Mackay. The Lords, having heard the proof read, reversed the earlier decision and restored the ship and cargo to the claimants.

For some knowledge of the share which Massachusetts took in importations into South Carolina between 1803 and 1807 see this work, vol. IV., South Carolina.

[81] ¹"Acts and Orders made at the Generall Court of Election held at Warwick", Rhode Island Colonial Records, I. 243. For a discussion of this measure see Du Bois, Suppression of the Slave Trade, pp. 33-34; W. D. Johnston, "Slavery in Rhode Island," Publications of the Rhode Island Historical Society, new ser., II. 114. This, the fourth law in this country limiting slavery, has no extant history. What lay behind it, how widespread was the desire for it, for how long, if ever, it was enforced, can only be surmised. It is not improbable that the Dutch from Manhattan made negro slaves available to the Rhode Island colonists, but no evidence of this has come to light. The fact that the act was passed at a time when commissioners from Newport and Portsmouth were not meeting with those of Providence and Warwick may have some significance, since the economic importance of slavery was clearly greater to the southern towns; but this again is surmise, as it is by no means manifest that such importance had as yet been recognized.

82. ACT OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY, APRIL, 1708.¹

And it is further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that whereas, by an act of Assembly, in February last past,² concerning the importing negroes, one article of said act, expressing that three pounds money shall be paid into the treasury for each negro imported into this colony; but upon exporting such negro in time limited in said act, said three pounds were to be drawn out of the treasury again by the importer:

It is hereby enacted, that said sum for the future, shall not be drawn out, but there continued for the use in said act expressed; any act to the contrary, notwithstanding.

83. GOVERNOR SAMUEL CRANSTON TO THE BOARD OF TRADE, 1708.¹

May it please your Lordships: In obedience to your Lordships' commands of the 15th of April last, to the trade of Africa.

We, having inspected into the books of Her Majesty's custom, and informed ourselves from the proper officers thereof, by strict inquiry, can lay before your Lordships no other account of that trade than the following viz.:

1. That from the 24th of June, 1698, to the 25th of December, 1707, we have not had any negroes imported into this colony from the coast of Africa, neither on the account of the Royal African Company, or by any of the separate traders.

2. That on the 30th day of May, 1696, arrived at this port from the coast of Africa, the brigantine Seaflower, Thomas Windsor, master, having on board her forty-seven negroes, fourteen of which he disposed of in this colony, for betwixt £30 and £35 per head; the rest he transported by land for Boston, where his owners lived.

3. That on the 10th of August, the 19th and 28th of October, in the year 1700,² sailed from this port three vessels, directly for the coast of Africa; the two former were sloops, the one commanded by Nicho's Hillgrove, the other by Jacob Bill: the last a ship, com-

[82] ¹"Proceedings of the General Assembly held for the Colony of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations, at Newport, the last Tuesday of April, 1708", R. I. Col. Recs., IV. 34.

² Various searchers in the Rhode Island material have failed to find either text or title of the February act (Du Bois, p. 205). If the statement in the act of 1715 is correct, a duty was laid upon incoming negroes as early as 1701/2. No other evidence of it has been found, however.

[83] ¹*R. I. Col. Recs.*, IV. 54-55. Governor Cranston was here replying to the circular letter sent out by the Board of Trade on Apr. 15, 1708, in preparation for its comprehensive report to the House of Commons of Jan. 27, 1709 (this work, II. 49-81). The governor's three letters of this date were read by the board on Dec. 12, 1709. Journal of the Board of Trade, 1708-1715, p. 104; R. I. Col. Recs., IV. 92.

² See ante, no. 28. Captain Windsor's expedition in 1696 was in violation of the monopoly of the African Company. While those of 1700 may have complied with the requirements of the law of 1698, it is quite likely that they too were encroachments upon the privileges of the company.

manded by Edwin Carter, who was part owner of the said three vessels, in company with Thomas Bruster, and John Bates, merchants of Barbadoes, and separate traders from thence to the coast of Africa; the said three vessels arriving safe to Barbadoes from the coast of Africa, where they made the disposition of their negroes.

4. That we have never had any vessels from the coast of Africa to this colony, nor any trade there, the brigantine above mentioned excepted.

5. That the whole and only supply of negroes to this colony, is from the island of Barbadoes; from whence is imported one year with another, betwixt twenty and thirty, and if those arrive well and sound, the general price is from £30 to £40 per head.³

According to your Lordships' desire, we have advised with the chiefest of our planters, and find but small encouragement for that trade to this colony; since by the best computation we can make, there would not be disposed in this colony above twenty or thirty at the most, annually; the reasons of which are chiefly to be attributed to the general dislike our planters have for them, by reason of their turbulent and unruly tempers.

And that most of our planters that are able and willing to purchase any of them, are supplied by the offspring of those they have already, which increase daily; and that the inclination of our people in general, is to employ white servants before negroes.

Thus we have given your Lordships a true and faithful account of what hath occurred, relating to the trade of Africa from this colony; and if, for the future, our trade should be extended to those parts, we shall not fail transmitting accounts thereof according to your Lordships' orders.⁴

NEWPORT, on RHODE ISLAND, December 5, 1708.

³ One specific purchase can be cited: William Hawkins of Providence purchased a negro from William Mackcollin, a Barbados merchant, on June 7, 1695. Early Records of the Town of Providence (1894), IV. 71-72.

⁴ Cranston accompanied this report by two others dealing with subjects about which the Board of Trade had asked information. A comparison of these reports with that sent to the board by Governor Peleg Sanford in 1680 shows that during the intervening quarter of a century Rhode Island had passed from a planting to a trading community. Sanford reported that there were no merchants nor men of considerable estates, no shipping save a few sloops, and no customs duties. The Newport custom-house was established in 1681; a duty on molasses was laid in 1696. During the '80's Rhode Island developed the great skill in distilling which was to play so large a part in her later commercial history. Cranston's account pictures a commercial society in close intercourse with the West Indies and ripe for wider trading ventures. Ship-building had already come to be one of the important activities of the colony during the preceding decade. The population was 7181, of which 426 were blacks. R. I. Col. Recs., IV. 55-59; Arnold, History of Rhode Island, I. 488-491.

And whereas, there was an act of Assembly made at _____, in the year _____, entitled an act, etc.:

It was then and there enacted, that for all negroes imported into this colony, there shall be £3 current money, of New England, paid into the general treasury of this colony for each negro, by the owner or importer of said negro; reference being had unto the said act will more fully appear.

But were laid under no obligation by the said act, to give an account to the Governor what negroes they did import, whereby the good intentions of said act were wholly frustrated and brought to no effect; and by the clandestinely hiding and conveying said negroes out of the town into the country, where they lie concealed:

For the prevention of which for the future, it is hereby enacted by the authority aforesaid, that from and after the publication of this act, all masters of vessels that shall come into the harbor of Newport, or into any port of this government, that hath imported any negroes or Indian slaves, shall, before he puts on shore in any port of this government, or in the town of Newport, any negroes or Indian slaves, or suffers any negroes or Indian slaves to be put on shore by any person whatsoever, from on board his said vessel, deliver unto the naval officer in the town of Newport, a fair manifest under his hand, which shall specify the full number of negroes and Indian slaves he hath imported in his said vessel, of what sex, with their names, the names of their owners, or of those they are consigned to; to the truth of which manifest so given in, the said master shall give his corporal oath, or solemn engagement unto the said naval officer, who is hereby empowered to administer the same unto him; . . .

But if the said master shall refuse to give to the said naval officer such a manifest as aforesaid, or to swear to the said manifest when so delivered to the said naval officer, then upon complaint of said naval officer, (whose oath shall be sufficient evidence in this case,) to the Governor, or in his absence, to the next officer of the peace in the town of Newport, the Governor, or the officer to whom the complaint is made, shall immediately issue out a warrant of distraint unto the sheriff or his deputy, to apprehend the body of the said master, and him to commit to Her Majesty's jail, there to remain without bail or mainprize until he hath paid the full sum of £40 current money, of New England, to the treasurer of this colony, for

And when the said master hath delivered his said manifest and sworn to it, as abovesaid, and before he hath landed on shore, or suffer to be landed, any negroes or Indian slaves as aforesaid, he, the said master, shall pay to the naval officer the sum of £3 current money, of New England, for each negro; and the sum of forty shillings of the like money for each Indian that shall be by him imported into this colony, or that shall be brought into the colony in the vessel whereof he is master.

But if he hath not ready money to pay down, as aforesaid, he shall then give unto the said naval officer a bill, as the law directs, to pay unto him the full sum above mentioned, for each and every negro and Indian imported as above said, which bill shall run payable in ten days from the entering the manifest as above said; and if at the end of the ten days, the said master shall refuse to pay the full contents of his bill, that then the said naval officer shall deliver the said bill unto the Governor, or in his absence, to the next officer of the peace, as aforesaid who shall immediately proceed with the said master in the manner above said, by committing of him to Her Majesty's jail, where he shall remain without bail or mainprize, until he hath paid unto the naval officer, for the use of this colony, double the sum specified in his said bill, and all charges that shall accrue thereby; which money shall be paid out by the said naval officer, as the General Assembly of this colony shall order the same.² . . .

This Assembly, taking into consideration that Newport is the metropolitan town in this colony, and that all the courts of judicature within this colony are held there; and also, that it is the chief market town in the government; and that it hath very miry streets, especially that leading from the ferry, or landing place, up to the colony house, so that the members of the courts are very much discommoded therewith, and is a great hindrance to the transporting of provisions etc., in and out of the said towns, to the great loss of the inhabitants thereof:

Thereof, be it enacted by this present Assembly, and by the authority thereof it is enacted, that the sum of £289 17 s. 3 d., now lying in the naval officer's hand, (being duties paid to this colony for importing of slaves),² shall be, and is hereby granted to the town of Newport, towards paving the streets of Newport, from the ferry place, up to the colony house, in said Newport; to be improved by their directors, such as they shall, at their quarter meetings appoint for the same.

And whereas, there was an act of Assembly, made at Newport, in the year 1701-2,³ for the better preventing of fraud and coven, in paying the duties for importing of negro and Indian slaves into this colony, and the same being found in some clauses deficient, for the effecting of the full intent and purpose thereof;

Therefore, it is hereby enacted by the authority aforesaid, that every master of ship, or vessel, merchant or other person or persons, [87] ¹ "Proceedings of the General Assembly, 1715," R. I. Col. Recs., IV. 191-193.

² Since this includes duties on Indian as well as negro slaves it does not make certain the number of negro importations.

importing or bringing into this colony any negro slave or slaves of what age soever,⁴ shall enter their number, names, and sex in the naval office; and the master shall insert the same in the manifest of his lading, and shall pay to the naval officer in Newport, £3 per head, for the use of this colony, for every negro, male or female, so imported, or brought in. And every such master, merchant, or other person, refusing or neglecting to pay the said duty within ten days after they are brought ashore in said colony, then the said naval officer, on knowledge thereof, shall enter an action and sue the recovery of the same, against him or them, in an action of debt, in any of His Majesty's courts of record, within this colony.

And if any master of ship or vessel, merchant or others, shall refuse or neglect to make entry, as aforesaid, of all negroes imported in such ship or vessel, or be convicted of not entering the full number, such master, merchant, or other person, shall forfeit and pay the sum of £6, for every one that he shall refuse or neglect to make entry, of one moiety thereof to His Majesty, for and towards the support of the government of this colony; and the other moiety to him or them that shall inform or sue for the same; to be recovered by the naval officer in manner as above said.

And also, all persons that shall bring any negro or negroes into this colony, from any of His Majesty's provinces adjoining, shall in like manner enter the number, names and sex, of all such negroes, in the above said office, under the penalty of the like forfeiture, as above said; and to be recovered in like manner by the naval officer, and shall pay into the said office within the time above limited, the like sum of £3 per head; and for default of payment, the same to be recovered by the naval officer in like manner as aforesaid.

Provided always, that if any gentleman, who is not a resident in this colony, and shall pass through any part thereof, with a waiting man or men with him, and doth not reside in this colony six months, then such waiting men shall be free from the above said duty; the said gentleman giving his solemn engagement, that they are not for sale; any act or acts, clause or clauses of acts, to the contrary hereof, in any ways, notwithstanding.

Provided, that none of the clauses in the aforesaid act, shall extend to any masters or vessels, who import negroes into this colony, directly from the coast of Africa.⁵

⁴In practice, infants were not subject to the duty. "It is ordered by this Assembly, that the duty of two sucking slaves imported into this colony by Col. James Vaughan, of Barbadoes, be remitted to the said James Vaughan." R. I. Col. Recs., IV. 209.

⁵This exemption may imply a desire to foster a trade not yet flourishing. There is little evidence to show the amount of direct trade between Africa and Newport at this time, or between Newport, Africa, and the West Indies. Robert Grieve,

And it is further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that the money raised by the impost of negroes, as aforesaid, shall be disposed of as followeth, viz.:

The one moiety of the said impost money to be for the use of the town of Newport, to be disposed of by the said town towards paving the streets of said town, and for no other use whatsoever, for and during the full time of seven years from the publication of this act; and that £60 of said impost money be for, and towards the erecting of a substantial bridge over Potowomut river, at or near the house of Ezekiel Hunt, in East Greenwich, and to no other use whatsoever.

And that Major Thomas Frye and Capt. John Eldredge be the persons appointed to order and oversee the building of said bridge, and to render an account thereof to the Assembly; and the said Major Frye and Capt. Eldredge to be paid for their trouble and pains, out of the remaining part of said impost money; and the remainder of said impost money to be disposed of as the Assembly shall from time to time see fit.⁶

88. A MINUTE OF THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS, 1717.¹

NEWPORT, 1717.

A weighty concern being on this Meeting concerning the importing and keeping slaves. This Meeting therefore refers it to the con-in an article on "The Sea Trade and its Development" (Edward Field, State of Rhode Island, 1903, II. 402), seems to imply that the assiento granted by the treaty of Utrecht to Great Britain stimulated Rhode Island commerce. Indirectly and after some years this may have affected the profits of Rhode Island traders somewhat, but in so far as it is possible to judge from existing material there is little to support the opinion that a direct increase in Rhode Island slaving resulted from the contract of 1713. In the "Remonstrance" of Rhode Island against the continuance of the Molasses Act, in 1764, the implication is that the people of the colony regarded 1723 as the year in which their trade to the African coast became one of importance.

⁶At the meeting of the Assembly of May, 1716, it was reported that there was not sufficient money from the impost on negroes to meet the payment of £60 here ordered, and the Assembly voted to take £20 from the general treasury to make good the deficiency. In October, 1717, the Assembly ordered that £100 from the imposts on slaves be paid to the overseer who had charge of paving the Newport streets. The act was modified June 18, 1723, when it was "Voted, that Mr. Daniel Updike, the attorney general, be, and he hereby is ordered, appointed and empowered to gather in the money due to this colony, for the importation of negroes, and to prosecute, sue and implead such person or persons as shall refuse to pay the same; and that he be allowed five shillings per head, for every slave that shall be hereafter imported into this colony, out of the impost money; and that he be also allowed ten per cent. more for all such money as he shall recover of the outstanding debts; and in all respects to have the like power as was given to the naval officer by the former act." In June, 1729, it was provided that half the duty on slaves was to be set aside for the paving of Newport streets, the other half for the support of "the great bridges on the main, in the country roads". R. I. Col. Recs., IV. 209, 225, 330, 424.

[88] ¹R. M. Jones, The Quakers in the American Colonies (1911), p. 157. In 1727 the Yearly Meeting voted: "It is the sense of this Meeting, that the importation of Negroes from their native country and relations is not a commendable nor allowable practice and that practice is censured by this Meeting." The difference in the wording of this suggests that the direct importation from Africa may have become more common sideration of Friends everywhere to waite for the wisdom of God how to discharge themselves in that weighty affair, and desires it may be brought up from our Monthly and Quarterly Meetings to our next Yearly Meeting, and also that merchants do write their correspondents in the islands and elsewhere to discourage their sending any more (slaves) in order to be sold by Friends here.

NEW-PORT, RHODE-ISLAND, June 2d, 1721.

By Order of the Court of Admiralty, There are Nineteen Negroes whereof Two are Men, Eleven Women, Four Boyes and Two Girls, to be Exposed to Sale by Publick Vendue on Wednesday the Fourteenth Day of this Instant June, at Two of the Clock in the Afternoon, at the Town School-House of said New Port.² . . . Where all Persons that are inclined to buy the said Negroes, Cocoa or Sugars; or any one of the said Negroes, or part or parcel of said Cocoa or Sugars, are hereby invited to resort. The Conditions of Sale to be seen at the Coffee House, and at the Register's Office, both in said New Port at any Convenient Hours Three Days preceeding the time of Sale.

RHODE ISLAND, June 23, 1721.³

The Sale of the Negro's, Cocoa and sugars, which by Decrees of the Honourable John Menzeis Esq: Judge of the Court of Admiralty were appointed to be sold on the 14 and 15 Instant and continued to this day, and the Prices to be paid in and secured, as by the said Decrees and Conditions of Sale published by Warrant of the said Judge will appear; which sale being obstructed most illegally by An Act of the Governour and his Assistants (a Copy of which was refused when demanded by said Judge) on pretence that the ordering and disposal of such belongs to them by their Charter, and that the Governour of Rhode Island as Vice-Admiral hath a Right to the since 1717. For the attitude of two prominent Rhode Island Friends toward slavery see Caroline Hazard, Thomas Hazard, Son of Robt., call'd College Tom (1893), pp. 43-45; Wilkins Updike, History of the Narragansett Church (1847), I. 174; Jones, op. cit., pp. 157-158.

[89] ¹*Boston News Letter*, June 5, 1721. John Menzies, judge of the vice admiralty court in Boston, on July 20, 1721, wrote an account of the events which in all probability led to this sale. Two Whipples, Christopher Almy, and Norton were concerned in a vessel which had been seized by the pirate Roberts off St. Lucia. After six or seven weeks the pirates captured a Dutch vessel, loaded it with sugar, cocoa, and negroes, and sent Norton off to dispose of the cargo. He anchored in Tarpaulin Cove, between Rhode Island and Massachusetts, and here his confederates sent sloops to convey the goods to Providence Plantations. The attention of the customs officers of both Massachusetts and Rhode Island was attracted and that portion of the cargo not already disposed of was seized. Acts of the Privy Council, Colonial, VI. 135-136.

³ News Letter, June 29, 1721; Jameson, Privateering and Piracy, pp. 318-322.

Value, if no Owner appear, (tho' their Charter contains no such Priviledge or grant:) The Judge considering these proceedings to be an unjustifiable incroachment upon His Majesty's Right, and the Authority of the Court and Jurisdiction of Admiralty by him Constitute; as also considering a Publication of Articles or Conditions of sale put up and signed by John Wanton and Nathaniel Kay Esqr; in other Terms than the said Judge had ordained, and whereby they had appointed two parts of the produce to be Lōdged in their own hands, and the third to be given to the said Governour, And this, notwithstanding that the Judges Decree as to the Negro's was upon an Information laid by the said Kay in the Court of Admiralty: As also considering that Thomas Flower surveyor and searcher at this Port had refused to deliver supplies of the Cocoa and Sugars condemned to be sold upon a Libel filed at his instance: He the said Judge did Ordain the said Wanton, Kay and Flower to be summoned before him, to answer for their contempt of the said Decrees, and disobeying the Authority and Jurisdiction of His Majesty's said Court; And upon their Non Appearance the Judge Amerced the said Thomas Flower in 10 l. Nathaniel Kay in 50 l. and John Wanton who persevered in his contempt and threatened the Marshall of Court with Imprisonment for offering to serve the citation against him in the like sum of 50 l.

It is also observable, That this Day and the Day preceeding, the Doors of the Court-house were shut up and the Judge of Admiralty denied access thereunto, unless he would comply with their Acts of Council, which to him appeared a betraying of the trust reposed in him, if he should have complied therewith, and therefore was obliged to hold the Court elsewhere.⁴

92. THE VOYAGE OF THE LITTLE GEORGE, 1730.¹

Since our last² we have had a more particular Account of the Negroes rising and overcoming Capt. George Scot of Rhode Island, in his return from Guinea, which we have been desired to Insert: And it is as follows, viz.

I George Scott, (the Scriber) Master of the Sloop the Little George, belonging to Rhode Island; Sailed from the Bonnana Islands on the Coast of Guinea, the first of June 1730, having on Board Letter. The dates given are those of the issue of the paper. The actual date of the entry is usually a day or two earlier.

²"In the fall we expect negroes here directly from Guinea, a vessel having sailed from here [Boston] and one from Rhode Island". Weeden, Economic and Social History of New England, II. 456, quoted from the "Amory MSS."

³This may be the Jeremiah Clark whose capture by the Spaniards and recapture by pirates had been reported in the News Letter, May 16, 1723. Possibly it was also that Jeremiah Clark who arrived from South Carolina with the story that Capt. Richard Duffie of Rhode Island had been taken by the pirate Sprigs, who later gave him not only his liberty but 25 negroes. Ibid., Jan. 28, 1725.

⁴The Newport Hist. Mag. (III. 56) prints a painter's bill of 1728, which contains the items: £3 for painting the sloop Betty, Matthew Malbone; £16 for painting the Charming Betty, George Scott.

[91] ¹Newport Hist. Soc., Redwood Letter-Book, no. 644, pp. 4, 5. The Byam family was a numerous and important one in Antigua. The elder Edward Byam had been president of the Council of Antigua and lieutenant governor of the Leeward Islands. A few months after the date of this letter he was commissioned lieutenant governor of Antigua. The writer of the letter was probably his son Edward, who acted as attorney for Redwood.

Abraham Redwood, sr., born in Bristol, Eng., once the commander of a vessel trading between London and Jamaica, later a planter in Antigua, had removed first to Salem, then to Newport, some years before this. He retained his extensive sugar plantations, and since it is with plantation affairs that many of the letters of this correspondence deal only a few of them have been printed in the Rhode Island material. Abraham Redwood, jr., merchant and philanthropist of Newport, was born in Antigua, educated in Philadelphia, married and settled in Newport. Newport Hist. Mag., I. 7-16; Commerce of Rhode Island, I. 1 n.

²As Redwood's wife was Martha Coggeshall, Daniel was doubtless a connection of his. In the letter of Apr. 11, 1731, a part of which follows, Nugent writes of loading goods for "your brother-in-law Mr. Coggshell", who, according to the editor of Commerce of Rhode Island (I. 16 n.), was David Coggeshall.

[92] ¹*News Letter*, May 6, 1731. The account is signed by George Scott.

²The first notice of this disaster appeared in the News Letter, Apr. 29, 1731.

Ninety six Slaves (thirty five of which were Men.) On the 6th of said Month at half an hour past four of the Clock in the Morning, being about 100 Leagues distant from the Land, the Men Slaves got off their Irons, and making way thro' the bulkhead of the Deck, killed the Watch consisting of John Harris Doctor, Jonathan Ebens Cooper, and Thomas Ham Sailor; who were, tis thought, all asleep. I being then in my Cabin and hearing a Noise upon Deck (they throwing the Watch overboard) took my Pistol directly, and fired up the Scuttle which was abaft, which made all the Slaves that were loose run forwards except one or two Men (who seemed to laugh at the Cowardice of the rest, and defiance of us, being but 4 Men and a Boy) who laid the Scuttle, and kept us down confin'd in the Cabin, and passing by the Companion to view us, we Shot two Men Slaves.

On so sudden a surprize, we were at a loss what to do, but consulting together, filled two round Bottles with Powder, putting Fuses to them, in order to send them among the Slaves, with a Design at the same instant of Time, to issue out upon them, and either suppress them or loose our Lives; but just as we were putting our design in Execution, one of the Slaves let fall an Ax (either thro' accident or design) which broke the Bottle as Thomas Dickinson was setting fire to the Fuze, and taking fire with a Cagg of Powder, in the Cabin, rais'd up the Deck, blew open the Cabin Doors and Windows, discharged all our fire Arms but one, distroyed our Cloaths and burnt the Man that had the Bottle in his hand in a most miserable manner, and my self with the rest very much hurt thereby.

Upon this unhappy accident, we expected no less than immediate Death, which would have been unavoidable, had they at that Juncture of time, rushed in upon us. And being in this consternation and hopeless, sent up the Boy in order (if possible) to bring them to Terms, but they slighted our Message. And soon after (the Smoke clearing out of the Cabin) we found the other Bottle of Powder which by Providence had not taken fire, and which put new Life and vigour into us, that we were resolved to withstand them to the uttermost; and accordingly Loaded our Arms and Shot several of the Slaves, which occasioned all the Men Slaves to betake themselves to the Quarter Deck, over our Heads. The Slaves then got two Swivel Guns, and filled them almost full with Powder, which they found in the fore Hold, as they were looking for Provisions, and designed to blow the Bulkhead in upon us, which they put fire to several times, but could not get off by reason of wet Weather. We had two Carriage Guns in the Boat, which we expected the Slaves would get out, and therefore watched them very narrowly; but in a dark Night they effected it, and brought them upon the Quarter Deck; they loaded one of the Guns, and pointed it directly down the Scuttle: we hearing them about the Scuttle and having prepar'd ourselves; so soon as they lifted it up, we Shot the Man dead that pointed the Gun, another of the Slaves standing by clapt a Match to it and fir'd it off, which blew the Scuttle all to pieces and some of the Deck, but did us no Damage. They then took pieces of Boards and laid them over the Scuttle and the Hole they had made in the Deck, and laid the Tarpawlin, with a great Weight upon them to prevent our coming up.

Then they made Sail (as they thought) towards Land and were continually heaving down Billets of Wood, and Water into the Cabin, with intention to Disable us and spoil our small Arms. And the Fourth Day after the Rising made the same Land we departed from, then stood off and on again for 4 or 5 Days more, in which time the Boy being forced by Hunger, run up among the Slaves, who immediately put him in Irons. They made several attempts to come down into the Cabin, but their Courage fail'd them. I then call'd to them to come down to decide the Matter, they answer'd, by and by.

Finding our selves grow very weak, thro' these hardships, and for want of sustenance; we thought it proper before our Strength was quite spent to take some desperate Course. I proposed to cut away the Cieling and bore some Holes thro' the Vessels Bottom, which being approved on, was directly done, and let in about three feet of Water, I then called to the Slaves, and told them, I would drown them all, which frightened them exceedingly: They then sent the Boy to the Cabin Door, to tell us, that they had but just made the Land, and that when they got a little nearer the Shore, they would take the Boat and leave them with the Young Slaves: I told them if they would do that I would not sink her. (My design in letting the Water in, was to force the Vessel on her side that we might get some advantage.) They stood in for the Land about 12 a Clock at Night, struck upon the Bar of Serrilone River, and were in great Danger of being lost. The Vessel being strong beat over the Bar, and they run Ashore about 3 Leagues up the River, on the North Side; being then High Water, and at Seven a Clock the next Morning there was not above a foot of Water along side.

The Natives waded from the Shore with fire Arms, wou'd have fain try'd to overcome us, but were perswaded from it by the Slaves on Board, who told them we should shoot them if they appeared in our Sight. They perswaded the grown Slaves to go Ashore, and drove the Young ones over board and then followed them, making the Vessel shake at their Departure. Our Boy assuring us the Slaves had all left the Vessel, we immediately went up with our Arms, and saw the Slaves just Ashore. We found our great Guns loaded quite full. And as we hoisted out our Boat, the Natives mustered very thick on the Shore and fired at us divers time. We made what haste we could to the other side of the River, where we Rowed down about two Leagues, and found a Sloop riding in French-man's Bay belonging to Montserat, James Collingwood Commander, where we refreshed our selves, being all of us in a weak and miserable condition, having had nothing to subsist upon, during the Nine Days we were under this Affliction but Raw Rice.

94. WALTER NUGENT TO ABRAHAM REDWOOD, 1731.¹

ANTIGUA, April the 11th, 1731.

Worthy Sir, . . . I send you two Negroes; if you like them

[93] ¹ The entries are from the Weekly Rehearsal, the dates being those of the issue of the paper, not of the customs entries.

² News reached Newport in October, 1732, that Captain Perkins had been killed on the coast on Apr. 27, 1732, in a negro uprising on his vessel (Weekly Rehearsal, Oct. 30, 1732; News Letter, Oct. 27, Nov. 2, 1732; South Carolina Gazette, Dec. 9, 1732). Items concerned with the slave trade were copied from paper to paper in the colonies, so that whatever information reached America from Africa was thoroughly disseminated.

³ "We hear from the West Indies, that Capt. Hammond in a Sloop (belonging to Capt. Malbone of Rhode Island) in his Passage from Guinea to Barbados, having on board 55 fine Slaves in Lat. 9 Long. 37 was over set and all the Slaves Drowned, the Capt. with 8 Men, after being 6 Days in their Boat, 3 Days of which without Victuals and Drink, got safe to the West Indies." News Letter, Mar. 6, 1740.

95. ORDER OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY, JUNE, 1731.¹

Whereas, James Cranston, naval officer of the colony, has set forth to this Assembly, that near a twelve-month since, one Mr. Royall imported into this colony forty-five negroes, on which there was a duty of £3 per head, and not long after, sixteen of said negroes were transported into the Province of the Massachusetts Bay, where there is a duty payable also; and prayed for directions how to proceed in said affair.

Upon consideration whereof, it is voted and ordered, that the duty to this colony of the said sixteen negroes transported into the Massachusetts Bay, as aforesaid, be taken off and remitted; but that he collect the duty of the other twenty-nine.²

96. ACT OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY, MAY, 1732.¹

Whereas, there was an act made and passed by the General Assembly at their session, held at Newport, the 27th day of February, 1711, entitled "An act for laying a duty on negro slaves that shall be imported into this colony," and this Assembly being directed by His Majesty's instructions to repeal the same;

Therefore, be it enacted by the General Assembly, and by the authority of the same it is enacted, that the said act, and every clause

² There seems to be no evidence that this act of repeal encountered any objection on the part of the colony. Her ready compliance with the royal instructions was later cited as a proof of merit by James Martin, secretary of Rhode Island, in a letter to Richard Partridge, colonial agent: Sept. 6, 1734, "This Colony always paid a due Deference and Regard to any Orders and Instructions either from his Majesty or the Board of Trade And did immediately upon Receipt of an Order from that Board repeal an Act for laying a Duty upon Slaves imported here" (Gertrude S. Kimball, Correspondence of the Colonial Governors of Rhode Island, I. 63-64). The prompt repeal of the duty is also referred to by the governor on Dec. 1, 1735, in response to a question from the Board of Trade, when he wrote: "We had only a Duty of £3 per head on Negroes imported from the West Indies (and then exempted therefrom All directly from Africa) Which Act was immediately repealed upon the receipt of an Order from Your Hon'ble Board" (ibid., I. 73). It is entirely probable that it was by this time obvious, both to the Rhode Island merchants dealing in slaves and to those interested in the revenues of the colony, that importation into Rhode Island was, and would continue to be, inconsiderable and that the repeal of the duty act was a matter of small consequence. Johnston's implication that an increase in trade resulted from the repeal can hardly be supported by the evidence which he cites. When Governor Hopkins wrote of eighteen vessels annually sent to the coast he was not referring to the trade into Rhode Island alone but to those vessels which carried negroes to the West Indies as well, a point which Johnston does not make clear ("Slavery in Rhode Island," R. I. Hist. Soc., Pubs., new ser., II. 124). It is however true that the increase in the negro population of Rhode Island between 1730 and 1748 was surprisingly large. In 1730 there were 1648 blacks, in 1748, 3077. Updike calls attention to the fact that the enumeration for 1730 did not include the towns east of the bay, a fact which would account for part of the increase. Updike, Narragansett Church, I. 169.

[97] ¹ For the accounts which follow the editor is indebted to Professor B. M. Bigelow, of Brown University, who came upon them among miscellaneous papers in the Newport Historical Society. They are apparently sheets from a trade-book, possibly made up some years after the trade, since items of 1740 and 1741 appear along with those of 1733 and 1736. Some of these items seem to have little to do with the slave trade. The editor has taken the liberty of arranging the entries in so far as it was possible according to date. On a separate sheet, not here printed, the item "To what Expended on the Snow Unity" appears once or twice but it is not clear that the trade here described is that of the Unity.

98. JAMES BROWN TO ———, 1736.¹

S'r, I Understand by Capt. Mitchel that you had some thoughts of going in my Vessel to Guinia, and these are to Informe you that if you have, I would have you come up as soon as you can in Order that we may Agree upon the Voiage, we want some body that is Acquainted in Sheathing of Vessells, and if you can bring such a man up with you I shall be glad, provided you come in a day or two, I design to begin to grave her to-morrow but we have nobody here that is acquainted with that work.

99. JOHN CAHOONE, JR., TO STEPHEN AYRAULT (?), 1736.¹

ANAMABO, Octobr the 27th, 1736.

Sir, After My Respects to you: these may Inform how it is with me at present. I bles god I Injoy my health very well as yett: but am like to have a long and trublesom Voyge of it, for there never was so much Rum on the Coast at one time before, Nor the Like of the [98] ¹R. I. Hist. Soc., Letter-Book of James Brown, 1735-1739. This is an undated fragment, without superscription, placed between letters of Mar. 28, and Apr. 6, 1736. On Apr. 9 Brown wrote to a Mr. Marcy that he could spare no more rum, since he was himself fitting out a vessel with rum. The reference in the two letters is undoubtedly to the Mary, which sailed for Africa in 1736, with John Godfrey as captain and Obadiah Brown as supercargo (see Gertrude S. Kimball, Providence in Colonial Times, 1912, pp. 245-248; also, post, no. 101). James and Obadiah Brown, brothers, were in business together at this time. After the death of James in 1739 Obadiah carried on the business, first alone, then with the four sons of James—Nicholas, Joseph, John, and Moses.

[99] ¹*Commerce of R. I.*, I. 46-47. G. C. Mason, in "The African Slave Trade in Colonial Times" (Am. Hist. Rec., I. 312), substituted the name John Griffin for that of the writer of this letter. The group of Newport captains engaged in the slave trade before the Revolution, to which Cahoone belonged, was superior to many of the men concerned in this traffic. Most of them were members of the Fellowship Club of Newport, the rules of which precluded gaming, drunkenness, quarrelling, and all oaths. To this society they contributed 6*d.* for each month of a successful voyage and received aid after an unsuccessful one. Among the members are found: Abraham All, Charles Bardine, Peleg Clarke, John Jepson, Thomas Carpenter, Caleb Gardner, Jeremiah Clarke, William English, Peter Dordin, James Duncan, George Champlin, and six members of the Wanton family. Newport Hist. Mag., IV. 163-177.

100. VESSELS OF GODFREY MALBONE, 1737-1738.¹

NEWPORT, RHODE ISLAND, February 21 [1737].

We are also inform'd from Guinea by the way of the West-Indies, That the Scooner Haddock, belonging to Capt. Godfrey Malbone of New-Port, was over-set and intirely lost, having on board Eight Slaves and a Quantity of Gold Dust; one Aldridge Master and all his Hands only saved.

RHODE ISLAND, June 2 [1738].

By a private Letter from the West Indies, to a Gentleman here, we are inform'd, That a very fine Sloop belonging to Capt. Godfrey Malbone of this Place was totally consum'd by the Lightning on the Coast of Guinea, with a great many Negroes on board. Capt. Caleb Godfrey, Commander, and his Company saved their Lives by taking to the Long Boat.

²The French were at this time not only making inroads on the English trade in the region of the Gambia River, where the two nations were always rivals, but were attempting to gain a foothold on the Gold Coast, probably in order to meet the needs of Louisiana and their Sugar Colonies. Of any move which suggested French aggrandizement in Africa or in the West Indies the English were instantly suspicious. Adam Anderson, Origins of Commerce (Dublin, 1790), III. 483.

³The New England traders. They alone made rum the staple for trade on the West Coast, though later in the century the term was occasionally used to include any West India captain who carried rum as his major commodity.

[100] ¹*News Letter*, Mar. 3, 1737, June 8, 1738. Godfrey Malbone, of Virginia birth, was a picturesque privateer and slave trader of Newport for more than twenty years. Redwood purchased a negro from him on Oct. 29, 1733, paying £90 (Wetmore Papers, vol. 1). Edward Peterson tells that on one occasion a slaver owned by Godfrey and John Malbone was attacked by pirates, whereupon the captain offered freedom to all the slaves who would join in defending the vessel. The enemy was repulsed, and the freed slaves settled on the Malbone estate in Pomfret, Conn. History of Rhode Island (1853), p. 103.

NEWPORT Feb. 27th 1737/8.

My dear friend, I have wrote you Several letters lately and very largely about all your affairs so have now but little to add especially since I have wrote you and Colo Tesselissour [?] in Company relating your Snow Martha and Jane and Inclosed all her accounts in said letter. I have to the Utmost of my power Endeavoured to fit her in the best and Cheapest manner I Could but her Charge notwithstanding Runs high. I must as a Sincere friend tell you I wish you were Clear of her She is an Unlucky Changable Beast She has never got you any thing and I am afraid She never will and if my advice is worthy of your Notice I would not Send her another Guinea Voyage for by frequent advices from thence there is no prospect of makeing a Voyage I Should much reather if I might have my Choice that you would Load her of your Plantation and Com home in her your Self. I firmly believe it would be to your advantage. . . .

103. FRANCIS WILKS AND ZACHARIAH BOURRYAU TO ABRAHAM REDWOOD, 1740.¹

LONDON, 25th Jany 1739/40.

Sir, . . . The foregoing is Copy of our last, since which we had your favour of the 22d Augt. pursuant to which we made 1000 Insurance for your Accot on the Snow Martha and Jane, Francis Pope, at and from Rhode Isl'd to Africa West Indies and Rhode Island as £13 pCt. which was the best terms I could get it done.² . . .

104. ABRAHAM REDWOOD (?) TO JAMES WOODCOCK, 1740.¹

NEWPORT ON RHODE ISLAND April 4th 1740.

Dear Friend, . . . I took some pains in the Affair, shewd the goods to several Persons, one of whom was Capt: Mallbone, the most considerable Trader of any here to the Coast of Guinea . . . the highest he offered for them was 430 per Ct, [?] he said it [102] ¹Newport Hist. Soc., Lopez Letter-Book, no. 621, p. 1. The presence of this letter in the Lopez Letter-Book would indicate that it was written to Aaron Lopez, and it is thus listed in the index, yet this can hardly be the case. Lopez did not come to Newport until 1752, which makes it highly improbable that any Newport merchant should in 1738 urge him to "come home." The fact that Redwood owned a West Indian plantation, the produce of which could be loaded for Rhode Island, and that he possessed a Martha and Jane makes it reasonable to surmise that the letter was written to him, though its presence in the Lopez Letter-Book goes unexplained.

[103] ¹Newport Hist. Soc., Redwood Letter-Book, no. 644, p. 66. Francis Wilks was the London agent for Massachusetts; Bourryau was a London merchant whose family had settled in St. Christopher. Jameson, Privateering and Piracy, pp. 449, 450 n.

²On May 14, 1741, the Martha and Jane was sold to Coleman and Sparhawk of Boston for £1000. Redwood Letter-Book, no. 645.

[104] ¹Redwood Letter-Book, no. 644, p. 68. An unsigned letter, probably from Redwood.

was not a proper Sortment, and that some of the Goods were charged too high 15 per Ct. I tried our other Traders to Guinea, who made the same Objections that Capt. Mallbone had done and some of them said the Goods looked as if they had been already on the Coast.

D'r Sir, I wrote to these few Lines that I have discharged the most Part of my People and the second mate being sick I discharged him to come home and paid Sum of them hear and Sir I have drawe orders upon you to Pay the Second mate sixty five pounds four shillings and the Carpenter seventeen pounds thirteen shilling and eigh[t] pence Rhoad island Currancy² which I hope you will except the order and Pay them for I think to keep as few men as Possable for tis to your advantage and wee have nineteen slaves unsold but hope to sell them in a very Little time.³ . . .

106. CAPTAIN GEORGE SCOTT TO ———, 1740.¹

June the 13th 1740 At Sea Latt. 8 30 N.,

Long. 39 30 W.

Gentlemen, Meeting with this oppertunity I was very glad to acquaint you of our Miserable voyage. We left Anamabo the 8th of May, with most of our people and Slaves Sick, we have Lost 29 Slaves, our purchase was 129. My Negro Bonner is Deed, the Slaves we have Left is now I think all recovered. We have five that's Swell'd and how it will be with them I cant tell, we have one-third of dry Cargo Left, and two hhgs. rum, if I had Staid there to a sold I believe we should [have] Lost all our Slaves. I think to [105] ¹Redwood Letter-Book, no. 644, p. 71. On Feb. 7, 1739, William Byam, either cousin or nephew of Edward, wrote to Redwood that Gold Coast negroes were in demand and that if Captain Pope should arrive before long he would do very well with his cargo. Ibid., p. 61.

²At the beginning of the century the equivalent of one ounce of silver was about 8 s., by 1730 it was about 20 s., and by 1740, 27 s. Redwood was one of the group of Rhode Island merchants who had in 1732 opposed further currency issues. Richman, Rhode Island, pp. 71-72.

³On June 8 and 29 there are letters to Redwood, apparently from Pope, in which there is mention of various misfortunes connected with his arrival in Antigua, but no reference to his cargo. On July 14 he wrote that he had taken on a cargo of rum and sugar, probably from Redwood's own plantation, and was about to sail for Newport.

[106] ¹R. I. Hist. Soc., G. C. Mason, Reminiscences, III. 218. The letter bears no endorsement of any kind. With some changes it was printed in Mason's "African Slave Trade" (Am. Hist. Rec., I. 317). On Apr. 9, 1740, Captain Scott had written to his brother Daniel from Anamabo that he had on board 60 men, 20 women, and some boys and girls. He had not yet decided whether to carry the cargo to Jamaica or Virginia. Ibid., I. 342-343.

proceed for Antigo and fitt the Sloop and take the other trial on the coast, it will not doe to give out for one bad bout. If i goe directly back I'll sell the rum for gold if i gitt but twenty pence a gallon for it before i'll by slaves, the slaves thats Died I blieve there was none above twenty two years old and none under fourteen. I have sent by Capt. Lindsey Sixteen Ounces of gold, wich is all. I wrote you by Capt. Kinecutt who saild the 10th April, I have repented a hundred times the bying of them dry goods, had we Layed out two Thousand pound in rum bread and flower, it would purchased more in value then all our dry goods. I have paid a great part of the wages. My Serviss to all Freinds, pray Excuse all blunders for I am now aboard Capt. Lindsey and in haste to gitt aboard.

P. S. If I cant sell at Antego, so as I think is a good price I'll go to Jamico. G. S.

Capt. Eldred Shipt by me four Ounces gold wich I have sent by Capt. Lindsey to Mr. Ayrault. G. S.²

107. JOHN GUNTHORP TO ABRAHAM REDWOOD, 1740.¹

ANTIGUA July the 22th 1740.²

Deare Abraham, . . . I am heartilly sorry Pope has againe made you so bad a Voyage too and from the Coast of Guinea, Especially as I am given to understand, you have made a considerable purchase of lands in Rhoad Island and depend in a greate measure upon the returns of your Guinee cargoes to fullfill your engadgments therein wch faling short so greatly of yr expectations, must be a very greate disapointment to you; I hoape there is no occasion for a Friends advice to you, to pursue the Guinea trade no further, under the direction of Capt. Poape, who experience may teache you from your severe sufferings therein, has not the qualifications necessary to carry on that trade to advantage, surely he must think himself well rewarded and recompensd for any merit or claime he is intitld too, if you keepe him imployed in a small sloop, carrying your effects backwards and forward from your Towne to this place.³ . . . , ² On July 14, 1740, Henry Bonnin of Antigua wrote, probably to Redwood, that he had heard from Captain Scott, who was then at St. Eustatius, with forty slaves still to be disposed of. He hoped there to obtain rum for his next voyage to Africa. Redwood Letter-Book, no. 644, p. 33.

[107] ¹ Redwood Letter-Book, no. 644, p. 74.

³ Captain Pope had been master of vessels in which Redwood was interested at least since 1731. Eight years before this Gunthorp had written a very different estimate of his ability: Apr. 23, 1732, "I should not doe Captain Pope justice if I did not acquaint you of his Diligence in your bussiness, and singular care and regard to your interest, and take my word for itt, that whenever you part with him, you will scarce meet with his equal for fidelity to serve you." Commerce of R. I., I. 29.

[108] ¹Newport Hist. Soc., John Bannister Letter-Book, no. 66, p. 2. Joseph Manesty, a Liverpool merchant, is best known as the friend and employer of John Newton during his slaving career (this work, II. 496). Gomer Williams occasionally refers to him as connected with the commercial ventures of Liverpool (History of the Liverpool Privateers, 1897, pp. 82, 149, 496, 518). John Bannister (or Banister), whose grandfather and father had been Boston merchants, came to Newport sometime after 1733. In 1739 he was in London, probably to arrange connections for the business which he was establishing in Rhode Island. Not only merchant but privateer, he was at one time concerned in three privateering vessels. Darius Baker, in his sketch of the "Newport Banisters," describes him as of "marked business ability, active, alert, shrewd, bold and masterful." Newport Hist. Soc., Bulletin, no. 43, p. 5.

on the Queen Elizabeth Capt. James Neal which I desire you will make the most of for my Account and take all opportunities of causing the Carpenters etc to take Goods on acco't of these Vessels. . . . You will find some Nails in my Goods which I intend to be used in my Two Vessels and Expect you will manage so as to make the Sheating Nails and single Spikes do for Sheating them and if any more is wanting we can easily mend it here. I wou'd not have any Bolts in the Butts I think it quite needless for double Vessels. as you said Iron was as cheap with you as here I have not sent any so leave that part to your discretion but as Insurance is very high wou'd have as little money laid out on the Vessels as possible and if heads to them will be any Charge above £4 Sterling a Ship don't put any more than a piece before the Stern for Securing Gamaning of Bow-sprit. as both Ships are design'd for Guinea a great regard must be had to the goodness of their Masts on the whole. the good opinion of your knowledge and integrity has put me on this Scheme so I make no doubt of your Executing it in a frugal Suitable manner. . . . shou'd it happen that a Vessel of or near the Dimentions of one of these order'd can immediately be bought Cheap² with you or of any other Size suitable for Affrica I shou'd choose to do it and build only one if that can be done. . . .

110. INSTRUCTIONS TO CAPTAIN POLLIPUS HAMMOND, 1746.¹

If you have a good Trade for Negroes may purchase forty or Fifty Negroes. get most of them mere Boys and Girl, some Men, let them be Young, No very small Children. make all possable Dispatch, take care of your Vessells Bottom. If you meet with disapointment in your Trade architect Peter Harrison, was at this time a Newport merchant. He later became collector of customs in Boston.

²G. C. Mason cites one Rhode Island vessel which was to cost £24 old tenor per ton in 1747. Five years later a sloop could be built in Newport for £27 per ton, a "double decker" for £34 per ton, while in Swansea, in the upper part of the province, the prices were one-fifth less. "African Slave Trade," Am. Hist. Rec., I. 313.

William Ellery, the owner of the Anstis and the signer of this letter, was a graduate of Harvard College, a successful Newport merchant, judge, and lieutenant governor, and the father of the signer of the Declaration of Independence. The sloop here mentioned may have been named after his daughter Anstis. The invoice of its cargo, consisting of rum, pork, beef, tar, flour, tobacco, and sugar, amounted to £7064 8, of which £6421 7 was in rum.

[114] ¹ Bannister Letter-Book, no. 66.

² Over a year before (Feb. 7, 1746) Manesty had written: "Ships are so scarce here that none is to be had at any rate or I should have engaged one this spring, but the price of negroes in the West Indies has made ships unfit for the business to be made use of so that I fear it will not be in my power to get one, but I will if I can." Some months later he added, "I have had returns for cargoes to Affrica and several parts of the West Indies in the course of 12 months at great profit". On Apr. 3, 1747, "Negroes at Jamaica 50 to £55 a head bought on the Coast of Affrica at from £4 to £6 a head" (Baker, "Newport Banisters," Bulletin, no. 43, p. 4; Bannister Letter-Book, no. 66). It was no wonder that Bannister, in receipt of such letters, himself entered the Guinea trade about this time: "I have this season a large navigation to the West Indies on my own account, which will enable me the next year to enter upon the Guinea trade with advantage." Bannister to Scott, June 19, 1747, Bulletin, no. 43.

[119] ¹ R. I. Hist. Soc., Mason, Reminiscences, II. 80. Lindsay, master of the Sanderson, had written a melancholy letter from Anamabo in February. Trade was dull, his men were ill, his small cable was worn out. He then had on board sixty-one slaves. At that time there were at Anamabo Captains Hamlet, James, Jepson, Carpenter, and Butler; Gardner was due; Ferguson had gone to leeward (Commerce of R. I., I. 59-60). His letter of June 17, with some changes, was printed by Mason in the American Historical Record (I. 339), where Mason uses the names William Johnston and Peter Brown in place of those of Wilkinson, Ayrault, and any other owners of the Sanderson.

² Susanna and Elias Meriville had written to Lindsay's Rhode Island owners, Mar. 16 and Apr. 27, giving the prices prevailing in Barbados. Not long after the second letter, Susanna, the senior partner, died, leaving her son to continue the business. Mason, Am. Hist. Rec., I. 339.

The prices ranged from £35 to £21. The charges included payment for permission to land the slaves, a duty of 5s. per head, payment to the drummer who attended the sales, for liquor at the sales, for carrying notes into the country, for the captain's commission of £55 2 2, and the commission on the sales, the total being £142 15 3. Lindsay took on board 55 hhds. rum, 3 hhd. and 27 bbl. sugar, amounting to £911 17 2½; the remainder he took in bills. On his return to Rhode Island he was placed in command of the schooner Sierra Leone, 40 tons, owned by Newport and Boston merchants. Am. Hist. Rec., I. 339-340.

[120] ¹R. I. Hist. Soc., Mason, Reminiscences, II. 70, 96 . A most interesting comparison can be made between the slave trade of a New England city and of a French port by a study of Gaston Martin's Nantes au XVIII^e Siècle: l'Ère des Négriers (Paris, 1931) with the Newport material here printed.

²The five missing women make it impossible to check the account.

³On July 13 Livingston wrote to Messrs. Peleg Thurston and Company, owners of the Elizabeth, lamenting the meagre proceeds of this sale, which he attributed to the fact that the slaves were "no better than refuse". He had loaded on the Elizabeth 90 casks of molasses and had paid Captain Carpenter £464 10 5½ for the use of the snow. N. Y. Pub. Lib., Mason, Reminiscences, I. 62.

[121] ¹ New York Historical Society, Slavery MSS., box VI. We know that the Hare was preparing for an African voyage on June 1, 1754; by September, 1754, the vessel had reached the West Coast. There Captain Godfrey traded until some time in February, 1755, in which month he sailed for South Carolina. His trade here was completed in April and he returned to Newport. By October, 1755, he was making ready to obtain a second cargo from Africa, which he sold in Charleston in June and July, 1756. This portage bill may have been for the voyage of 1754. It is undated and is endorsed, "Recd. of Mr. Robt. Stevens, Sixteen pounds In part of the within Portage Bill." Three coats, 4 jackets, and 10 shirts had been advanced to these men, charged at £105. 10. The following merchants sold rum to the Hare for her Guinea voyage: George Gardner, Richardson, Jonathan Thurston, Thomas Cranston, David Earl on Cranston's account, Benjamin Green(?), and Nathaniel Coggeshall (ibid). The scrap of paper which contains this information also lists the provisions carried by the Hare—beef, pork, bread, flour, hams, tobacco, and sugar. Students of the slave trade may profitably examine the account of the voyage of the Perle, which traded on the West Coast about the same time that the Hare trafficked. See M. Léon Vignols, "La Campagne Négrière de la Perle (1755-1757)," Revue Historique, CLXIII. 51-78.

122. SAMUEL AND WILLIAM VERNON TO THOMLINSON,
TRECOTHICK, AND COMPANY, 1754.¹

NEWP'T June 1st 1754.

We allso Disire you to Insure for us £475 on the Sloop Hare, Caleb Godfrey M'r, £125 on Sloop,² £350 on Cargo, from this Port to the Coast of Africa and During her Trade on the Coast, To the Island of Jamaica³ with Liberty to touch at the Windward Islands Or Shoud he make his Trade to Windward then Insurd to So. 123. BILL OF LADING OF THE SIERRA LEONE, 1754.¹

Shipped by the Grace of God, in good Order and well-conditioned, by Philip Wilkinson and Compy., Owners of the Schooner Sira loone, in and upon the said Schooner, called the Siralooone, whereof is Master under God for this present Voyage, David Lindsey, and now riding at Anchor in Harbour of Newport and by God's Grace, bound for the Coast of Africa. To say, Thirty four hogsheads, Tenn Terces, Eight barrils and six halfe barrils Rum, one barril Sugar, Sixty Musketts, Six halfe barrils Powder, one box beads, Three boxes Snuff, Two barrils Tallow, Twenty One barrils Beefe Pork and Mut-

[122] ¹William Vernon Letter-Book, no. 77, p. 91. Thomlinson, Trecothick, and Company were London merchants. For the career of William Vernon see G. C. Mason's Annals of Trinity Church, first ser., p. 153 n.

²In 1754 Evan Malbone and Ebenezer Flagg appraised the sloop Sherbro, William Brown late captain, just back from Africa, at £2100 old tenor. This was the property of Jacob Rodriguez Rivera and William Vernon. N. Y. Hist. Soc., Slavery MSS., box VI.

³Obadiah Brown's Insurance Book (R. I. Hist. Soc.) contains a record, Feb. 29, 1753, of insurance on the "Cumberbus, 500 at 10 pr Ct from the cost of Africa to Jamaica".

It is somewhat surprising that up to this time there is little evidence that South Carolina was regarded by the Rhode Island merchants as a desirable market for their slave cargoes, since there is ample indication that there was commercial intercourse between the two colonies. The Bannisters had consigned a cargo (not a Guinea cargo) to George Austin in 1740. In that year they had also delivered a "negro man Ruby," to Capt. William Barnes for sale in South Carolina, at £35, the proceeds to be invested in whatever would be advantageous (Bannister Letter-Book). William Vernon had been in South Carolina in 1746. Vernon Letter-Book, no. 78.

²Lindsay wrote to his owners from Cape Coast Road on Jan. 8, 1755, that he had on board 57 slaves and was leaving the coast, as were Buffam and Wanton. From this voyage he returned to New England in April, 1755, and sailed for Africa again in August, instructed by Wilkinson and Ayrault to sell at Barbados or St. Christopher, whichever promised a better return (Commerce of R. I., I. 64; Mason, "African Slave Trade," Am. Hist. Rec., I. 341). In April, 1756, 44 slaves from the Sierra Leone were sold at St. Christopher, at prices ranging from £20 for boys and girls to £34 for men and £30 for women. After paying the commissions due on this cargo the bill in favor of the owners was £1082 18 2. To this £54 13 7 was shortly after added for the sale of three "refuse slaves" from the cargo. Captain Lindsay carried back to Rhode Island sugar, rum, and molasses amounting to £635 14 10. The owners recorded the receipt of these returns on June 24. Ibid., I. 342.

126. WILLIAM VERNON TO GABRIEL MANIGAULT, 1755.¹

NEWP'T 9th Janry 1755.

S'r, This Advises you that we have a Sloop upon the Coast of Africa, Caleb Godfrey Com'dr who have ordered to your Place with his Slaves, and have taken the Freedom to recommend to your Address for Sales and Returns, Rec'd a Letter from him of 7th Sept'r and may reasonably expect he will be with you in March (no Accident happening to him). For the Proceeds of his Slaves wou'd have good Ster'g Bills of Excha., reserving sufficient to load him with Rice Home. Shou'd there be a few small Slaves that will not sell for much with you choose he shou'd bring them here if he has any Screvelios Teeth or Camwood wou'd not have them sold. Our Agreem't with Capt. Godfrey for his Comm. and Priviledge are in these Words, "It is Agreed that your Priviledge be six Slaves, if you think proper to purchase them, to be shipd and purchasd in common with the Cargo, and to bear an equal Proportion of Loss, by mortality or otherwise" etc . . . agreable to which he'l conform, As we are convincd nothing on your Part will be wanting for our Int.

NEWP'T, 10th Jan. 1755.

S'r, This will be d'd you by Mr. Gabriel Manigault to whom have wrote and advis'd of our recommend'g You to his Address, we have omitted saying anything to him of your expectations of draw'g part of the Comm. for Sales of your Slaves. But as you'l find him a Gent'n of the utmost Generosity and Goodness you'l meet with no Difficulty with him on that or any other Account. We recommend to you the utmost frugality in your Expences upon the Vessel during your stay there and that you'l make all the Dispatch in your Power.² . . .

[126] ¹William Vernon Letter-Book, no. 77, p. 51. This letter, with those of Apr. 15, 1756 (post, nos. 131, 132), disproves the statement that Gabriel Manigault of Charleston, S. C., never traded in slaves. D. D. Wallace, Life of Henry Laurens (1915), p. 74.

[127] ¹Vernon Letter-Book, no. 77, p. 52.

²The writers then repeat the instructions concerning small slaves and other commodities. On the same day a second letter directed that Godfrey take on at least six weeks' provisions, and assured him that he would find letters in South Carolina awaiting him.

⁶ On July 17 Laurens also sent to the Vernons the final account of the sale of the Hare's cargo, £8706 17 8 currency, minus various charges, which left a balance in favor of the Newport firm of £4414 6 10. Here he repeated the account, which he had already written, of Benjamin Yarnold's purchase: "You'll please to observe in the Sale a Negro Girl was sold to Benj Yarnold for £180 and we credit you £150 retaining by guess £30 to cure her of a shocking disorder. It was so managed that the Girl had not the least appearance of any disorder in the Yard and the very next day was unable to stir with the foul disease, the purchaser sends her back to us and we refusd to receive her but thought ourselves obliged to consent to refer the matter to two or three Impartial Judges, these ordered that she should be cured at the expense and Risque of the Owners." The Vernons are mistaken in thinking that the girl is dead when they write on June 18, for on July 24 she is still living, and Laurens is hopeful of her recovery (Laurens Letter-Book, II. 271, 275). On Aug. 31 Laurens reported the net proceeds of the sale of 46 negroes as £5436 4 2; against this he charged £234 19 for coast commission, £1968 10 1 for two bills of exchange, and £230 3 stg., leaving a balance in favor of Messrs. Thompson of £1467 19 1. Ibid., II. 303.

NEWP'T 15th April 1756.

S'r, By the Time this may reach you we have Reason to expect Caleb Godfrey Master of our Sloop Hare will be arrivd at Charlestown from the Windward Coast of Africa (no Misfortune happen'g to him). The last year he went to the Address of Gabriel Manigault Esq but that Gent. declining Business has determind us now to recommend him to yours, in the disposal of his Slaves. The knowledge our W. V. hath of your integrity, joind with the strong inclination Capt. Godfrey expressed of going to your Address, convinces that nothing on your Part will be wanting that can prevent giving us intire Satisfaction. We beg leave to remark that it has ever been the Custom from this Place, when a Cargo of Slaves are sold in any of the West India Islands, that the Master has a part of the Comm. which Mr. Manigault declind allowing to Godfrey, which we was really sorry to find, as his repeated misfortunes had reducd him to low Circumstances, for which he was the more to be pityed as he had a Wife and a numerous Ofspring depending on him for thair Support, which had that Gent. been apprizd of we are convinced his humane and benevolent Disposition would have extended to his relief in a good degree, and make no doubt of finding the same inclination in you. Mr. Manigault remitted the Nt. Proceeds of the above Cargo in good Bills of Excha. except the Sloops Load of Rice,² what Slaves he Sold on Credit he deducted 6 PCt per Annum Intr't and advanced the Money, which we was content with. And now desire if possible to have the Nt. Proceeds of this Cargo remitted immediately to Messrs. Thomlinson Trecothick and Co. Merch'ts in London for our Acc'ts in good Bills reserving a sufficient to load her with Rice and about 20 bbs. good Pork if to be had reasonable; desire you to take four Bills of each sette two Bills to be forwarded by you to the above Gent. the other two forward to us here, beg all unnecessary Expences may be carefully avoided and that you'll give him all possible Dispatch. Please advise us per all Opp'tntys of your Market for Slaves etc. As [we] have several Vessels gone to Africa whom we have orderd to Barbados, for Instructions where to Proceed, and if your Market will Answer shall Order them thither, its probable one may be with you this Fall and two early in the Spring all from the Gold Coast, be pleasd therefore to be particular and frequent in your Advices. The inclosd Paper is Copy of our Agreement with C. 132. SAMUEL AND WILLIAM VERNON TO GABRIEL

NEWPT 15th April 1756.

Sir, Your highly esteemd Favour of 12th April Ult. we duly recd. with a particular Account of the Sales of the Sloop Hare's Cargo of Slaves also your Remittance for Nt. Proceeds in Bills Rice etc, which gave intire Satisfaction. We have not been so Complaisant in writing to you as might reasonably be expected for which neglect beg your Pardon. Are sorry it is not agreable to you to continue in Business any longer, as we deem it a public Loss. We expect Capt. Godfrey will be at Carolina by the Time this meets you or not long after with another Cargo of Slaves, have recommended him to the Address of Mr. Geo. Austin, hope you will not be backward in affording him your Advice and Assistance, so far as you may think

133. SAMUEL AND WILLIAM VERNON TO THOMLINSON,

NEWP'T 20th April, 1756.

Sirs, We recd. your Fav. of 10th Dec. per Capt. Warner via Boston advising us of your not having made any Insurance on the Hare Capt. Godfrey, owing to the extravagant Preemio demanded per the Underwriters. The great length of Time between his Sailing and the receipt of your L[ett]re would not admit of risqueing our Interest any longer without Insurance, as there was a great uncertainty whether you would be able to get it done even at 20 Guineas should we desire it, therefore omitted answering your Letter concluding it would be safer and more for our Interest to get it done here. We this day had Advice of his being safe arriv'd upon the Windward part of the Coast, and that he is likely to do well and make good Dispatch, and dont expect he will be obligd to proceed down to the Gold Coast on which Account imagine the Risque is not so great. Have now to request of you to get Insurd on him £600 (free of the Preemio) at and from the Coast to Charlestown in So. Carolina on as easy Terms as possible. If the Underwriters make any Difference between Slaving to Windward and proceeding down to the Gold Coast it will be best to make the Insurance conditionally altho we are pretty certain he made his Trade to Windward, and suppose he is off the Coast before now.

134. HENRY LAURENS TO SAMUEL AND WILLIAM VERNON, 1756.¹

Gent'n, Your kind favr. of the 15th of April to our G. Austin did not reach us till the 24th Ult and to which we have not had an opportunity of replying before this which goes for New England. We hope you must have had information long before this how much the price of Slaves has been affected here since People no longer doubt that the present contests between us and France must come [133] ¹ Vernon Letter-Book, no. 77, p. 59. The superscription is "To Messrs. Thomlinson Trecothick and Co. London, via N. York Capt. Wm. Richards." The insurance to be placed was £200 on vessel, £400 on cargo.

[134] ¹ South Carolina Historical Society, Laurens Letter-Book, II. 245. This letter could with equal appropriateness be placed in volume IV. of this work, "South Carolina", but it has seemed best to combine the material relating to the trade of the Hare.

suddenly to an open Rupture, the Rice planter in such case must act with great care and prudence to defray the unavoidable expences of his Family and the Indigo Planter has not any motive now to give a price for Slaves because a War Freight and Insurance must greatly reduce the price of that Commodity and its not at all improbable but that such Quantities of it will be made in time of War that the European Markets will be reduced to a lower Ebb than has been the case for many Years past. From viewing things in this light, which every considerate person must do, We may without the spirit of Prophecy pronounce that the Sales with us this Summer must become wretchedly bad and we could not wish to see your Vessell the Hare with us or one of any of our Friends on any consideration whatever. this we foresaw many months ago and took the most effectual method to stop all the Ships we usually had but it unfortunately happens for us that we have 8 or 900 Slaves absolutely ordered down to us that we did not at all expect and so near at hand that We may every day reasonably look for them all and this at a time when our Planters are so discouraged that there was not Twenty appeared at a Sale of 350 Slaves ten days ago,² a large part of which are unsold and another Cargo to be shewn next Week.³ last Summer they would almost go to Loggerheads for the first choice and let them have such as they liked we might almost fix our own price. but 'tis all at an End and must remain so till the Storm that hangs over us shall be quite dispelled wherefore We say—We hope you would get tidings of this great alteration of things in time to reach Capt Godfrey with a Letter to shape his course for some more promising Market as it would be of great service to yourselves and infinitely more agreeable to us than to see him now here on the Terms we have fixed as the Standard'd of our Engagements for African Consignments—that is—to give the Vessell a Load of such produce as can be obtained, to pay the Capts. Coast Commission, Mens half Wages, Disbursements and etc. and to remit the residue as the time of payment shall grow due, tis our Interest to sell for the quickest payment we can without prejudice to the Sale, as the shorter the Term the less risque of bad debts. Mr. Manigault is a Gentleman can at all times advance Sums of Money without any inconvenience to himself, but it cannot be done by those who are professedly African Factors. We experimentally know that a large Capital is requisite to negotiate a Trade in this Country for 7 or 800 Negroes a Year in the way we take them but a more material consideration with the Factor is this, the probabillity of War affecting the Exchange. Last Year and for many preceeding Exchange was 700 per Ct. in last January it jumpd to £712.10/. suppose it had come to 800 which was not impossible from such an Event, what had he gaind who had sold a Cargo of Slaves and remitted at 7 when perhaps 2/3 of his money was not due before Exchange was 8. As to Mr Manigault refusing to allow Capt Godfrey a Share in his Commission, you must highly commend him for it, he is a Gentleman that does as many Acts of benevolence as any one in this Country and therefore would be the last rather than the first to introduce a Custom bad in its consequencys. It often proves a Bribe of great prejudice to Owners of Ships. We will venture to say some Ships intended for this place have stopd in the West Indias for that perquisite to the Captain to the loss of Thousands to the Concerned. This we know so clearly that no Man should sell a second Cargo for us who should tempt a Master to betray that great trust we reposit in him by that or any such like method.

³ That of the Hope, William Lugen, to be sold by Inglis and Pickering of Charleston.

If Capt Godfrey should touch in the West Indias he must hear that our Markets are over and we hope he will find himself at liberty to embrace that Market that shall promise most for your Interest, every thing would be against him was he now to come here, Rice grown very scarce, most of it of a very ordinary Quality the price 35 and rising daily. If he should come We shall do for you the very best We can and put you on the footing of our old and fast Friends.

135. SAMUEL AND WILLIAM VERNON TO THOMLINSON,

NEWPORT RHODE. ISLAND 12th June 1756.

Sirs, We just now Recd. a Letter from Caleb Godfrey of our Sloop Hare Dated at Sierralon on the Coast of Affrica the 8th of April Informing us of his being Slav'd his Vessel in good order and Clean Tallowd and that he expected to Sail the next for Charles Town So. Carolina therefore Shou'd this Reach you before any Insurance is made by you on S'd Vessel we desire the Sum of £600, Vizt. £200 on Vessel and £400 on Cargo may be made for us from Sierralon to Charles Town Free of the Preemio.²

P. S. As the Risq. to So. Carolina in Case of a War with France is not so great as to any part of the West Indies we Imagine the Prem'm Will be the easier.

[135] ¹ Vernon Letter-Book, no. 77, p. 97.

² On p. 60 of the Letter-Book is another letter of the same date which duplicates this, save that the order is for £800 insurance, £600 of which was on the cargo.

136. SAMUEL AND WILLIAM VERNON TO AUSTIN AND LAURENS, 1756.¹

NEWP'T 18th June 1756.

Gentlemen, Your Favour of the 22d Jan'y Ult. wth two Bills Excha. amounting to £568 7 5 Sterling or £3978 11 11 Curr'cy wth your Comm. amount'g to £198 18 7 is £4177 10 6. we recd. and make no doubt of their being duly Honourd 'ere this. You observe to us that the Girl sold Benja. Yarnold is since Dead, that you had prevaild on him to submit the Matter to Arbitration, that is whether he shoud pay for her or not. We dont imagine whether he bought the Girl at a Public or private Sale that you warranted her to be perfectly sound and well—wch is not customary for new Slaves, and whether we are not intitled to as much compassion as he is—or whether he cant afford to bear such a Loss as well as we are we cant say. These things we think are quite foreign from the Dispute. We conceive it in this Light, if you wch we dont suppose, contrary to all Custom of the Sale of New Slaves, Warranted the Girl to be sound and well and she provd to be otherwise in Justice he ought not to pay for her, on the contrary, we are not to lose her for it is beyond all doubt if Slaves were thus warranted, they [would] yeild a Trice in proportion. Upon the whole therefore we expect that he is held obligd to pay for the Negro, and as you was so kind as to consent to pay the Doctor and stopd £30 for that end we willingly consent to it, tho' at the same Time think it unprecedented. Shoud be glad to have the Accots closd and the Ball'ce remitted in Rice if any oppertunity shoud present imediately, otherwise in Dollars.²

137. HENRY LAURENS TO SAMUEL AND WILLIAM VERNON, 1756.¹

Samuel and William Vernon Rhode Island per Edgecomb

Gentlemen, . . . We are now to inform you that on the 29th Ult. the day appointed for the Sale of your Slaves We had as many Purchasers appeard as we could have wishd for had we had three times the number for Sale but on taking a transient view of them before they were landed many of them became extreamly angry that we should invite them down from 80 or 90 Miles distance

[136] ¹ Vernon Letter-Book, no. 77, p. 62, "To Austin and Laurens in So. Carolina."

² On June 18 Laurens wrote that the Hare had arrived in ten weeks from Sierra Leone, with 70 negroes, and that the sale was advertised for the 29th, the earliest date at which the quarantine law would allow it (Laurens Letter-Book, II. 249). The advertisement for this sale adds to the usual notice, "To be sold upon easy Terms". South Carolina Gazette, June 17, 1756.

to look at a parcell of refuse Slaves as they call'd them and with some difficulty were prevail'd on to wait the Sale. They really were not much out for when Ten or fifteen were drawn out they deserved no better a Character. We were willing to believe Capt Godfrey obtaind the best he could but really they were a wretched Cargo, such a one as we would not have touchd could we have been excusd from it for three times our Com'n.

We have this day sold 42 to the Amt. of £7455.12/. Currency, in which two are included that sold at Vendue for only £35.12/. They seemd past all hopes of Recovery. God knows what we shall do with that remain, they are a most scabby Flock all of them full of the Crockeraws—several have extream sore Eyes, three very puny Children and add to this the worst infirmity of all others with which 6 or 8 are attended (vizt.) Old Age—those the Vessell brought last Year were very indifferent but these much worse. Poor Godfrey seems greatly distressed that he should not have been able to do better, his People have all left him except his Mates, they were going to put him into the Admiralty for some treatment that appeard to us a little too rough therefore We recommended that he would give them their discharge as the only thing would pacify them, are in hopes Capt Godfrey will be able to pick up hands in their stead on moderate terms. We laid in a Cargo of our best Rice for the Sloop at 40/ per Ct. as soon as we found it would be higher. This lies ready for him so that he may load away as quick as he pleases and we should wish he may do it soon as we have advice by a Ship in six Weeks from Bristol that War was declared in London the 18th May. We had a Sloop arrivd with 150 prime Slaves from the Factorys at Gambia and Bance Island the Evening before the Sale of your Negroes which would not at all have injurd your Sale had they been good, for we did not discover what a prime parcell they were till the first days Sale was over. We are not much afraid of making a pretty good Sale of this Cargo notwithstanding we are engaged in War if we can but draw down but half the number of Buyers we had on the Twenty ninth Ultimo, 'tho should not wish to receive any more Cargoes the present Year as a few more would make them move very Slowly. All that we can further say is, that every thing has been done for your Interest that was in our power and that we shall continue so to act untill the business is compleated. We hope we shall be able to address you soon per Capt Godfrey who this day takes in 40 Barrels of Rice for a beginning.

138. SAMUEL AND WILLIAM VERNON TO AUSTIN AND LAURENS,

NEWP'T 8th Decr 1756.

Sirs, We have before us you Fav'rs of the 17th and 24th July to which don't know of any oppertunity we have had of Answering until now unless it had been via N. York, or Boston. We are not in the least Jealous but that your best endeavours were us'd in the Sale of Capt. Godfreys Cargo of Slaves notwithstanding they were sold so extreme low as renderd it a very bad Voyage to us, therefore we are and ought to be content. Discovered no error in your Acc'tts unless it be 50 s overcast in Invo. of Rice. The Ball'ce remaining in our Fav. have wrote Messrs. Thomlinson and Trecothick and Co. of London woud be remitted to them by you in good Bills of Excha. in Jan'ry or Feb. without fail which make no doubt will be punctually executed. The Sum of £30, retaind by you on Acc'tts of a Girl sold Benja. Yarnold, if there be any saving you'll please to add to the Ball'ce. We already desird you to take 4 Bills of each Sett and forward two to London and the other two to us which will be comply'd with by you

If any prospects appears of Slaves being in Demand with you in the Spring pray advis us. . . .

139. LIST OF CAPTURED SLAVE VESSELS, 1757-1758.¹

The Success, Seth Harvey, master, was captured with 96 slaves, May 30, 1757, and carried into Martinico.²

The Marygold, William Taylor, master, having on board 80 slaves, was captured June 19, 1756, within twelve miles of Antigua. The captain wrote his owners that he left captains James, Hammond (Palsgrave), Pinnegar, Rodman, and Clarke on the Coast of Africa; that Clarke, when he left, had 40 slaves.

The Sirre Leone, David Lindsey, master, belonging to Philip Wilkinson, on May 27, 1756, on her voyage from the Coast of Africa

[138] ¹ Vernon Letter-Book, no. 77, p. 61.

[139] ¹ W. P. Sheffield, Privateersmen of Newport (1883), pp. 55-56. During the Seven Years' War Newport sent out more than sixty privateers. The French retaliated by attacks on the slave traders, who were in danger both on the African coast and in the West Indian waters. Owing to the nature of the trade, the convoy system was of little service to the slavers. So great became the risks that in January, 1759, the Browns of Providence were asked a 25-per-cent. premium on the Wheel of Fortune, Capt. William Earl, which they sent to Guinea (Kimball, Corr. Col. Govs. of R. I., I. xxxvii; Providence in Colonial Times, p. 270). For an excellent discussion of the difficulties which the British encountered in protecting the West Indian and North American commerce, see Sir Julian Corbett, England in the Seven Years' War (1907), I. 351-370.

to St. Christopher's, was captured and carried into Guadaloupe.³

The Hawke, Owen Morris, master, on a voyage from the Coast of Africa with 75 slaves, April 4, 1756, was captured and carried into Martinico.

The Dolphin, George Nichols, master, was captured on the Coast of Africa, Dec. 3, 1756, carried into Goree, and condemned.

The Industry, Thomas Underwood, master, with a cargo of 107 slaves, bound from the Coast of Africa to St. Christopher's, was captured April 10, 1758.

The Prince George, John Peck, master, was captured and plundered on the Coast of Africa, Jan. 30, 1761; voyage broken up.

The ship Caesar, of Newport, Jeremiah Clarke, master, left the Coast of Africa, Sept. 22, 1761; had on board 116 slaves bound to the West Indies; was captured by a French cruiser, Oct. 30, off Cape St. John.

The Success, Nehemiah Rhodes, master, was captured on the Coast of Africa, July 8, 1761, having on board 43 slaves.⁴

The Two Friends, Polypus Hammond, master, with 130 slaves and 28 elephants' tusks, was captured June 20, 1727 [1757].

Annamaboo, Walter Buffum, master, with half cargo of slaves, was captured July 23, 1758.

The Fox, William Taylor, master, was captured at the same time and near the same place as the Annamaboo.

The King of Prussia, Joseph Wanton, master, with 54 slaves, 20 ounces gold dust, and 66 hogsheads of rum, was captured July 23, 1758.

The Young Batchelor, Samuel Johnston, with 60 slaves, captured Jan. 27, 1757.⁵

Casada Garden, T. Taylor, with 175 slaves, captured about the same time.⁶

⁵ The account of the capture of this vessel with 72 slaves on board is to be found ibid., pp. 80-81 (MS. Notarial Protests, VI. 413).

⁶ The last two, not in Sheffield's list, are added from the Boston News Letter, June 23, 1757. For further references to the Casada Garden see post, no. 140. Captain Thurston, arriving in Newport late in April, 1757, had with him part of the crews of three English vessels captured by French men-of-war on their way to the Guinea coast. These captures may have been the work of the fleet under M. de Kersaint, which demoralized the African coast for a time (News Letter, May 5, 1757; Corbett, op. cit., I. 366). Preston (pp. 83-84) adds an account of the loss of the Camelion, Capt. Michael Molten.

141. DEPOSITION OF JOSEPH WANTON, 1758.¹

I, Joseph Wanton, being one of the people called Quakers, and conscientiously scrupulous about taking an oath, upon solemn affirmation say that on the first day of the month commonly called April, A.D. 1758, I sailed from Newport in the Snow, King of Prussia, with a cargo of 124 hogsheads of rum, twenty barrels of rum, and other cargo; that on the twentieth day of the month called May, I made Cape Mount on the west coast of Africa; that I ran down the coast and traded until I arrived at Annamibo, where, while at anchor, on the twenty-third day of the month called July, when I had on board fifty-four slaves, twenty ounces of gold-dust, and sixty-five hogsheads of rum, I was taken by a French privateer of sixty guns, fitted out in Bordeaux, called Le Compte of St. Florentine, having on board between 500 and 600 men, while my vessel had but three small pieces and eleven men.²

142. CAPTAIN DAVID LINDSAY TO HIS OWNERS, 1758.¹

BARBADOSS Aug't 19th 1758.

Gentlemen, thank God I have the pleasure once more to Give you a Line or Two in Regard to the Proceedings of my present voyage

¹¹ Endorsed: "Acct for the Owners of Ship Casada Gardin."

[141] ¹ Kimball, Corr. Col. Govs., I. xxxvii-xxxviii. Joseph Wanton, the fourth Rhode Island governor to be drawn from the Wanton family, served in that office from 1769 to November, 1775. The date here given is that of the capture of the King of Prussia, not that of Wanton's deposition. It appears from an item in the News Letter of Aug. 4, 1757, that Wanton narrowly escaped seizure in 1757. Five Liverpool traders were seized while he was on the African coast.

² Sheffield (Privateersmen, pp. 28-29) says that Wanton "was left destitute on the coast of Africa, and soon after two other Newport vessels with their cargoes were captured at the same place. One of the vessels was given to a native African prince, and was by him turned over to the three crews, who, after a time returned home in her". See post, no. 143.

NEWPORT, RHODE ISLAND, October 16 [1758].

On Saturday last came into this Port, from the Gold Coast of Africa, the Snow Fox. Capt. Wanton, who came in her, gave us the following Account: That the Count St. Florentine, designed for a Man of War, but purchas'd by some Merchants in Bourdeaux, commissioned for a Privateer, mounted with 60 Guns, mann'd with 550 Men, and commanded by Monsieur Montvit, took Capt. Earle of Providence on the 23d of June, and soon after drove on Shore, at Cape Mount, a ship of 200 Tons which immediately went to Pieces. She proceeded down the Coast to Annamaboa, where she arrived the 23d of June, and took Capt. Wanton in the Sloop King of Prussia; Capt. Buffum, in the Snow Annamaboa of this Port, and Capt. Taylor of New-London. On the 28th, the Harwich of 50 Guns, commanded by Commodore Marsh, in Company with the Rye, of 20 Guns, came down, when the Privateer was at an Anchor. . . . We cannot omit the following singular Instance of Benevolence and Humanity in Mr. Brew, Chief of Annamaboa Castle. The Snow Fox was purchas'd of the Captain of the Privateer, by the Dutch Chief of Coromantine Castle, of whom Mr. Brew bought her, and after supplying her with Provisions, generously made a Present of her to Capt. Taylor, in order to bring him Home, and the rest, who were taken by the Privateer; all of which, after this Misfortune, were treated with great Hospitality by the Gentlemen of the Coast, particularly by the Governor of the Cape Coast Castle.

200 Gallons of neat Rum had been given per Head for Slaves, and scarcely to be got at any Rate for that Commodity. This must be sensibly felt by this poor and distress'd Government, the Inhabitants whereof being at this time very large Adventurers in that trade, having sent, and about sending, upwards of 20 Sail of Vessels, computed to carry, in the whole, about Nine Thousand Hogsheads of Rum, a quantity much too large for the Places on the Coast where that Commodity has generally been vended. We hear many Vessels are also gone and going, from the neighbouring Governments, likewise from Barbados, from which Place a large Cargo of Rum had arrived before our Informant left the Coast, of which they gave 270 Gallons for a prime Slave.

NEWP'T 22nd Septr 1762.

Sirs, I fully intended before I left you to have inform'd myself at your office, what the Gent'n would write a Policy for upon a new Brig't at and from the Coast of Africa to Rhode Island, or what from the Coast only to Rh'de Island which as I omitted making enquiry Concerning, be pleas'd to do for me and if it is a Reasonable Prem'o Shall order a Policy for £—— Sterling otherwise Shall apply to Some Other Office. Have also to Propose to the Gent'n who wrote Dordins Policy whether provided he Should be so unfortunate as to be taken in his Passage to Guinea by the enemy and Should Ransom [146] ¹R. I. Hist. Soc., Mason, Reminiscences, I. 54. In 1759 Joseph Brown had shipped on the Charming Polly 1 hhd. (94 galls.) of New England rum, which was to be exchanged for a negro boy and gold dust. Mason, Am. Hist. Rec., I. 344.

²This is signed by William Grant, called by Mason, "Hudson", a young man of Newport, who went to the coast intending to set up a business. There he found seven Rhode Island vessels and "the times very indifferent." After a brief period he secured work with Richard Brew and Company at £60 per annum. Three months later he died of coast fever at Gaboone. Mason states that the hogshead shipped contained 95 gals., while a slave cost 110 gals. The difference was charged to Hunter. Grant's slaves were sold after his death. Written on the bottom of Grant's original receipt is: "Newport July 5, 1764. Received from Mrs. Temperance Grant Eighty Eight Dollars as the full amount and produce of the Above Adventure. Wm. Hunter."

⁴ The Mercury, Aug. 20, 1764, reported the death of Captain Morris on the coast. It is possible that the following item refers to the end of this voyage: "By Capt. Walker who arrived here a few Days ago from Surrinam, we are informed, that he left Capt. James Warner in the Ship Friendship belonging to Newport, Rhode-Island, at Brams Point, from the Coast of Guinea, with 104 Slaves on board, and 'tis said the Friendship would be there condemn'd, not being fit to proceed [on] her Voyage." *Mass. Instructions to Captain Peck, Oct. 29, 1762, had directed that he first attempt to dispose of his slaves for cash in New Providence. If this failed, he was to bring them to Newport (*Commerce of R. The Champlins—Christopher, senior, Christopher, junior, and George—continue to appear in Rhode Island slave trade until the nineteenth century.

² Despite this stipulation, Elizer wrote on Mar. 10 warning Champlin not to allow Moses to change the instructions which had been sent. On Mar 23 Moses wrote that his half of the proceeds, in commodities or bills of exchange, was to be sent to his attorney in Rhode Island, and also reminded Champlin that he was to have a slave for his private venture. Moses seems at this time to have left Rhode Island for New Providence. Champlin Letter-Book, pp. 125, 127.

VIRGINIA October 16th, 1763.

Sirs: . . . I shall be very glad to be concern'd in the Affrican Trade and will be a $\frac{1}{4}$ of the Voyage if you Choose it, Tobacco I can send any quan. at 20/ per hund. and I believe free of duty if yr. Skiper will take it. I shou'd choose to be Insur'd, and what ever Expence came to my Share more than the Slaves sent I wou'd remit by the Return of the Vessell that bro't the Slaves. The Whole of the Voyage I shou'd leave to you to Conduct and you may begin to prepare if you please, But you will let me know the Terms and every thing relating to the Voyage before the Vessill Sails. It ought to be forw'ded, so as to have the Vessill here in May, bec'se the Negroes will sell better then, than later. Gold Coast Slaves are Esteemed the most Valuable and Sell best. The Prices of Negroes keep up amazingly. They have Sold from £30 to £35 Sterling a head Clear of duty all this summer and I should not doubt of rendering Such a Sale if the Negroes were well and Come early. I find two or three Vessills have been here this summer from the Nw'd [Northward] and I suppose the Trade will be Carried on with more vigour for the future. If you will undertake to befriend me in soliciting the Consignment of some of them I will give you for your Trouble $\frac{1}{3}$ of my Commission which will be a Pritty thing if the Vessill is Consign'd wholly to me. But if she is only half to me, I will give you $\frac{1}{3}$ of my Commission's for all that you get and will make my remittance in any manner they desire.

Of these but two are here printed. A note states that William Strange died on the coast. On Mar. 11, 1766, Thomas Brownell, whose apprentice Strange was, signed a receipt for £64 14 4, old tenor, for his wages. He had been paid £6 10 4 before his death. A small manuscript book containing a rough account of the wages paid the seamen on this voyage records the death of James Lewis at Sierra Leone: "Paid the King of Serilion for ground for a grave 2½ gallons. Paid for Digging the grave 1 gallon." Ibid.

Deposition of Captain Peter Dordin.

Peter Dordin doth upon Oath declare That he was in Georgia the latter End of January last when he fell in Company with a Captain of a Snow who arrived there from Antigua (whose name he can't remember) who told him that Capt. Rogers had met with a shocking Misfortune in going down to Antigua in losing Part of his Slaves etc. and that he had bought half a Dozen of his Slaves and (pointing to a Woman Slave then in the House where they were) said there is one of his Slaves which I have sold to the Master of the House: That he the Dept. enquired of the Master of the House what he gave for that Slave who told him fifty Pounds Sterling. And the said Peter Dordin doth further declare that Slaves during the last Winter bore a very high Price in Georgia And that he saw Five Slaves sold there who were picked prime Slaves for Fifty five Pounds Sterling and that good Slaves (Men and Women,) would sell from Thirty five to Forty five Pounds Sterling a Piece.

Deposition of Capt. Robert Stoddard.

Robert Stoddard doth upon Oath declare That some Time in December or January last he had some Conversation with Mr. Valentine Jones of Barbados Merch't at Barbados when the said Jones informed him that Capt. Thomas Rogers had been at Barbados a little while before with a Cargo of Slaves and that he the said Jones had advised the said Rogers to sell his Slaves at Barbados and that he told the said Rogers that he thought he would do better with them there than to carry them anywhere else and that he did not give him that Advice from any sinister Views but purely for the Benefit of his Owners. And the said Robert Stoddard doth further say That it was generally thought by the Masters upon the Coast that Capt. Rogers's Slaves were a very good Cargo of Slaves and that the said Jones told him that Capt. Rogers' Slaves were in bad Order when he arrived at Barbados.

Messrs. William and Samuel Vernon to ———.

Gentlemen, You will observe our positive Orders to T. Rogers, after stopping at Barbados to recruit his Slaves were to proceed to Georgia or So. Carolina unless he should meet with counter Orders at Barbados but as it was our fix'd determination that he should proceed to one or other of those Ports his Orders remaind in full force.

By his Letter of the 25th Sepr. he arrivd at Barbados on that Day and by his Protest in Antigua he sail'd from Barbados on the 28th bound to the Island of St Christophers that on the first Day of Octr. an Insurrection of the Slaves happend (being let out of their Irons) by which he lost eleven Men Slaves⁶ and four Slaves afterwards with the Flux as usual in such cases. he then proceeded to Antigua and gave the remd. of his Slaves away for a Trifling Sum—the Nt proceeds of his Cargo amounting to but £500 Ster'g in Bills paya. at 6 months sight whereas had he followed his Orders his Cargo of Slaves in Georgia would have neated us Eighteen hundred Pounds Sterling or more as some part of his Cargo arrivd there during Capt. Dordins lying there some of which sold at fifty Pounds Sterling per head as he informs us. You will be pleased farther to observe that we gave him One hundred Dollars to lay out in high Cloths at the Cape DeVerd Islands, what Cloths he purchasd there he purchasd with Goods and the Ball'ce of his Cash Trade there was in our Favor so that the whole of that 100 Dollars and more also he has traded on to his own Benefit, without the least Advantage to his Owners, and indeed is indebted for the Money to this Day.

his Letter Isle de los 5th Sept. he writes he had then on board 21 Slaves bo't at 80 Barrs. By his Book he gives an account of but 16 Slaves purchas'd out of wch Number he had exchanged one Man Slave for a Boat wch is 6 less than he had then on board, and all his Letters to us from the Coast convince us that this Book of Trade he has dd us is not Genuine but a patched up, counterfeit thing

Please to Observe by his Letter Dated at Barbadoes Sepr. 25th 1765 he says had call'd upon Mr. Jones for Letters that he expected we shoud Lodge with him and found our Letter, wherein we persist in his proceeding to Carolina, but he says he will go to the Leeward Islands, Implying that we had no right to direct him, his saying his Vessel was Low [?] and his slaves weakly is no excuse. If that was really the case he might possibly have been justified, but he protested against those Articles at Barbados, but then certainly he could not have proceeded to any other Port but must have sold his Cargo at Barbados.⁷

160. REMONSTRANCE OF THE COLONY OF RHODE ISLAND TO THE BOARD OF TRADE, 1764.¹

. . . It is this quantity of molasses² which serves as an engine in the hands of the merchant to effect the great purpose of paying for British manufactures; for part of it is exported to the Massachusetts Bay, to New York and Pennsylvania, to pay for British goods, for provisions and for many articles which compose our West India cargoes and part to the other colonies, southward of these last mentioned, for such commodities as serve for a remittance immediately to Europe; such as rice, naval stores, etc., or such as are necessary to enable us to carry on our commerce; the remainder (besides what is consumed by the inhabitants,) is distilled into rum, and exported to the coast of Africa; nor will this trade to Africa appear to be of little consequence, if the following account of it be considered.

Formerly, the negroes upon the coast were supplied with large quantities of French brandies; but in the year 1723, some merchants "To be sold at Public Vendue $\frac{1}{4}$ of Sloop Spry, William Pinniger late master, with all her Guinea Stores, as she came from Sea. . . . There will be sold also at the same Place, a likely young Negro Girl, lately come from the Coast of Africa." Ibid., June 2, 1766.

The Sally was owned one-half by Nicholas Brown, and one-fourth each by James and Moses Brown. For references to her voyage see post, no. 163 n. The King George was owned by Simeon Potter.

[160] ¹ "Proceedings of the General Assembly, at South Kingston, the 24th day of January, 1764", R. I. Col. Recs., VI. 378-383. This remonstrance against the renewal of the Sugar Act the General Assembly voted to transmit to the colonial agent, Joseph Sherwood, who was to present it to the Board of Trade provided any three agents from the other northern colonies would join in the protest. The early paragraphs point out that Rhode Island, a small colony of barren soil, depends entirely on her commerce for subsistence, that she buys from Great Britain yearly in manufactured goods £120,000, and that all but £5000 of that sum must come from her molasses trade.

² Fourteen thousand hogsheads, 2500 of which came from the English islands. In the Moses Brown Papers, Misc. (R. I. Hist. Soc., I. 12), is a long paper on Rhode Island commerce, of nature similar to this, in which the author speaks of an importation of 6000 hhds. of molasses from foreign ports. See also F. B. Wiener, "Rhode Island Merchants and the Sugar Act", New England Quarterly, III. 488.

in this colony first introduced the use of rum there, which, from small beginnings soon increased to the consumption of several thousand hogsheads yearly; by which the French are deprived of the sale of an equal quantity of brandy; and as the demand for rum is annually increasing upon the coast, there is the greatest reason to think, that in a few years, if this trade be not discouraged, the sale of French brandies there will be entirely destroyed. This little colony, only, for more than thirty years past, have annually sent about eighteen sail of vessels to the coast, which have carried about eighteen hundred hogsheads of rum, together with a small quantity of provisions and some other articles, which have been sold for slaves, gold dust, elephants' teeth, camwood, etc. The slaves have been sold in the English islands, in Carolina and Virginia, for bills of exchange, and the other articles have been sent to Europe; and by this trade alone, remittances have been made from this colony to Great Britain, to the value of about £40,000, yearly; and this rum, carried to the coast, is so far from prejudicing the British trade thither, that it may be said rather to promote it; for as soon as our rum vessels arrive, they exchange away some of the rum with the traders from Britain, for a quantity of dry goods, with which each of them sort their cargoes to their mutual advantage.

Besides this method of remittance by the African trade, we often get bills of exchange from the Dutch colonies of Surinam, Barbice, etc., and this happens when the sales of our cargoes amount to more than a sufficiency to load with molasses; so that, in this particular, a considerable benefit arises from the molasses trade, for these bills being paid in Holland, are the means of drawing from that republic so much cash yearly, into Great Britain, as these bills amount to.

From this deduction of the course of our trade, which is founded in exact truth, it appears that the whole trading stock of this colony, in its beginning, progress and end is uniformly directed to the payment of the debt contracted by the importation of British goods; and it also clearly appears, that without this trade, it would have been and always will be, utterly impossible for the inhabitants of this colony to subsist themselves, or to pay for any considerable quantity of British goods.

[Of the fourteen thousand hogsheads of molasses annually imported, eleven thousand five hundred are brought from foreign plantations.]

The present price of molasses is about twelve pence, sterling, per gallon; at which rate, only, it can be distilled into rum for exportation; wherefore, if a duty should be laid on this article, the enhanced price may amount to a prohibition; and it may with truth be said, that there is not so large a sum of silver and gold circulating in the colony, as the duty imposed by the aforesaid act upon foreign molasses, would amount to in one year, which makes it absolutely impossible for the importers to pay it. . . .

There are upwards of thirty distil houses, (erected at a vast expense; the principal materials of which, are imported from Great Britain,) constantly employed in making rum from molasses. This distillery is the main hinge upon which the trade of the colony turns, and many hundreds of persons depend immediately upon it for a subsistence. These distil houses, for want of molasses, must be shut up, to the ruin of many families, and of our trade in general; particularly, of that to the coast of Africa, where the French will supply the natives with brandy, as they formerly did. Two-thirds of our vessels will become useless, and perish upon our hands; our mechanics, and those who depend upon the merchant for employment, must seek for subsistence elsewhere; and what must very sensibly affect the present and future naval power and commerce of Great Britain, a nursery of seamen, at this time consisting of twenty-two hundred, in this colony only, will be in a manner destroyed; and as an end will be put to our commerce, the merchants cannot import any more British manufactures, nor will the people be able to pay for those they have already received.³ . . .

Jamaica is the only English island that now supplies us with molasses (excepting the new acquisition of the Grenades, which affords a small quantity of an inferior quality); and it can be proved by undoubted testimony, that even from thence our vessels have been frequently obliged to bring back money, because molasses was not to be had; and this has happened in the course of a few years, while the trade from the northern colonies to foreign plantations was at the highest.⁴ . . .

164. NEWS ITEM RELATING TO SLAVE TRADE, 1764.¹

CHARLESTON, Oct. 5 [1764].

In June last, a sloop named the Adventure, Millar, master belonging to Rhode-Island or New-London, was trading at Sierra-leon, on the coast of Africa, and the master, with all the crew except one, being carried off by sickness, a gentleman who lived there sent two white men to assist in taking care of sloop and cargo, till a King's ship should arrive and claim them. While the sloop lay at anchor with her slaves, and these three men on board, the natives came off, hauled the vessel ashore, and barbarously murdered the white men and plundered the whole cargo except two slaves. The sloop was claimed by the factory at Bance Island,² and being delivered up to them was valued for the benefit of the owners and taken into service.

³ One would think the discouraging article in the Boston Gazette, to which reference has been made, would have accomplished this purpose.

²"Newport, August 11. The Sloop Three Friends, Capt. Toman, arrived here last Saturday in 87 Days from Sierraleone. One Mr. Dunfield came Passenger, who was Mate of a Schooner belonging to Bristol, and informs, that last Winter her whole Company, except himself, was killed by the Slaves on board. He escaped by being out in the Boat." Mass. Gaz. and News Letter, Aug. 22, 1765, Ext.

³Doubtless Captain Kean of the Kingston, whose clearing appears below.

⁴This is the voyage for which the "outward bound" entry was dated Dec. 24, 1764. Captain Carpenter sailed Feb. 17 (Newport Mercury, Feb. 18, 1765). Newport possessed two captains Carpenter, one of whom, Captain Willet Carpenter, died on the coast of Africa sometime in the early spring of 1765. Ibid., June 24, 1765.

⁵"Capt. Abraham All, of the Brig —, from this Port, in a Letter wrote in September last, at Cape Mount, on the Coast of Africa, says, That the Captains Scofield, Bardine, and Moore, from this Port and Capt. Bowen of Boston were then at that Place. The two last were about sailing for Annamaboa." Ibid., Feb. 10, 1766.

167. BENJAMIN GARDNER TO MOSES BROWN, 1765.¹

NEWPORT May the 15 D 1765.

Sir, I Saw a Letter from Capt. Gardiner to Day and informs us of Capt. Hopkins arrivell on the Coast. His Letter was Dated the 25 December from the baneas and that Capt. Hopkins was up the River gamby and Deserd Capt. Gardner to write word of his arivel the first oportunity and that thear All well on board. I have No other News to write.

Sir be so good as to inquire of Capt Bucklin thats from Suranam wat Guineaman that was he Spoke with bound to South Carliner for it is Reported in Newport that my Brother Carpenter is Ded and I shuld be glad you would inquire into it and Lett me know. . . .

168. JOSEPH AND WILLIAM WANTON TO BROWN BROTHERS, 1765.¹

NEWPORT, June 26th, 1765.

Gentlemen, . . . We heartily Condole with you over the bad News from Hopkins,² had he proceeded down to Anamaboe it would have been no better with Regard to Trade, there was the 6th April 17 Sail there of Europeans and Rum men and the latter could not have been ready for a return voyage to Africa by April. "Capt. Peter Wanton, in a Ship belonging to this Port, with a Cargo of Slaves was also arrived at St. Kitts." Newport Mercury, Feb. 11, 1765; Mass. Gaz. and News Letter, Feb. 21, 1765.

² Benjamin Mason had just reported to the Browns that near the beginning of March Hopkins, with forty slaves on board, had lost all his hands and had been obliged to send to the governor of Gambia for aid. He was at that time trading in Portuguese territory, where he was not allowed to land without the payment of exorbitant customs. It is difficult to reconcile this report with a letter written by the Browns to Capt. Abraham Whipple in July, in which they say that on May 17 Captain Hopkins wrote from the Gambia River that he had lost one man and three others sick (Kimball, Providence in Colonial Times, pp. 272-273). On Sept. 24 the owners wrote to a Mr. Relfe that they expected the brigantine to bring off about 140 slaves, for which they hoped to be in cash or bills by January. Hopkins actually lost a portion of his rum cargo from leakage, his mortality on the Middle Passage was heavy (post, no. 171), and he was obliged to sell for a low price in Antigua. Years later Moses Brown stated that this firm, as long as he was concerned in it, had lost rather than made money in the slave trade. Kimball, Note-Book, vol. II.

NEWPORT RHODE ISL'D July 22. 1765

Capt. Nath'l Briggs, You being at present Master of our Sloop the Betsey wch is now ready loaded and fitted for the seas, our orders to you are, that you Embrace the first fair wind wch God Shall Send, and proceed with her to Sea and there make the best of your way to the Coast of Africa, When please God you arrive there, Endeavour to dispose of your Vessel and Cargo,² provided you Can obtain at Least One Thousand and one hundred Pounds Ster'g for Both, in Good Bills of Exchange, on England, in wch Case you are to remit (if any oppertunity directly from there to any part of England) the first and Second bills of Each Sett to William Stead Esqr. Merch't in London and advice him that Two Thirds thereof are on Acco't of Mr. Aaron Lopez and the Other one Third on Acct. of Mr. Jacob Rod. Rivera, and git the Bill Drawn Conformable thereto, and the Third Bills of Each Sett bring home with you; But if you Cannot Sell her for Bills, and you Can do it for Slaves to good advantage, and you have a prospect of Shipping Said Slaves on Freight to any port of the West Indias (to wch we would give Jamaica the prefferances,) or Should you on the Coast meet with Capt. Ab'm All in our Brig and he Can after he is Slaved Conveniently take any of those you may receive in pay for your Vessel and Cargo, you may put on board of them as many as you may Judge prudent, on our Acco't and we Shall write to Capt. All to that purpose, and as Several Circumstances may present that we Cannot now provide for, we Leave the whole of this Last Transaction to your Judicious Management as being upon the Spot you may be able to act for the most of our advantage. If you Cannot dispose of your Vessel and Cargo on Either of the foregoing Terms, then you are to dispose of her Cargo at any part of the Coast you may think most to our advantage, and as we have a very high Opinion of your Capacity and Experience in that Trade, we Leave the whole Management on the Coast to you, being persuaded you'll have the greatest regard to our Interest, and we beg it may be done in Such a manner as may Enable you to Quit the Coast as Soon as posible, and When you have finished your Trade on the Coast, proceed with your Vessel and Slaves and what other Effect you may have purchaced, with your Cargo, to Kingston in the Island of Jamaica and there deliver Whatever Slaves you may Carry in, on Acc't of the owners to Mr. Phillip Livingston Jun'r Merch't there, to whom we Shall give our Necessary orders for the disposal of them, and in whose hands we Shall Lodge for you whatever farther orders we may hereafter find Necessary, and we Shall give Mr. Livingston orders to account with you for your Coast Comm's wch is to be four out of Every one hundred and Four, or in the Like proportion from the Neet Sales of the Slaves at Jamaica that you may put in his hands on our Acct.; at Jamaica you are to follow Whatever orders we may Lodge there to Said Mr. Livingston and yourself, that is to Say respecting the dispatching of our Vessel back to this port. We would in the Strongest Manner recommend to you in Case you Sell the Vessel and Cargo, on the Coast for Bills of Exchange, that you take none but what Can be relyd upon as Good, and that the Drawers or Indorsers are good and responsible Men, and that you Leave us no outstanding Debts behind if posible, in your Way from the Coast to Jama. we would not have you put into any port in the West Indias if it Can be avoided; We have no need of recommending to you that in the persuit of your Voyages, you use the greatest dispatch, as Such a Small Vessel cannot Support any great Expen[ce] and that you are Watchfull of the Security of the Slaves; the Priviledge Slaves we have agreed to give in this Sloop is Four and one half to your Self and one and one half to your Chief mate, Mr. Will'm English, and no more, unless you Should purchase any thing with our Nephew Abraham Lopez's Venture for wch he has our Concent, we desier yould not Slip any oppertunity of advicing us with the State of your Affairs as well from the Coast as from any other port you may be at, Specially if you Should Sell your Vessel and Cargo for Slaves and Ship the Slaves in Either Capt. All or any other Vessel with the name of Vessel and Master and the port She is bound to in Case we Should think proper to Insure.

NEWPORT July 22d 1765.

Capt. Abraham All, We hope you are before this Safe arrived on the Coast and that you may have found a favourable prospect of making a Quick and advantagious Voyage; Reflecting on the orders we gave you, find we Stated the price of Molasses at Jama. at 13 d. wch we find is higher then it will answer to bring it to this Market, we therefore refer you to What orders we Shall Lodge in the hands of Mr. Livingston at Jama. hereafter for that purpose. We have ordered Capt. Nath'l Brig in our Sloop, that in Case he Should dispose of his Vessel and Cargo for Slaves, and you Should not have disposed of our Brig to put on board of your Vessel as many Slaves as you Can Conveniently take unboard, over and above What you may purchase with your Cargo on our Acct. wch in that Case we desier youll take them on board and Deliver them to Said Mr. Livingston on our Accto't Seperate from those that may belong to your Cargoe, your wife is well.

171. NEWS ITEMS RELATING TO SLAVE TRADE, 1765.¹

Capt. Henry Tilinghast from the Coast of Africa, but last from South Carolina, arrived here last Friday. He sailed from Annamaboa the first of May, and left there the Captains Thomas Wickham, Robert Stoddard, William Pinniger, John Coddington, and William Earle of this Port; Caleb Gardner, and Samuel James of Piscataqua, Capt. John Perry, from New York, arrived three Weeks before he sailed. Trade extreme dull upon the Coast.

By Letters from Capt. Hopkins in a Brig belonging to Providence arrived here from Antigua from the Coast of Africa we learn That soon after he left the Coast, the Number of his Men being reduced by Sickness, he was obliged to permit some of the Slaves to come upon Deck to assist the People: These Slaves contrived to release the others, and the whole rose upon the People, and endeavoured to get Possession of the Vessel; but was happily prevented by the Captain and his Men, who killed, wounded and forced overboard, Eighty of them, which obliged the rest to submit.

We hear that Capt. Rogers, of this Place, who lately arrived in the West-Indies from Africa, with a Number of Slaves, being bound from Barbados, to Antigua, the Blacks made an Attempt to overcome the Vessel's Company, but were subdued and twelve of them killed.

LONDON the 14th Feby 1766.

Sir, . . . niether do I hear any thing of the Spry Pinneger or the other Vessells You dispatch'd to the Coast of Africa.² . . .

I Observe you had a Letter from Capt Pinneger dated at the Coast the 11th July, that He wou'd proceed to Jamaica as soon as he had taken in his Wood and Water, as yet hear nothing of him. I observe your orders to procure Insurance on £1500 on the Brigg Africa Abraham All and £1200 the Sloop Bettsy Nat. Brigs, both at and from the Coast of Africa to Kingston in Jamaica all wch shall get done and advise you thereof but cannot by this Opportunity as have just rec'd your Letter, Observe that Mr. Jacob Rod. Riviera holds one third Concern in each of those Vessells, therefore as there are 2 Interests must be done on different policies. . . .

[173] ¹ Vernon Letter-Book, no. 77, p. 214.

[174] ¹ Lopez Letter-Book, no. 629, p. 2. The letter is repeated on p. 6. Stead had written in the preceding September that he had received no request for insurance on the Betsey and the Africa, and thought possibly Lopez had placed the insurance at home (Letter-Book, no. 622, p. 68). Between writing the first and second paragraphs of this letter he received a letter from Lopez.

² On June 20 Stead wrote: "I see with pleasure that the Spry, Pinneger, was arriv'd at Barbadoes and was to proceed to Jamaica; the Underwriters have made frequent Enquiry about Her, as they have now taken the Risque upon them near 2 Years" (Lopez Letter-Book, no. 629, pp. 15, 20). Captain Pinniger had died before this was written but the word had not yet reached London.

LONDON the 7th March 1766.

Sir, . . . As yet hear nothing of the Guineamen, therefore expected before this You wou'd have Remitted Me some Bills. . . . at foot Hereof You have an account of what Insurance have done on your Guineaman wch was with great difficulty got any thing done as your order is given very loosely for You do not tell Me when your Ship was at the Coast or when to sail, niether at what Valuation to put the Negroes wch when put down in the Policy there is no occasion for a Proof of Interest wch occasions much delay, there are many Underwriters who will not write these Adventures, as they do not look upon them to be the most Eligible, therefore it is necessary you give as full an Explanation, as also how We are to Value the Cargoe on Board. You never can be too particular in giving your Description of the Quality of the Ships for it cannot be suppos'd Gentlemen will take upon them a Risque wch they can get no Information about, as also what time they are like to leave the Coast,² . . .

² In the earlier portion of this letter a question was asked about the making of Guinea casks in Providence. Nicholas Brown replied on June 28, offering to allow the Wantons to use the trade-book at any time, and stating that no Providence cooper would deliver Guinea hogsheads for less than £15, since to answer their purpose they must be made of the very "best stuff." Captain Hopkins's first mate was at sea, but the Browns were able to recommend his second mate heartily (ibid.). This correspondence presents an interesting picture of the relations between Newport and Providence, as well as between one commercial firm and another. The same month in which this letter was written Samuel Nightingale of Providence wrote to Lopez concerning the Guinea casks made by the Providence cooper Mr. Hacker. ²Similar items follow. On Aug. 20 there is another to "My Lord Augustus Fitzroy," possibly one of the native traders (ante, no. 140, n. 5). After several pages recording such trade as this there follows a list of provisions purchased, including fish, plantins, potatoes, limes, eggs, greens. There is also a careful list of other expenses on the West Coast, but no clue to the name of the vessel or the captain whose trade is recorded. The probability is that the vessel belonged to the Vernons, as the bulk of the papers in this box are Vernon papers.

185. ABRAHAM PEREIRA MENDES TO AARON LOPEZ, 1767.¹

KINGSTON, 1st November, 1767.

Hon'd Sir, . . . I shipped on board Capt. Newdigate 2 prime Slaves, a Man and Wench, which costed me £72 for both. they are young Negroes and very able. . . .

I must now give you a Narrative of my Transactions with Capt. All. At my arrival in this place I heard of Capt. All being here, which gave me great Satisfaction, more so as I heard Negroes was in great demand. he paid me a visit the first day, but being very weak and obliged to receive company could not talk over matters. at the third day, I waited on Capt. All on board his Brig and to my great Surprise, I found the Negroes nothing to what I expected. However I laid down to Capt. All the consequence of his being detain'd, the great Expence his Negroes must be att, his portlage bill running up, and the Vessell receiving damage every day and the approaching Winter, and desired he would deliver the Negroes in my hands and would use all means to procure him 20 or 30 punch (eon)s Rum. He absolutely told me he could not answer the same as it was against his Orders. I made for answer that nothing but Mr. Lopez and Mr. Rivera's Interest which I have so much at Heart would have prompt(ed) me to purpose that Question. I dare say had he delivered the Negroes to me I could have sold them to good planters for a very good prise. All my means was not wanting in helping to dispose the Negroes but as his orders mentions Cash or Rum could not obtain it. I imagine he must att last yield to my proposition and you may rest yourself contented, that my utmost endeavours shall not be wanting, and hope very soon to give you good Tidings on this head. upon the whole I cannot totally blame Capt. All as his Instructions was so particular. . . .

[185] ¹ Commerce of R. I., I. 209-210. Mendes, who had gone to Jamaica, probably from Newport, was Lopez's son-in-law. He went with power of attorney to receive some £600 due to Lopez from Philip Livingston for slave cargoes (Lopez Letter-Book, no. 81). His first letter, of Sept. 28, was written before he had seen Captain All's cargo, at which time he hoped to procure £25 stg. for the negroes. The next day he inspected the Africa, and as a result wrote a most discouraging account to Lopez. Commerce of R. I., I. 203, 205.

NEWPORT Nov. 6th 1767.

Dear Mr. Abra Pera Mendes, . . . it also gives me no Small Pleasure to find you arrived in Season to Assist Capt. All, in the disposal of his Small Cargo, by what he had wrote us from Barbados and on his arrival at Jama we Expect he had brought off a parcel of Suitable Slaves for that Market, which am sorry to understand by you is Much to the Contrary, I am afraid by the sale of the 11² he had made and the Mortality he had met with Since he arrived there, that his refusing the first offer he had will turn to our disadvantage, however hope that will be made up by your Assiduous Endeavour to promote our Interest wch am well Convinced you allways will have at heart: We approve Much your Resolution of sending her away soon with a Load of Rum and hope by Next week to See him safe arrived here. Capt. Briggs is not yet returned nor have we had any other News then to see by prints he was arrived at Antigua, wish to see him home [torn and illegible].

"We also have your Favour of 31 July informing us of the Sale of 50 Slaves wch average about £39 Stg. and the rem'dr wou'd soon be disposed of, that you had purchasd a Load of Corn and hoped to dispatch her by the last of the next Week. As she is not yet Arrivd you may believe gives us some concern, as we cannot conceive the Reason of her being detain'd. We make great dependance on your remitting us a considerable Sum in Octr. agreeable to what you wrote us with a farther remittance in Decr. but flatter our Selves you will then be able to remit the whol." ALEXANDER BRABNER, 1768.¹

Dear Sir, We Wrote you under Cover to Mr. Alex'r Hume at St. Kitts Respect'g our Brig Charlotte Wm. Taylor whom We Orderd to Stop at your Island from Africa to try your Markits; we the Last Evening heard the Unhappy News of his Death on the Passage, and that the Vessel was Arrived at your Island under the Care of his Mate Mr. Wm. Pinniger, this Is Oral News per Via St. Kitts and fear its but too True. as we Recommended Capt. Taylor to Make Application to you make No Doubt the Mate hath Done the Same and that the Whole Management of our affairs have Naturally fall'n into your hands which makes us Perfectly Easy. we Wrote to Mr. Alex'r Hume at St. Kitts Desiring him to Lodge a Letter with you for Capt. Tayler, and therein Make the Utmost Offer he wou'd Give for a Cargo of Slaves, which if he thought it worth his While to Proceed up to St. Kitts Rather than Sell at St. Croix Indeed if it was more for our Interest he was order'd to go up, if he hath been Kind Enough to make an offer, and you have Judged it for our Benefit make No Doubt but you have advised Mr. Pinnigar to Proceed up, Otherwise to Sell with you or Proceed to Jamaica as you Thought Best. We have heard the Dutys of Slaves with you is Near 20 PCt. Certainly it Cant be Expected it falls upon the Seller, that Sum out of £30 St'g will not Do which was Near about the Price we Limited at your Island. Neither Did we think it wou'd answer to take Produce as the Sugars are too high and Ordinary for our Markits, Dutys being 5/ St'g P. C. Rum Prohibited and the Risque therefore Very Great more than Equal to the Advantage which almost Confindd Capt. Tayler to Sell for Bills Ex'a Only however if Either you or Mr. Pinnegar, hath Sold for part Produce we must Intreat of you to Take but few Sugars and those Very Good, and fill the Vessel up with Rum on which Subject we have fully wrote the Capt. and Pray be Carefull that he Observes his directions which he will Communicate to you.

If this young Man Mr. Pinnegar has been so indiscreet as to Take the sole and Intire disposition of his Cargo and Affairs, we Beg and Intreat Sir upon the Rec't of this youd Just do for us, as the Affair was your own, not Doubting of your Candour we Submit Everything to your Better Judgment.

We only Beg Leave to Mention That the 2nd Mate Mr. Edward Taylor is Son to yr Old Fr'd T. T. Taylor your Best Advice to him will Be Acceptable, we wis[h] you mor Perfect helth Than our above Friend who is Now Confined with the Gout.

191. WILLIAM VERNON AND COMPANY TO WILLIAM PINNIGER,

Sir, Last Evening we heard the Malancholy News of Cap Wm. Taylors Death by way of St. Christopher. We make No Doubt but that he had Rec'd our Orders upon the Coast, to stop at St. Croix and try the Markets and that you have Rec'd our Letters which we Lodged there for him in the hands of Mr. Alex'r Brabnor and also a Letter from Mr. Alex'r Humes from St. Kitts, to whom We Wrote desireing him to Lodge for Capt. Taylor at St. Croix, to Care of Mr. Brabner, Saying What he Wou'd Give for his Cargo of Slaves, if he wou'd Proceed Up to St. Kitts, which offer we Expected woud be Near £30 St'g per head, by this Meens Capt. Tayler woud be Informd at which of Those Places it wou'd be most Advantagious to Sell at. We Flatter ourselves that you have Rec'd all Those Letters directed to Capt. Tayler, and Made the Best Advantage of Them For our Interest and your own Reputation, we further Wrote Mr. Brabner Requesting him to Assist Capt. Tayler in All Things Respecting his Sale or Proceeding further which he was to do if the Markits did not Suit him vizt. To Jamaica Stopping at the Mount in his Way Down, where Perhaps he might get about £30 St'g per hea[d]. We are Rather Inclined to think that you have Contracted for your Slaves at St. Croix, and must Naturally Conclude you have Put yr Business into the hands of Mr. Brabner our Friend, in which we Shall be best Satisfyed, and that yr Slaves ar sold free from Dutys to the Seller, as we are Informd the Dutys are 20 PCt. which you well Know will by No Means do upon a Sale of £28 or £30 St'g. We further have Said in Our Letter to Capt Tayler that it wou'd not do to Sell for Produce As the Dutys of Sugar is Very high,² and an Utter Prohibition On Rum in Any of the English Colonys. however if your Slaves are Sold for Produce its best to fill your Lower hold with Rum Take a few Cask of Very good Sugars, (as Ordinary will not Sell) in your hatch way and Proceed here, go in the Backside of the Island at Either End and Give us Intelligence there of as soon and Privately as Possible, if you Meet with any Man of Warr or Cutters as there is two In this Port at Present, you must say you Put in in Distress, for Want of Provisions, Water or Some thing Absolutely Necessary, and that you are bound to Fyal one of the Western Islands, for Which Place your Invoices and Bills Lading must Absolutely be made out for and your People Shipt to Proceed there, for which Purpose we have Given you Orders to Proceed There, and Inclosed herewith which you are to Produce and Insist upon if Met with, concealing Every Paper, that may give the Least Intimation of your Stopping here, these Measures if you Take Rum on Board you are Strictly to Observe. we shall send a Small Vessel from hence in a few Days to St. Croix that will want about 40 hhds. Rum, if you meet with her she may be supply'd out of your Cargo. we Cannot be More Particular than Above, but Must Trust to your Discretion, Fidelity and Candour, Advising and Consulting in Every thing with our good Friend Mr. Alex'r Brabner, making all Possible dispatch, be frugal of yr Expences on the Vessel, Preserve harmony and Agreement among Your Seamen.

NEWPORT 10th Feby. 1768.

Sir, You are become Master of our Brig Royal Charlotte by the Death of Capt Wm. Taylor and hearing that you've Sold yr Cargo of Slaves at St. Croix, for which if you are to Take Produce you are Sensible it will not answer to Bring Sugars the Dutys are so very high, Neither Can you Bring Rum as there is an Utter Prohibition thereof in Any of the Colonys.

We Order you therefore to Load your Vessel in the Lower hold with Rum and Proceed to Fyal one of the Western Islands, where Sir, In consequence of the application of Mr. Robert Sorsbie to us for that purpose, we hereby engage that any Agreement that Messrs. Lovell Morson and Co. of Dominica may come to with any person, for Negroes consigned to them for sale by Messrs James Clark and Co., shall be punctually performed; and we hereby undertake also to accept and pay any and all Bills they may draw on us in pursuance of such Consignments, in all cases but that of the Island wherein such sale shall be made, or they reside, being invaded by an Enemy.

We are respectfully, Sir, Your Most Humble Servants, KENDER, MASON AND CO.

Messrs. Lovell and Morson sell as well to the French and Spaniards, for whom they have large orders to execute, as to our Planters of B.Bs.² Antigua and Dominica; so that under these circumstances, Dominica seems to bid fairer to render you advantageous sales, than any other Island.

LONDON, 29th Aug., 1770.

We agree that the withinmentioned Guaranty shall subsist not only for such Negroes as may be consigned Messrs. Lovell Morson and Co. by Messrs. James Clark and Co., but also for such Negroes as may be consigned to them by Messrs. Butler and Brown or Robert Brown Esqr.

² Trade was not flourishing on the African coast in 1770 and the material for that year is meagre, yet some Rhode Island vessels were trading or preparing to trade. Hayley and Hopkins insured the Cleopatra, Briggs; Captain All arrived in Philadelphia from an African voyage; and news came from Capt. Silas Cook of the death of Mr. Haywood Smith on the coast (Lopez Letter-Book, no. 631, pp. 26, 48; Mass. Gaz. and News Letter, Jan. 11, and Dec. 7, 1770). The Wetmore Papers and those in the Shepley Library (Providence) contain lists of stores for the sloop Adventure, bound for Africa under Capt. Thomas Rogers, now in the service of the Champlins. They heard on Feb. 16, 1771, by way of Messrs. Stevenson and Went, that on Nov. 28 Captain Rogers was trading at Anamabo. N. Y. Hist. Soc., Slavery MSS., box VI.

heartly thanks. Captain Briggs in the Cleopatra,² (quite unexpected so early) arrived here the 11th Curr. with a Cargo of 96 Slaves; as soon as his Vessell was safely anchor'd he waited on us, and informed us his intention was to value himself on us, and that we had the preference to dispose of his cargo provided we wou'd take him up, upon as good terms as any other good and safe house here would; and in consequence thereof, and from the advice of our good friend Mr. Stocker, we went off and viewed his slaves, which appear'd healthy, but rather a great proportion of privelege³ and male slaves; we however made Capt Briggs the offer of taking him up, to make the most we cou'd of his Cargo, and to sell his privelege free of Commission, but for such to take the Bills we might receive in payment without our guaranteeing them, this he objected to, tho seem'd desirous we shou'd sell him and thus circumstanced one or two days past, after which we recommended to him to try what Messrs. Jones and Moe wou'd do, and we make no doubt their terms were more agreeable, so he struck with them, tho' those gentn behaved very politely, and were tender of having anything to do with the Cargo untill we told Capn Briggs he had best try them, and that for the last Cargo of Slaves we sold, we had Bills to a considerable amount protested, that were taken in payment; and we assure you Gentn. we never knew so many bills protested in one year as was the last, that we think there is the greatest risk in trade we ever knew. We are truly sorry we could not in this second attempt commence a Correspondence with you, but are hopefull times will mend and a future day establish a lasting connexion between us. Capt. Briggs has no doubt wrote you [as] well as Messrs Jones and Moe.

P. S. We deliver'd your Letter to Capt. Briggs immediately on receipt of it.⁴

² For this voyage the Cleopatra was insured for £1500, at a cost of £133 15s 3d. (Hayley and Hopkins to Lopez, July 24, 1770, Letter-Book, no. 631, p. 26). "NEW PORT, March 11. The Captains Pease and Harrison arrived here last Week, from Barbadoes, and advise, that the Captains Clark, Briggs, and English, all of this Port, were arrived at Barbadoes, from the Coast of Africa; by all Accounts from the Coast, the Trade there was extremely dull, several Vessels having sold their Cargoes on 6 and 12 Months Credit, and then to take a Slave for 190 Gallons of Rum; while others were obliged to leave their Cargoes consigned to the Factors there, and run the Risk [of] getting Something or Nothing for them." *Mass. Sir, We recd. yours of 13 Ulto. from Barbados, and find that you had purchased 71 Slaves for Cargo and Bro't them all in, being in perfect Health and Shou'd Sail in 10 or 12 days for Virginia, as you well remark if cou'd possibly be there between the Months of March and Septr. it was our Possitive orders that you proceed to Virginia and therefore if you cou'd obtain our Limitt of £30 Stg. Round, it was not in your power to Sell at Barbados in which you was certainly right; therefore upon your Arrival at Rappahannock you'l address yourself to Col. Jno. Thornton to Whom we have Wrote on the Subject and desired him to dispatch your Vessel as Soon as Possible with about 150 bbs. of good fresh Flour and 2 or 3 Tons of good Hemp and fill her up with White Oak Staves and heading if to be had readily or you may even take 200 bbs. Flour if Cheap not to exceed 12 pr Ct. if you think it is absolutely necessary to tarry untill all your Slaves are Sold and your Vessel can be dispatch'd sometime Sooner its best to Send yr Cheif Mate Home with her, if you do not Load your Vessel bring as many of your Water Casts [casks] home as you can Stow, better than leaving them behind, without you can Sell them there.

If you have more hands than is necessary and can discharge them upon good Terms its best to do it and avoid all expences upon your Vessel that you can, we have Recommend to Col. Thornton to Sell part of your Slaves upon Credit provided it will make a material diff'ce in the Price of them taking care to have good Security and not a long Cr.² . . .

GRENADA April 22nd 1771.

Gentlemen, Agreeable to promise of our R:T: when at Newport, we embrace this first Opportunity, (after his arrival here) of advising you of the State of our Markett for Slaves, which we are sorry to say is not quite so good as it has been or might reasonably be expected from the small number that has been sold lately, out of seventeen Cargoes, say abt 3750 Slaves, that came in full expectation of selling at this Market in the space of 5 Months last past, only six Cargoes say abo't 1320 Slaves, has been sold, all the rest gone to Jamaica or Carolina but believe mostly to the former place, those that sold here all averag'd a tolerable good price, say from £35 to £37, Slaves being still in demand, but the disappointments the Factors have met with from having the Planters Bills proteste[d] makes us cautious of drawing on our Correspondents besides having reduced many of them to the greatest difficulties and of course not in a Capacity to purchase Slaves, yet we can still with propriety say that this is the best Market of any of the windward Islands, and we are in great hopes we shall be able to keep up the Price of Gold Coast Slaves, especially when they come in small Cargo's. two days ago arriv'd here Mr. Mason's Brig Polly, Capt. Elliott with Ninety odd Slaves including Priviledge of which we have agreed to sell, altho' we have lately refus'd at least a dozen Cargo's that was offer'd us on any terms, being determined to strain every Nerve for the Interest and good Opinion of our Newport Friends.

Captains Silas Cook, Charles Moore, and Thomas Rogers of Rhode Island also signed this protest. See this work, II. 543 n.

²On the same day the Vernons wrote to Col. John Thornton of Fredericksburg, Va.: "We hear Virginia slaves sell for £45. We recommend our Friend Richard Brew Esq. at Annamaboe to your House who perhaps ships more slaves than any one man in the Kingdom." He added that Capt. John Duncan, then in Barbados, had 71 slaves on account of the Vernons and 19 on his own account. Letter-Book, no. 77.

Capt. Elliott tells us your Sloop arriv'd at Annamaboe about the first of February, had sold before Capt. Elliott left the Coast the 8th Febry and was gone down Widan to land his Rum, from which account we presum he will be in the West Indies sooner than you imagind. Capt. Elliotts Slaves are good we expect to turn them out abt £38, when any alteration in our Markett, (which we hope will be for the better) you may depend on being advised.

We sell Mr. Morson's Slaves on the same terms we sold Mr. Hazards say Bills at a Medium of 12 Months, and Shorter it will be impossible for us to give them this Year. If your Sloop calls on us you may depend on our acting in every respect as if the Cargo was our own, will lodge letters at Barbadoes for your Captain which may be some government to him if he calls there, will write you again pr Capt. Elliott who leaves this in about a fortnight, he tells us Slaves are very high on the Coast.

They had been considering a joint African venture since the beginning of June, 1771.

had we met with a Vessel it never wou'd have Answered at any rate to have sent her out in ballast as the Out fits And Port Charges are very high from hence.

Mr. Peatt and self have now come to this resolution to leave it to you to Purchase a proper Vessel either at Rhode Island or Providence, Boston Or the Eastward or any where in your Neighbourhood, Viz. A good Brig or Snow from 110 to 130 Tons Burthen but not to exceed the Latter, to Get her Sound and as well found as possible, and not above 3 or 4 years old, Mr. Peatt recommends you pay regard to a long floor, easy Draught Water, and Clean Run as likely to Sail Well which is very Meterial for a Gunia Man and We suppose such a Vessel well found with two Suits of sails may be purchased from £400 to £500 Sterling at most, as we wou'd not have you go much higher than that. I suppose the most likely place to get a Vessel at will be Boston, Salem or Nebury, as the winter is coming on may be met with there Cheap, but this I leave to your Self. If you can meet with one at Rhode Island desire you will take Mr. Fran's Malbone's Advice in that matter, Who I have wrote to by this Oppertunity, to give you his Assistance as well as to indorse Your Bills on Me for the Purchase of the Vessel. But if you are oblig'd to go to Boston, or the Eastward you must Apply to Mr. Ralph Hinman² of Boston on that Account, as I have likewise Wrote him a Letter on the Occasion by this Oppertunity to serve in Case of Need. You will have time enough to look about you for this Vessel between this Time and March next as it will be a good time to fit out in all the month of April and to sail for the Coast by the begining of May, which from the present Appearance of things will be early enough to follow those already gone to the Coast. I am willing to make this further trial to Gunia on yours as well as Messr. Peatts Aco't who at any rate must both be benifited by the Voyage. For my Own part I have no grat Expectation of Profits, If you are Succesful and lose but few Slaves may make a saving Voyage and do well for the Conserved. I need not hint to you if you purchase the fewor if but good Slaves they will always Command a price at Kingstown, and M'rs Peatts and Westmorland will have the most of them engag'd long before you get there to Good Men. As soon as you have Purchased this Vessel you will get Mess's Malbone to be purchasing about 15,000 gallons of Rum to be ready at the time I have mentioned or Sooner. if you have any Encouragement to do any Thing at Windward, the above Quant'y of Rum We think full enough for you to get off those dull times as laying long on the Coast is what ruins every thing in small Vessels.

²Ralph Inman, Boston merchant and Loyalist, was a brother-in-law of John Rowe, in whose diary he makes frequent appearance. On July 2, 1776, his name was returned to the Committee of Correspondence among those inimical to the United States. New Eng. Hist. and Gen. Reg., XXX. 442.

If you Purchase a Vessel at Boston or Eastward wou'd have you get her Insured round to Newport as there is some risque to come Cape Cod and so forth in the Winter. If you are not Acquainted with the Coast you will no doubt get some person with you that is. Also Write me as soon as you have a prospect of geting a Vessel as Above and any other late Acc'ts from the Coast. My Ship Africa Arrived at Hull the 26th July after 8 weeks passage from Jamaica, and made a pretty good Freight, and finding She wou'd want A great repair her Sheathing Rotten and Rudder bad thought it best to get quit of her and accordingly sold her for £370 Sterling Which was the most She wou'd fetch. Capt. Stocford³ was very Sickly and not able to come upon Deck most of the passage but is now hearty and as well as ever again, is still in London and says he is in some hopes of geting a Vessel if not returns home soon. It was very lucky that Mr. Peatt came Passenger in my Vessel as he was oblig'd to take the charge of her most of the voyage on Aco't of Stockfordes Illness also being better acquainted with the English Channel.

Your Bill on Mess's Allen Marlas and Co. for £400 Sterling will be Due next Month, and when paid will advise you. I suppose you will Want abt £150 Sterling more to make up your Third share of this proposed Vessel and Cargo etc. which no Doubt you'l be able to make you Up in Rum etc. amongst your Friends at Newport, as it will be best for You to hold a third as first proposed. But if not you must take Only A Quarter part and Mr. Peatt and self must hold the rest. But this I leave to your self as it may suit you, Mr. Malbone and you must fix that. I have purchased a Guinea Furnace and Hearth here, which shall be sent you by the first Vessel for Rhode Island which I suppose will be Capt. Gilbert. The Swivel Guns, Chains, Hand Cuffs and Sheckles etc. at Mr. Malbones must be valued when Delivered you, and shall send a Box of Midicenes from this with a Barrel of Gun Powder, some Beans etc. so that nothing of that sort will be wanted to be purchased at Newport. . . .

When he left Annamaboe there was only Capt. Hicks and Capt. Hanners and they were almost Slaved off and was a giving to the Gent'n of the Castles One Hundred and Sixty Gallons. I wrote you last by way of Boston, when I then made you Acquainted with what Vessels where a going and gone and I now further Inform you who are a going and will Sail soon, Capt. More, Capt. Rogers, Capt. Bordine from this port, from Boston a Snow belonging to So. Carolina. Mr. Hazzard and Capt. Champlain's Vessels Are lying by till next Spring, the above are all that I know or hear talked of are fitting out for Gunia. I should be excessive Glad to hear from you to know wether or not you had carried your plan into Execution which I do not doubt but you have for I assure you being out of Buisness so long makes me like A Fish out of Water, However I doubt not but in good time. I must beg that whatever Interest You send out, my part of the Vessel of Mine you will Insure, for Our Winter is set in very Cold, and it is a bad Season to come on the Coast. I saw Mr. Malbone yesterday and asked him if he would Write to you, and he said he could not tell you any more than he had Said before he heard from you. . . .

NEWPORT 16th Decr. 1771.

Sirs, We have now before us your two last fav'rs viz. 8 Feb'ry and 3d April, since wch we are intirely deprived of a single line from you. We are really at a loss to suggest a sufficient reason; but imagine you have taken umbrage at our adressing the Brigg't Othello Jno. Duncan to Mr. John Thornton at Rappahannock, its very true by our Letters you might reasonably expect her to your adress; but we had the greatest encouragement imaginable from the above Gentle'n of his making the Remittance in the bottom for the whole amount of the Cargo of Slaves, and the prospect appearing equally good to us of obtaining great prizes[prices] were strong motives to us, of Ordering her to Rappahannock, wch we had only just Time to countermand our Order, to the Master. When Gentle'n you reflect upon the remittance made us for the Two Cargos of Slaves that you sold you cannot but suppose we wou'd close with such an offer, as the difference of the advantage of having so large a sum to improve and of its laying dead for several years is very great and besides our being so vastly disappointed in your promise made us in Feb'ry of depending upon our Ballance, at the Riseing of your Genl. Court viz in April, and then say no Time shall be lost in making the most speedy remittance for your Ballance. To pass by every thing that has happened, without one more complaint, we must say in justice to your House that your sales have ever been satisfactory to us, as any we have received, and can truly wish your closing this Acct. may be a means of soon opening another.

LONDON 24th February 1772.

Sir, . . . I cant say more than what I have before About Purchasing a Vessel, which have no doubt but you have Accomplished or[ere] this and is geting ready for the Voyage and if you can get your Cargo of Rum and every thing on Board to sail from Newport about the last of may to get on the Coast by the Time the Rainy Season is Over will be early enough to follow all those Vessels that gone before, and in Case you should think propper to call at windward as you go down to get a few Slaves before you come to Anamaboe shall leave that to your self to do as seems best. As your Cargo will be but small you'l the sooner get it off and if you can get Slaved in time to get down to Jamiaca in all the month of Jany. Will be a good Time for Sale of Slaves, of which I know you will be as particular in the Choise of as the Times will admit of. Good Slaves always sells high at Jamaica, they now Avarage £40 Ster'g pr head there at Least in Bills or Cash.

When you are ready to Sail from Newport Write Mess's Peatts and Westmorland of Kingston Jamiaca as also by every Oppertunity from the Coast that they may know when to expect you to be prepared accordingly, As I make no doubt of their engaging all the Cargo by Orders amongst their Friends in the Country long before you get there. I desire you may write Me as soon as you have got the Vessel ready and made a begining to take in your Cargo of Rum, by Boston or Newyork that I may get the Insurance made here on Vessel and Cargo from Newport to the Coast Guinea and Anchor to Jamaica and your part of the Consern I shall get done with my own. You will take a sufficciant Quantity of Rice from Rhode Island to serve the Voyage and not depend on getting it on the Coast as before, the fatal Consequence of that Disappointment We have experienced, also get some black Ey'd pease which may be had from Philidilphia or Newyork. On the other side I have given an Estimate of what provissions etc. I wou'd have you take, But as Mr. Malbone and you are better Judges than I of what is Nessary to

P.S. I shall not send any powder, you can get a little at Newport as its not worth while to send so small a quantity from here now nor Beans you must get Black Ey'd peas in room of them.

208. CAPTAIN PELEG CLARKE TO RALPH INMAN, 1772.¹

NEWPORT 29th April 1772.

S'r, Your Fav'r per Post I recd. Acknowledge my Neglect of not writing before, I intended as soon as I hd. Purchased a Vessel but since that time I have let the post slip throu'h hurry of buisness. I have shew'd your Letter to Mr. Malbone and he has given Mr. Fletcher Cr. for the £1.8.8 and now send you the Ball'e by Mr.

[208] ¹ Clarke Letter-Book, no. 75 A. Inman had written to Clarke on Jan. 13 offering his assistance in finding a satisfactory vessel. Clarke replied on Jan. 16, and on the 27th Inman wrote recommending the Bristol, Boston-built, belonging to John Hancock, which could be had for £700. Clarke evidently went to Boston to see this vessel but nothing came of the negotiations. Ibid.

mumphord which is £2.7.4 L M.² and am much oblig'd to you for your favour. After several Tryals of Purchasing a Vessel since my return from Boston, I at last have taken an old Vessel of Mr. Malbones that was rebuilt about 2 years ago.³ She will carry the Cargo that Mr. Fletcher Ordered and is a good Sailor and is well found and will answer for the Voyage, But I am very Sure Mr. Fletcher cou'd have Suited himself and me much better in London or I cou'd have had I not been Limited. I gave Mr. Malbone £450 St'g for her and I expect it will cost £50 St'g more to fix her for a Guinea Voyage, as I am Oblig'd to make some Alterations in her, Mr. Fletcher very well knows her as she was rebuilding when he was here. I heare there are Several Guinea man fitting out of Boston, I shall take it a favour you'l let me know by the next post if it is so and in what forwardness they are. I write this day to Mr. Fletcher by way of Liverpool and if any Oppertunity presents from Boston and you write him I beg you will Acquaint him that I expect to Sail in a fortnight for the Coast, and shall transmit all the Acco'ts by Capt. Shand who will Sail in about three weeks. . . .

BOSTON 11th May '72.

Sir. . . . Thos. Boylston has one Vessel bound to Guinea. She don't begin to load till the beginning of June and will take at least a month after that to get away. He has made a purchase this week of a Brig for Mr. Carty² about 180 Tons, he gave £1000 Stg. for her and going to make her into a Ship. She will not get to Sea as soon as the other, So you will have Six Weeks start. I hear there's one going from Newberry but cannot Learn what forwardness she is in. . . .

210. CHRISTOPHER AND GEORGE CHAMPLIN TO CAPTAIN SAMUEL TUELL, 1772.¹

NEWPORT, May 12th, 1772.

Sir, We flatter our selves this will meet you in safety upon the Coast in a fair way of making us a Voyage, as from the accounts

up to January, and the price Capt. Gardner in Mr. Wickhams Ship obtained for his rum Slaves was much lowered, At the Castles with whom he traded. Colo. Wanton's Brig, Mowit Master, is arived here, cleared his owners £500 Stg. Capt. Brigs carried to Barbados 230 Slaves sold 210 of them at £33 Stg. round, left 40 on the Coast will make a good voyage. We don't doubt of your giting the same price if the Slaves are good in kind which without doubt you will endeavour to procure. Capt. Clark will deliver you this. Capt. Hicks in the Ship will not sale till June.² Mr. Hazards brig not till August. these are the only vessells we kno of that can follow you from Newport and before they git down flatter our selves you will be near finishing. Lin Martin is gone to Philadelphia to fit, cannot sale from thence 'till July. We have wrote to London for a Guarantee on a House at the Granados and St. Kitts,³ from both which places we shall be informed the price of Slaves before we lodge our orders at Barbados for you which will enable us to limit the price at Barbados. you'll write us by all occassions. keep your Business to your self. there is two vessells will leave Boston in (a) month for the Coast, that in June and July 3 or 4 vessells will sale near together.⁴ Capt. Gardner informs his owners after laying two months on the Coast alone he could not make any trade with the blacks, and finally sold to the Castles at 130 to 150 for women and 140 to 160 for prime men. Is likely to make a fine voyage. therefore we earnestly recomend to you as soon as you receive this to sell all the rum you may have on hand to the Castles on the best terms you can for prime Slaves, and make all dispatch of, for when those vessells I mention to you git down the Castles will be filled, which will be within a month after this letter or 6 weeks at most, and shoud you tarry 'till they git down the chaunce will be lost. in this you'll act as things appear as we cannot judge how the trade is at this distance, of St. Croix. If the vessel is sold on the coast, the risk on cargo to be continued on such other vessel or vessels as may carry the slaves to market, and 4 per cent. in that case to be returned on the £400 insured on vessels and freight." The sums were £400 on vessel and "freight valud" and £1000 on cargo; the rate "eight guineas per cent." (Com. of R. I., I. 397). The expenses incident to the outfit of this voyage of the Adventure are to be found in detail in the Wetmore Papers (vol. V.), along with the advances to the seamen and the sources of the cargo of rum carried. The captain had received when the vessel sailed £112 18, the first mate, Robert Champlin, £487 14 4, the total advances amounted to £1570 19 10. The total cargo of rum, amounting to 13,688 galls., came from Whitehorne, Cranston, Overing, Cooke, Coggeshall, Malbone, Mayson (Mason?), and Thurston. Champlin seems to have carried goods amounting to £591 15 for private trade.

² Word had reached Newport in February that the Fanny, Capt. Benjamin Hicks, had arrived at Barbados, where he had found an excellent market. He was evidently preparing for a prompt return to Africa. News Letter, Feb. 13, 1772.

³ I. e., for papers similar to those received by Aaron Lopez. See ante, no. 195.

⁴ Six Boston vessels are recorded as sailing for Africa in 1772.

but to lay a long time on the Coast to piddle with blacks must be against the voyage. keep it an entire secret what vessells are coming down on the Coast, as it may make the Castles indifferent about buying if they kno it.

NEWPORT 8th Aug't 1772.

S'r, We have your fav'r of the 30th June before us, owning the receipt of ours of the 16th Decr. last. We observe that the reason of our balla. not being remitted was the distress of the Country by the Floods in May 1771, and not to what we suggested. You may be Assured we did not adopt those sentiments so fully, but that we Ordered Capt. Robt. Elliot, in our schooner Active, who called at Barbadoes in May last from Affrica, where if he did not obtain our limitts for his Cargo of Slaves, to proceed directly to James River and adress himself to you. His slaves becoming sickly thought best to sell something under our directions, and, arrived here about four Weeks pass.

*We have a Vessil just ready to sail for the Coast and that of Elliots will soon follow, wch perhaps, may fall in with you, except the Price of Slaves are high at Barbadoes; and hope you'll keep us advised of your Markets. . . .

*we never made any doubt but that our Balla. wou'd be remitted, with full Interest thereon as the purchasers was to allow it by the conditions of Sale, agreeable to what you wrote us.

And hope this will meet you safe and well Arrived at Kingston, After a Successfull Voyage, on your Arrivel there you will deliver your Cargo of Slaves to Messrs. Peatts and Westmorland, Agreeable to Former Instructions, who will dispose of them to the best Advantages for Bills of Exchange only; at as Short a Sight as they can obtain them; And as this Voyage finishes at Jamaica, on Closing their Sales and paying your bills of Disbursments etc. they are then to remit each party their respective Share of the neat proseedes Viz to send me bills for my half and deliver you the same for your Quarter part, as it will be best for all Concerned to make as short work of it as possible, otherwise it will by no means answer to carry Westmorland, in which he stated that his purchase was to be 96 slaves. These he had bargained to receive by Nov. 10 but since slaves were scarce on the coast he hardly expected to be slaved before the last of November. From Anamabo on Nov. 3 he sent a letter to the same firm by Captain Bardine, telling them that he had forty slaves and still hoped to complete his cargo in November, though trade was very dull. A copy of this letter he sent to Fletcher, adding: "I can assure you the Oldest Man on the Coast never new Such a Scarcity of Slaves as there is at Present, for there is Goodsmen here 6 Months and hass not got fifty Slaves on board, and are agiving 8 and 10 oz. for the blackmen and the Rum men 130 gal. to witemen. Our few Slaves is in good health and I hope will continew so." Clarke Letter-Book, no. 75A.

on this Trade to any Advantage; And in regard to your as well as the people Priveledge Slaves I think it will be the fairest way for the Concerned to Avaredge them with the Majorety of the Cargo; this matter I have mentioned to Messrs. Peatts and Westmorland, And is Commonly what is done out of Liverpool. However shall leave it Intirely to your self to do what seems most agreable, as I want nothing but the Just thing. When the Slaves are sold and Vessel clear, you must pay off the people their wages, and Ship new hands as you want them, Or gitt as many of the old as will stay with you and come the Voyage to England.

After which you will in Course, heave down and clean your Vessel, and put her in Proper order for that purpose. And be as frugal as possible in your Disbursments, And not run us to any Unnecessary Expencc at Kingstown where every thing for Vessels Comes to Dear (which I Experienc'd with the Affrica) but As was so well found in every thing am in hopes little will be wanted new. I have desired Peatts and Westmorland to assist you to get a Freight, for London or Hull and to Dispatch you if possible in about Six weeks, with what they can get, Sugar, Rum, and a little mahogany. Being but a small Vessel I make no doubt they will do it in that time, as I would not have you lay longer even if you should get but $\frac{2}{3}$ full as the Sooner you get to England the better, that if this Voyage Answers another may be Struck out more Considerable (in a larger Vessel). I mentioned in my former Letters, to the house, not to take produce on Account of the Slaves but rather than not help the Vessel with a little Freight, I have now order'd them to Ship for my Account from 10 to 15 punchions of Rum and Suppose you'l have no objection to put 8 or 10 on board on your Account, which with as many of theirs, will be some help to fill her up! Rum has been lower here this year but must answer next year if can be purchaced lower at Jamaica, (Strong proof and good flavor'd). I have desired Peatts and Westmorland to forward the first Set of my bills, by the next Vesel that offers after Recieving them, and not to keep them, till you Sail that no time may be lost here in Recieving, and if you think proper may send the first Sett for your Share, by the Same Oppertunity, to me and shall do the Same with them as my Own to get them Excepted. And the Second Set of yours and mine you may bring along with you and the third Set to be put on bourd some other Vessel before you Sail; you will also write me what Insurence you would have get done for your Account and direct to me at Mr. Hodgsons as Usual. I have paid all the bills you have Drawn on me from Rhode island, and as you Desir'd I get £400 St'g Insured for your Acc'nt with my own, round to Jamaica, the Expencc of premium paid here etc was £35:17, which sum is all you debt. . . .

NEWPORT, November [27], 1772.

Sir, Our Brig'n the Ann,² of which you are at present the Master, being loaded and ready for the Seas, Our orders to you are, That you Embrace the first fair wind and make the best of your way to the Coast of Africa; and as we have no opinion of the windward Coast trade, we think it advisable, That as Soon as you procure the necessary rice that you proceed without delay to Anamaboe road; When please God you arrive there safe Convert your cargo into good Slaves; on the best terms you can; You are not insensible that lying any considerable time on the Coast, is not only attended with a very heavy expense, But also great risk of the Slaves you may have on board. We therefore would recommend to you dispatch, even if you are obliged to give a few gallons more or less on each slave. . . . We here inclose you David Mill Esq. of Cape coast Castle's receipt for twenty seven men and thirteen women Slaves, left in his hands by Capt. Briggs the last voyage on our accounts payable to his or our order, which we have made payable to you; When you have finished the sales of your Cargo, apply to the said Mr. Mill and receive from him the above mentioned slaves, which from his universal character, we are confident he will not only immediately comply but will also deliver you slaves to your satisfaction; To these slaves we desire you'll put some particular mark that may distinguish them from those of the Cargo, so that their sales in the West Indies may be kept by itself, for the Insurance on these is not blended with the Cargo.

You are to be particularly careful, that as soon as you have got your slaves on board, and before you leave the Coast you are to fill up two Sets of bills of lading; The one mentioning the number of Slaves you have on board, bought with your Cargo, which are two-thirds on acct. of Aaron Lopez, and the other third on account of Jacob Rod Rivera; And another set for the forty slaves you receive from Mr. Mill, those are one-half on each our Accts, and remit us by Two different Opp'ts, One of each of these bills of lading, and the third carry with you; for in case of accident (which God forbid) we have no other way of proving our Interest than by a bill of lading.

When thus you have finished your trade on the Coast, you are to proceed directly to the Island of Jamaica when if you arrive in any time between the first of December and the first of July, you are to goe directly to Savanah La Mar, and there deliver your whole quantity of slaves on our Acco'tt to Capt. Benjamin Wright, in whose hands we shall lodge whatever future orders we may have occasion to give you; But if you arrive off of Jamaica in any time between the month of July and the first of December, then you are not to proceed to Savanah La Mar, but to Kingston in that Island, and there apply to Mr. Thomas Dolbeare merchant there, to whom you are to deliver your slaves on our Accts and in whoes hands we shall also lodge, whatever orders we may find necessary further to give you, and if on inquiry you find when you arrive at Kingston, that Capt'n Wright is in any part of the Island, you are desired to send him immediate intelligence of your arrival, But this is not to prevent the delivery of the Slaves to Mr. Dolbeare as aforesaid, and should Cap'n Wright not be at Savanah La Mar when you arrive there, nor in any part of Jamaica, in that case dispatch an express to Mr. Dolbeare at Kingston, and follow what orders you may receive from him. Either Capt. Wright or Mr. Dolbeare will have orders to load our Brig with the produce of the Island if the season of the year will permit it, Therefore as soon as you have delivered your slaves, and your vessel ready, proceed directly back to this port.³ . . .

ANAMABOE RD Mar. 10th, 1773.

Gentlemen: I arrived att Cape Corse Castle on the 12th of February, where on my arrival apply'd to Gov'r Mill and gave him the offer of my Cargo on Various Terms from one hundred and eighty gall'n to Two hundred for men and in proportion for women but would not take itt on any terms his answer was that he could not pay me Slaves in Eighteen Months he owing a great many Slaves and Every Ship to take their turn to be paid according to their Contract. I handed the Stock that I had for Mr. Mill being 27 Sheep 16 Geese 12 Ducks and five turkeys which was all that I had left. I also acquainted Mr. Mill that I had his obligation for forty Slaves Left by Capt'n Briggs in your favor. these Slaves Mr. Mill told me he would Deliver when I was ready to Sail. Here is very poor times for every fort and private house is stocked with Rum that ³ During 1772 the following vessels owned or loaded by Aaron Lopez cleared for Africa: Royal Charlotte, Benjamin Wright, Cleopatra, Briggs, Ann, English, George, Peleg Greene. In 1773, the Charlotte, Shearman, the Africa, Briggs, the Active, Taggart, the Cleopatra, Bourk, were apparently loaded for Africa by Lopez. (Lopez Bills of Lading.) For this item the editor is indebted to Professor B. M. Bigelow of Brown University.

He had already learned that the price of slaves on the coast was 150 iron bars, the equivalent of 200 gallons of rum. Ibid., pp. 17-18.

there is Noe Selling of Rum Nor anything else. I have Not Been five Nights on board since my arrival but Continually Cruising from one fort to another Striveing to Sell my Cargoe, after I had tryed the South of the Gold Coast and finding itt impossible to Sell to advantage, I struck with Mr. Henrick Woortman for four thousand Galln. att Two hundred Gall'n for man and one hundred and Eighty for women payable in Three months. I also sold Three Thousand Galln. more to Various Private Traders att 190 Gn. and 195 for men and in proportion for women. These are the only terms that I could sell any part of the Cargoe and I find that the Market grows worse instead of grown better for this day has been Given 210 Galln. to the Gentlemen where I Dine for men Slaves and three months Credit. Gentlemen, I have but five Slaves on board and God knows when I shall have five more for the Country Trade is so Dull and Slaves Scarce that itt puts Every Man to attend that has the Command of a Vessel here at present. What time to appoint that I should Gett off itt is nott in any power for there is noe man att present comes up to his engagement. But I have hopes of Gett my pay according to Contract as Henrich Woortman, Esq., has the most to pay and the Longest Credit, and he Reconded to be the Best pay and Least in Debt of any Governor on the Gold Coast at present, therefore I am in hopes of Getting off Sometime in June.² sale of her Cargo. 57 were sold the first day averaging £63 and 4 d ½, clear of duty, 14 the third day at £51, 22 the fifth day at £32, the remainder at £8 only. had there been five times as many, and the Negroes good, they would have sold at the price they did the first day. there were a number of old men, but the Boys went off very high. I find there are 14 Privelege Slaves which I think is large, and will take from the Cargo considerably. I shall conform to the terms accepted, tho' the decease of Mr. Winn and the uncertainty of the goodness of the Negroes laid me under some disadvantage. I have acted from principle, Gentlemen in the sale of this Cargo, and I hope it will be satisfactory, my intent has been that it should. I am now at Port Royal dispatching a Vessell, that I am much in haste, but hope in a few days to be at leisure when I shall write you.

KINGSTON JAMAICA, NOV. 14, 1773.

Gentlemen, . . . Gentlemen I buried one man slave since my Last and the Swelling Begin to Rang so Voilent among the Slaves that Nine of them was Sold for a mere trifel and had not the whole Being sold in a few Days I beleive I should Lost one half of the whole and yett when I arrived there was But Two Slaves that had the Least Sign of Swelling. This Disorder first Begun in their feet and worked upward when Gott as far as their Stomach they Dyed in a few hours. There has been Three ships cargoes of Slaves sold since my arrival and none of there Averages exceeded the Brgantine's not five shillings in a slave therefore I doe not think that this markett is as Good as the Merchants here says itt out to be.

Here is Lately arrived some Spanish Gentlemen which I am informed has brought one hundred Thousand Dollars to Buy Slaves

The sale was set for Oct. 13; the terms were credit at four, eight, and twelve months. Ibid., I. 455-456.

³ On Oct. 8 Dolbeare had written: "We have authentic entelligence of a Contract being made between the Kings of Great Britain and Spain whereby it is settled that the Spaniards are to be supplied with Negroes, at Kingston in the Island of Jamaica for Cuba and the Main at £60 per head, to be continued for 5 years, that they are allowed 3 bbl. flour to every Negro, that the duty of 30/ Currency to be taken off and 2/6 only to be paid on importation, when it is to commence and other particulars is not yet transpired. The planters here are much disgusted" (ibid., I. 456). This contract called forth from Bryan Edwards the suggestion that the navigation acts of Great Britain ought to be lightened in favor of Spain. He believed the increase in trade would require twenty more vessels to bring negroes from Africa to the West Indies.

[227] ¹Terry, Newport Hist. Soc., Bulletin, no 62, pp. 25-26. Captain English arrived at Jamaica on Oct. 7, after a passage of eighty-five days, during which he had buried five negroes from the cargo of the Ann and one from that of the Cleopatra. The remaining eighty-nine were in good health at the time of his arrival. Ibid., p. 24.

and here is att present but one Vessell with Slaves and Yett they will not Give as Good a price as the planters Gives, For this Day I have bein informed by a Gentleman that belongs to the house that this Vessell is addressed to that they offered But a hund'd and fifty Dollars and have Refuse Thirty out of a hundred and thirty. Therefore any further particulars Relative to this Spanish Contract and the Average of the Brigantine Slaves I refer to Mr. Dolbeares Letters. Here is a King packett which will Sail for falmouth the 22d Inst. on board of which If Mr. Dolbeare fulfill's his agreement I will be able to Dispatch one Sett of Bills for the Cargoe on your acc'ts. Should Mr. Dolbeare fall short in his promise and the Packett should sail Before the Bill is Drawn the next opportunity will Be in the Ship Nancy Capt. Brown for London which is to Sail by the Last of this month.

As for the Cash to load the Brigintine, Mr. Dolbeare has told me he had Riddy, this Day we have Received News that Mollases in the Mole² has fell from 26 Sous to 21 which if Mr. Dolbeare Dispatches me to the time agreed upon I may have a chance to Load the Brigintine on Reasonable terms.

KINGSTON, JAMAICA, November 20, 1773.

Gentlemen, Since my last, I have yours covering a Letter to Captain Einglish, who I purpose dispatching for Mole Cape Nicola with the £800 about the 13th of next Month, as I told him when the Cargo was deliver'd me. I find the £800 on Cargo, with the nearly £800 privelidge, the Captains Coast Commissions, and the Duty of 30/ per head there will be £1900 at least, to pay Captain Einglish in Money. I think there are generous Priveliges allowed out of your port. The gross Sale of the 102 Negroes per the Ann, is £5187 this Currency; out of which the 14 Privelige are to be taken. Negroes continue in demand, the Spaniards are now here on purchase, one of them bro't 100,000 Dollars, but they appear to expect them at low rates, for they as yett, have offered but £38 Sterling, to have the first choice, which will never do, for if I recollect right, the Ann's Cargo averaged the first day, with the Duty £45.15/ Sterling. It appears by what I have been able to collect, that England and Spain's Monarchs have adjusted and concluded the Contract for a number of years; what number we have not yet understood. they are to send their ships to what of the English West Indies they may chuse, and not to be limited to this Island as was reported, that they can give from 270 to 290 Dollars per head, but about £25

Currency per head. They will be obliged to pay their Priests for Baptising. They purchase them to sell per feet and inches, so many feet and inches making a piece, as they term it; how many, I have not yet learnt. they have 3 Barrells flour to every Negroe which will be a great cover to large quantitys of Contraband Goods. the Factory at Port Rico is to be thrown up. the Spanish King has lent the Company £60 m.² Dollars on certain conditions, this is all I have yet been able to gather. as new matter arises I shall be informing you. prime Negroe Men £64 and Duty, Women £62 and duty.

KINGSTON, JAMAICA, 7 December, 1773.

Gentlemen, Here with you have the Account Sales of Brigantine Ann's Cargoe with the 29 of the Ship Cleopatra's Disbursements, etc. as I could not determine the proportion of Disbursements due from the Ship Cleopatra I have carried the whole to the Debit of the Brig Ann; leaving the Proportion to be settled by you. when I wrote you via Hispañola, my meaning of the Negroes averaging £63 the first Sale, clear of Duty, was, clear of the Sale Duty of 20/ the Import Duty of 10/ per head youll find debitted in the Account of Sales. the inclosed is Captain Eingsh's Receipt for the £800, and the Bills of Exchange for £1983.5.11 Sterling or £2776.12.4 Currency.² Your directions to me were to send Spanish Doubleloons of 13½ dwts and Johannes to the Mole, but, a few days since, receiving a letter from Mr. John Dupuy of Mole Cape Nichola that no Money but Johannes and Dollars would answer, there being Difficulty in passing Doubleloons, I concluded on sending Dollars, as 2½ Currency was to be gained, Dollars passing here at 6/8 and there at 11 Bitts or 6/10, which noncomplyence I hope youll not construe to an inattention to your Interest, but a disposition towards it.

The restriction under which you laid me with respect to the Security and which I cant but think any more than a prudent Act, obliged me to gett Messrs. Peatts and Westmoreland of the place to draw the Bills giving them half the advantage, which they did on

NEWPORT 10th February, 1774.

Sir. . . . We have had no accounts from Affrica Since the 9 July then as Usual Complaints of bad times. There is Sailed Since I Arrived from the Coast two Schooners from Salem belonging to Capt. Darby And a brig Belonging to Jo' and Wm. Wanton and a Sloop belonging to John Collins from this place.² . . .

N B I saw a Guare[n]tee to Mr. Lopez wherein Gabriel H Ludlow, Nicholass Hoffman, and Charles Shaw of New York Guarentee The house of Alexr: Gillon and Co. of Charles Town South Carolina³ To him or his friends as far as one Thousand Slaves the Bill to be Pd. at 3, 6 and 9 ms. Slaves Averidging now there about £45.

Febry 24th 1774.

I now Add that Since I wrote the foregoing Capt: Sebury arriv'd from the Coast, Left Anamaboe the 16th October and says that they where giving from 210 to 220 Gallons at that time which I assure you is very Discouraging. . . .

LONDON 22nd February, 1774.

Sir, If you Remember we had Some Conversation Before you left London Relative to a Dry Good Cargo for Guinea, and if your Stay on the Coast Should be so long as the Rum Men Now meet with, you will have Sufficient time to make your Self Acquaintd with that Trade and if you Should find you Could Engage with any of the Goveners or Factors to take from you on your Return there in about Nine Months after your Departure £2500 or £3000 Sterling worth of Dry goods properly assorted According To Memorandum and Pattern of the Sorts of Cloath Wanted, etc. You are well Assur'd that I could on your Arrival get you Such a Cargo put up in a Month or Six Weeks Time and most of the Guinea Goods on 12 Months Credit, which I think will be making the most of Time Provided you Can be Well Assur'd of Getting of the Cargo Without much Delay.

[234] ¹ Clarke Letter-Book, no. 75 A. On Jan. 13, 1774, Clarke urged Peatt and Westmorland to hasten the despatch of the Fletcher under Captain Stockford, as he expected her to sail for Africa three weeks after her arrival in Newport. He added a caution concerning the money to be given the captain since doubloons and pistoles were difficult to pass in Rhode Island.

² Evan and Francis Malbone, of Newport, had asked Clarke to procure for them in Boston 14 bolts Russia duck and 8 or 10 pieces of "Ravens" duck for sails for a vessel which they were outfitting for Guinea. Nov. 5, 1773, Clarke Letter-Book, no. 75 A.

[235] ¹ Clarke Letter-Book, no. 75 A.

But this must Depent upon Circumstances and According as you may find Trade on the Coast, as Nothing Can be Determined on till your Arrival there and Shall leave it to your Self to make Such Engagements as Shall Seem most for our Mutual Advantage. But if the Rum Trade is like to Continue any thing Tollerable and you Can Engage another Cargo at your Return to the Coast, (as Mentiond in my former Letter), you must in Such case Keep on the old Track with Molasses from Jamaica or the Moles and Return to Rhode Island. Only as we have now Peaceable times, and Don't know how long they may Continue, I Shall be glad to make the most of the Time present As war will Frustrate all our Guinea Schemes. Upon Setling for the Thames and her Disbursments you will Send me Duplicates of the Several Accounts With Reciepts which may be put up In a parcel and Sent by Shand or Rogers to be Deliver'd by themselves, and keep Copyes of the same by you at Newport for your own Satisfaction, you will also give me timely advice when you Draw the Bills, and Mention in the Body of the Bills for what Account, and where you have a large Sum to Pay as may be the Cause at Messrs. Malbones you will Divide the Sum into Two or three lesser Bills not of the Same Date, to prevent Mistakes, which will be more Convenient for me here.

As to the Fletchers Disbursments, etc. you'll Observe the Directions given in the Joint Letter, the whole to be Divided into Fourths and a Bill on each owner for their Share to save Trouble and any further Account here. I have Requested the favour of Messrs. Malbones of a Creditt of £200 or £300 Sterling in part of the Rum you may take from them provided it is not Inconvenient, as I can with more ease pay it at the latter end of the year or Send them out Hemp in the fall.

Our Liverpool Tender Andromack not yet Arrived in the West Indias to Bring Round any Bills to Attest me from that Quarter will make things Rather heavy—so many Payments Coming about the Same time. This favour I have Some Right to Ask of Messrs. Malbones but if Should not Suit them I have no Doubt of Getting through it one way or an other, and Do not let them hinder you in the least in pursuing the Instructions Given. I am now making preparations for you by Lodging Money with my Friend P Hodgson and A Peatts to answer your Bills.

I have made no Insurance On the Fletcher from Jamacai to the Mole, and Rhode Island if you Chuse to get any thing done on her at Newport Can act in that Respect as you Please for your Share as you will have much earlyer Advices from Capt. Stockford and when to expect Him than I can, which as Soon as you hear from him give me a Line.²

NEWPORT 22 April 1774.

Dear Sir, . . . Our Schooner Nancy has on Board for Cargo 5665 Gallons Rum, 6 Barrels Flour, 12 Barrels Pitch, 6 Barrels Tarr, Six Boxes Soap, Provisions and 2500 feet Boards. She and her Cargo and out fitt will stand in about 750 £ Sterling the nearest Calculations. . . .

Now for the Brigg Thames I have her Grav'd and Shall begin to load to Morrow or Monday having 150 Hhds Rum ready to take on Board, and hope to Sail in all May. Molasses is and has been very Scarce all this Spring But what I have purchas'd has been at 35 / per Gallon and I See no likelyhood of getting it Cheaper. . . . And I have purchased of Saml Johnson one hundred Hogshead of Rum. . . .

N.B. If you insure I Shall be obliged to you to Insure about 125 on Schooner Nancy on my account to the Coast and while there before Sold and 300 on Snow Fletcher enough to make you whole in case of Accident

I obsarve what You Say about the price of Molasses which I hope you have been able to purchase on Easier Tirmes and that You have finish'd all your Business at Rhode Island to Your mind and Sail'd from thence Long before this Letter reaches there, as well as the Snow Fletcher, Captn: Stockford who I hope came in time with his Molasses.

As I wrote you fully in my late Letters concarning the Thames and Fletcher have nothing new to add. I observe the advance of Slaves on the Coast per Latest Accounts from 210 to 230 Galls, which to be Sure is high, all I can Say is You can afford to give as much as an

Am glad to find you have Declined thoughts of any further alterations in the Thames at preasant, as we have been at a deal of Expence already without any Profit, I hope we shall be more able after this Voyage, to do anything to her may be thought Necessary.² . . .

238. AN ACT FOR PROHIBITING THE IMPORTATION OF NEGROES,

An Act prohibiting the importation of Negroes into this Colony.

Whereas, the inhabitants of America are generally engaged in the preservation of their own rights and liberties, among which, that of personal freedom must be considered as the greatest; as those who are desirous of enjoying all the advantages of liberty themselves, should be willing to extend personal liberty to others;

Therefore, be it enacted by this General Assembly, and by the authority thereof it is enacted, that for the future, no negro or mulatto slave shall be brought into this colony; and in case any slave shall hereafter be brought in, he or she shall be, and are hereby, rendered immediately free, so far as respects personal freedom, and the enjoyment of private property, in the same manner as the native Indians.

Provided, nevertheless, that this law shall not extend to servants of persons travelling through this colony, who are not inhabitants thereof, and who carry them out with them, when they leave the same.

Provided, also, that nothing in this act shall extend, or be deemed to extend, to any negro or mulatto slave, belonging to any inhabitant of either of the British colonies, islands or plantations, who shall come into this colony, with an intention to settle or reside, for [238] ¹ "Proceedings of the General Assembly," R. I. Col. Recs., VII. 251-253. On May 17, at a town meeting in Providence, the following resolution was agreed upon: "we are of opinion that an universal stoppage of all trade with Great Britain, Ireland, Africa, and the West Indies, until such time as the port of Boston shall be reinstated in its former privileges, etc., will be the best expedient in the case; and that a proper time should be generally agreed on for the same universally to take place.

"Whereas the inhabitants of America are engaged in the preservation of their rights and liberties; and as personal liberty is an essential part of the natural rights of mankind, the Deputies of the town are directed to use their endeavours to obtain an act of the General Assembly, prohibiting the importation of negroe slaves in this Colony; and that all negroes born in the Colony should be free at attaining to a certain age." a number of years, therein; but such negro or mulatto, so brought into this colony, by such person inclining to settle or reside therein, shall be, and remain, in the same situation, and subject in like manner to their master or mistress, as they were in the colony or plantation from whence they removed.

Provided, nevertheless, that if any person, so coming into this colony, to settle or reside, as aforesaid, shall afterwards remove out of the same, such person shall be obliged to carry all such negro or mulatto slaves, as also all such as shall be born from them, out of the colony with them.

Provided, also, that nothing in this act shall extend, or be deemed to extend, to any negro or mulatto slave brought from the coast of Africa, into the West Indies, on board any vessel belonging to this colony, and which negro or mulatto slave could not be disposed of in the West Indies, but shall be brought into this colony.

Provided, that the owner of such negro or mulatto slave give bond to the general treasurer of the said colony, within ten days after such arrival in the sum of £100, lawful money, for each and every such negro or mulatto slave so brought in, that such negro or mulatto slave shall be exported out of the colony, within one year from the date of such bond; if such negro or mulatto be alive, and in a condition to be removed.

Provided, also, that nothing in this act shall extend, or be deemed to extend, to any negro or mulatto slave that may be on board any vessel belonging to this colony, now at sea, in her present voyage.

And to prevent any slave or slaves from being clandestinely brought into this colony, in order that they may be free, and liable to become chargeable.

Be it further enacted, by the authority aforesaid, that all persons, so offending, shall be liable to, and pay, a fine of £100, lawful money, for each and every one so brought in, to and for the use of the colony, to be recovered in the same manner that other fines and forfeitures usually are, by the laws of this government.

And also, all persons, who shall be convicted of receiving, harboring, or concealing, any such negro or mulatto slave, within this colony, he or they, so offending, shall be liable to the like penalty, to be recovered and applied in the same manner; and such negro or mulatto shall be sent out of the colony, as other poor persons are, by law.²

[LONDON] 20 July, 1774.

Sir, . . . The Deborah proved a very unsaleable Vessel for this place, as her dimensions were very unsuitable for any European Trade, the smallness of her Hold in particular was a heavy objection; We wrote down to Liverpool agreeable to your directions and two of the Merchants there who are concerned in the African Trade have since her arrival been to view her with thoughts of purchasing her, but they both declined taking her, assuring us that though she was constructed in the manner usual for the Trade from Rhode Island to Africa, she would by no means suit for the Trade from Liverpool.² . . .

We are glad to see Captain Wright had made you a satisfactory Sale of the Cleopatra's Cargo of Slaves: We hope he did the like with that of the Africa, who we find was arrived there and her Cargo sold; There can be no doubt he must have done well with that Cargo as you had given him a limitation of price. . . .

LONDON 30th July 1774

Dear Sir, . . . From the non Import and Export Agreement Which is like to take place in general through North America which you wass advised of before you left newport it will be a Circumstance at preasant in Your favour, in that case the rum Trade will be Knock'd up and no guinamen fitted out from Boston or Rhode island etc. till the Boston Port Bill is Repealed which may not be this Some time as his Maj'y and his Ministers seem Obstant in the Affair. However do not [let] those Uncertain matter cause you to over Stand your market but Accept of the first good offer for the Cargo And gitt Dispatch'd as Soon as you can

I hope on your Arival at Annamaboe you found the Nancy and Fletcher safe and well, and the former had disposed of her cargo as she came along down the Coast, And the latter Capt: Stockford in a fair way of geting off his Cargo, And as its most likely he will be able to leave the Coast first, And in Order to bring Bills round to me here Sooner, I would have you in Such case Send 20 or 30 Slaves on Freight by the Fletcher of the Thames and Nancy Cargo Purchasd as the former will have plenty of room for more Slaves than her Cargo will Purchass, and will be a help to the Vessell, and a means of Dispatching her Sooner, as a month or two Saved in time is a considerable object at present, as should be glad the Fletcher may gitt to Jamaica in the Month of Jany and your Self these Soon after as you can, the Slaves on Frigate to be Sold by Messrs. Peatts and Westmorland upon a Average with the rest of the Cargo. In regard to the Place of Sale of your Thames's Cargo Slaves I mentiond in my former Montegerbay² and the two houses that would be Guaranteed to me are Equally good. Mr. Clarke am told is clever and has Sold a number of Slaves this Year. However am likewise Informed that Mr. Montague is no wayes short of him and if you Should go to that Port and he will take you up which I rather wish may be case as Hibberts and Co. Bills are as good as the Bank and will tell well here, which is very Material in our Large Concern, but in case you should have a fine Cargo of Likely Coramantees,³ as last Voyage, I don't know if Kingston would not be the best Market. Am told Mr. Hibberts has Sold all his prime Cargoes of Bonny and Gould Cost Cargos in Town, and the bite and Calabar Ships he has sent to Montegua bay. However I shall leave this Matter to you to Act as shall seem best, if you Should go to Kingston you will give the preference to Mr. Hibberts House to Sell your Cargo, with whome you will make the best Shortest termes you can, without Mr. Ford will give you Shorter sighted bill's, in which Case he is to have the Preference but not otherwaiss, but if Your Cargo should prove but Indiferent you must then take a Country Sail and go to Montegubay as before directed. And as the Terms are left to Your Self, you will no doubt Enter into in writing as to the len[g]th of your bills and time of Dispatch etc. before you put the Slaves in their hands. I shall write Mr. Hibberts on the Occasion Acquainting them of your being a part Owner and have the liberty to make the Termes with whom you please and that Offers best which may be of Service.

You will find a letter for you at each of Mr. Hibbert's Houses with any further Instructions that may Occur for Your further Government.⁴ . . .

can at 140 to 160 Gold, when you arrive at Annamabo, If the price of Slaves given to the Factories exceeds 140 to 160 Gold, It is our advice you endeavour to make what Trade you can with the blacks for a month or six Weeks, untill you find what price the Castles will finally lower their Slaves too. If you find the black Trade brisk so that you may git of in three or four months, we advise that you finish your Trade with them, but shou'd it be Slack and no prospect of giting of in a reasonable time, then we recomend your selling what Rum you may have on hand to the Castles on the best Terms in your Power. in this you must act as circumstances and things appear, not being too much in haste, as no Ruin can come on your back. When your Trade is finished, proceed to Barbados, call on Messrs. Went and Son with whom you will find our further orders lodged, also at M'rs Crawfords. Enquire at both those Houses for letters from Thredfal and Anderson of the Granados,² but if you find no letters from either of us, We then wou'd have you sell your Slaves to Went and Son at thirty Six pounds round good and bad or for as much more as you can git provided they will give their own bill on London at Eight months Sight for the neet proceeds of your Cargo or pay you half in money and bills for the other half. If they will not comply with this price, then proceed to the Granados and aply to Tredfal and Anderson. Sir, I wrote you several Letters to the Coast Some of which may have come to hand, my last Was the principal dated the 3th Inst: much to same purpose as this which was forwarded by Capt Darling per a Vessel his owners ware sending to Annamaboe with Govrs Stores, He being lately arrived from Montego Bay, whare he offer'd his Gold coast Cargo To Mr. Clarke to sell for him. But he refused taking him up on which Darling was obliged to Dispose of them him self, and give Credit till Next crop, And is shortly to return to

The Champlin Invoice Book in the Shepley Library contains the invoice for this voyage.

[245] ¹Clarke Letter-Book, no. 76. This letter with slight alterations is repeated in the Letter-Book under the same date. The letters between Clarke and Fletcher which follow illustrate clearly the difficulties which the approach of war and the actual outbreak of hostilities imposed upon merchants attempting to pursue their usual trade. The frequency of Fletcher's letters and the minuteness of his instructions indicate great anxiety on his part, an anxiety which was justified, since, in spite of his care, Captain Clarke did not receive his instructions until after the cargo had been disposed of. It is noticeable that the captain has carefully inscribed upon the owner's letters the date of receipt, that there might be no suspicion that he had failed to carry out orders.

Jamaica To collect his money, which may be a work of Time and disagreeable Circumstances to the Owners. Since I came to Town I wrote to Mr. Dalpratt of Bristol for a Guarantie for your Cargo, which he refused as he says he has Mr: Fords orders not to do it for any more at present by which youle see What you have to Depend on. your Chief reliance Must now be upon Mr. Hibberts house And I have had some talk with Mr. Purrier, one of the Houses hear, to whome is of opponion that as yours will be a Gold Coast Cargo that there will be no Doubt but that Mr. Hibbert will take you up at Kingston which he thinks the most likely place to go to, whare if such Slaves are not in demand which is Seldome The case you have several ports at leward under Your command to, you are therefore on receipt of this letter to make the best of your way for Kingston in Jamaica whare you are to apply to Mr. Thomas Hibberts, Senr: and Junior for the Sale Of your Cargo, either at Kingston or Lewarde as they shall think best. And as to the Terms, shall Leave that to you to make the best with them you can. Mr. Purrier says the last Bills That came upon them for a Guinee Cargo wass at 12 15 and 18 Months sight which is a grate lenth in Deed. However you must be governd by whatever is customary at the time of your arrival with them. And this we are Certain of whatever that House Engages to do will be safe, which is meterial Affair these times, thairfore do not stand out upon triffels or a little more time on Bills. These Difficultys about taking up Guineamen arises From the Greate quantity of Negros sold at Jamaica this last year and that in Order to keep up the price The marchants now are Obliged to give a Long Credit to Planters.

When you have fixt'd with the house for Sales of your Slaves it then requires no Consideration What Voyge you are to take Next. As the New York Packet lately arrived has brought us a Confirmation of the Resolves of the Congress at Philadelphia which is a non importation is to Takeplace immediately,² which not only Excludes all manner of Good from England and Ireland But molasses or Surrups from any of the West Indee Island. This intirely frustrate any Further rum Cargoes from America at present Except that article would do to be carried directly from Jamaica to the Coast but that you are Better able to Judge of. But in that case 240 Galls rum at $2/4 d.$ Jamaica Currancy per Galln With punchins would stand in about 22 Sterling Which is more than given in Goods for a Slave, the Above news you must of heard before you left the Coast.

You are tharefore to take in on Account of your Cárگو abt 50 Hhds of Sugars and 30 or 40 punch. rum And as much Frieght to fill your Vessell with as you Can git which the house that sells your Slaves is to Assist you with and to come home to London as soon as possible and be purticular that the sugars you take for our Acct: is good Colourd and well Cured and rum strong proof and well flavourd And let every 10 punchn. be under Diff't Marks for Convaniances of Sales hear Say B T: F F P C etc.

Upon your arrival hear if you should have any Encouragement for a Good Cargo we Can soon fit you out with one for the Coast as most Part of the Guinia goods heare are at 12 months Credit and some longer. And the produce which You may Bring on sure account will be sold to raise Cash for the outfitts, I find the Gold Coast goods men have dun very wel Lately and I make no doubt with assistance of a good Mate to be got hear that has bin Used to the trade You will be Able to make out a Small Cargo as Well as Others. As matters now stand you see there is no other way left, if you mean to make another Voyage to Africa in the Thames, which I much wish you to do rather than Dispose of the Vessell which must be the Case on her arrival hear if you do not make another trip in her.

You will take Care to forward the 1 and two setts of Bills of Exchange for Neat proceeds of you Cargo By diff't Vessells whome you leaves the Island before you wch inclose to me at Peter Hodgson As usuall that the same may be comeing round.

If Mr. Hibberts house should not agree to take you up to which I hope will not be the Case you are Next to call upon Mr. Ewd Ford whome may have alterd his mind and make him an Offer to sell your Cargo which if he refuses then you are to Put your Slaves in the hands of Peatts and Westmorland to do the Best they can for. Jos: Peatt is come home Sickly and John Peatt of Hull is going out immedeatly again to Jamaica and I have no doubt he would sell a Cargo at as high a price as any Body and take as much pains But wants a good bank hear. He indeed has apply'd for Sale of the Thames' Cargo which I told him I Could not promise that as I had Engaged the preference to a house Guaranteed to me hear And I immagaind they would have enough to with the Fletcher's Cargo to get her Dispatched And make good remitances hear in due time.

Come home as both you And my self had straind a point to Carry it through. However if you should be Obleg'd To get Mr. Peatt's house to do this Business I should prefer Selling at Leward either Savanlimeer or Lewsea,² where you have the greatest chance Of a higher price for the Slaves as well as produce Cheaper Then in Kingstown. And they must be very Cautious Whose Bills they take to remitt me on that account as such numbers of Bills go Back protested dayly And youle Observe the same both in regard to Quantity and Quality of produce as if Hibberts house had done The Business but youle further Observe with Peatts house onely that the planters long sightd Bills taken in payment are to bear Intrust at 60 or 90 days after sight which must be Specifide in the Bill. I mentison this as you may not be Acquainted with the Custom. Whare no Bond is Given for the negros its But right the owners should have that benifit for all risques, But you are not to require this of Mr. Hibberts house as all thair Bills are Guaranteed and no fear of thair returning. And I would have Peatts people to remit Bills for the whole Ballance of Net proceeds, if possible to make an end of the Voyage, Even if you take a Little more Sugars—not rum—And thair Own Bills on Arthur Peatt of London On different periods of being due at as short time as you Can get and as little to Exceed 12 month With them as possible. And I hope they will exert Them selves on the Occasion if they Expect anoth[er] Guinea man from us. When I mentisond in regard to the Intrust on the Long Bills you are to get Allown if you can Haveing wrote you so Fully as above you cannot be at a Loss how to act both as to Selling your Slaves and future Voyage and Cannot say more on the Occasion but Leave the rest to your own prudent Management for our mutual Benefit.³ . . .

LONDON 24th Decem: 1774.

Dear Sir, Inclosed you have a Long letter in which I have been as full as I can in regard to Jamaica. And in Order to give you as many Chances as possible of a market for your Slaves—if they should Bear any price at Barbados, which is sildum the Case, I have taken a Guarantee from Allen Master[Marlin?] and Co: for thair friends House Jones and Ewing of Barba's: As well as for Thompson and Hunter at St. Kitts. And if Jones and Ewing will Engage to sell your Cargo and Average 40£ 10 s. Sterling round and give Bills at 4, 8 and 12 months, longer time you Have liberty to sell thair if you approve of it but Not otherwise. I have likewise taken another guarantee from Wm. Snell and Co. for thair friends Houses, viz. Robt. Cunningham and Jos. Tatham of St. Vincents and Thulfall and Anderson at Granado. Therefore if you should not succeed at Barbados it is But calling at those Island and not much out of your way to Jamaica.

[247] ¹ Clarke Letter-Book, no. 76. This was probably in the nature of a postscript to the letters of Dec. 22, and sent with them.

And if either those houses will take you up and engage To average your Cargo 41£ Ster'g round, Bills 9, 12, 15 and 18 Months which lynth I understand they have got thare, But what ever is Custumery on your arrival thare, You have Liberty to sell thare on those terms, But not otherwise. And take the same quantity of Sugars on Account of the Cargo thare as limited at Jamaica But windward Island rum on Our account, and the house that sells your Slaves to Assist you with Some Freight to London. But if you should not succeed at Either of those Islands and Could with conveniance fetch St Kitts Without loosing much time you may try thare and Make the same Offer to Thompson and Hunter to take 41 Ster'g Avarage. But if you do not Meat with success thare, then you are to make the Best of your way down to Jamaica as before Orderd. I think if your negros are helthy And a tolarable likely Cargo thare will not be the least doubt of thare Avarag 42£ Ster'g at Jamaica Whare small slaves and even Mangie Ones sells better than in any other Island. The only advantage of selling at Windward is saving som time on the Bills as well As ships provisions and portage Bill etc., By being home With me sooner in London. But all this I leave To your owne Consideratison discretison and we must Not make too large allowances for that.

When you come to any of thre[these] Island you must Lay off and on, and send your mate on shore to those Gentlemen mentisond who will come on board and give thair answer. But do not by any means go Out of the Ship your Self. In case of selling at Barbados your not to take any Shugars on oure own Account of the Cargo, as at those Other Islands But to make the best of your way home to me with the Bills, Incloseing the Other Letter by two difft Ships That Sails first, And the Bills at Short sight Must answer the End of produce, when you come Heare if we should fit out again immediately But if the house can help you with a little freight will be better than Comeing in Ballace which you are not to waite for.²

I have duly Considerd the diffecence betwixt Selling at Windward Islands and Jamaica which you can Judge of your self. I think the average I have fixd on at those Islands is near the matter and would not have you Abate, Except at Barbados the Odds 10/ per head and that in Consideratison the Bills are given at 4, 8 and 12 Months or Shorter Sight if you Can, as 6 months Intrist on each Bill is Equal to 20/ per head on each Neagro. And 41£ Sterg at Granada and Co is not Equal to 42£ Sterg at Jamaica as the Bills are Now much the same lenth at time—only as I have said a Little time saved in your being Earlyer with Me. And in case of a Bargin you can come with in 10/ per head of the 41£ sterg at those Islands and you shall think well of it I shall not tye you Down but leave that to your self—for dispatch Sake but I would not have you abate Otherwise.

² On Feb. 20, 1775, the Champlins wrote to Messrs. Samuel and James King Went, successors to Stevenson and Went, enclosing directions to Captain Champlin meant to supersede those of Nov. 21, 1774 (ante, no. 243). If he found letters with the Wents from Threlfal and Anderson assuring him of £40 he was to go at once to Grenada. If not, he was to offer the cargo to Messrs. Went for £38, half cash, half bills on London, at 8 months' sight, or if necessary, all bills. If the Wents refused these terms he was to proceed to the Grenadas and there make the best possible bargain with Threlfal and Anderson. If they would not agree to an average price near £37 and his slaves were "in heath," he might next try Thomas and Eliphalet Fitch of Kingston, Jamaica, from whom he was to accept bills on Nathaniel Marston and his son Thomas, New York merchants, exchange dollar for dollar. If possible the vessel was to be sold; if not, and no desirable freight could be obtained, he was to return in ballast. If however he should find letters at Barbados from Threlfal and Anderson, telling him not to come to the Grenadas, he might then accept £36 at 8 months' sight from Messrs. Went. If they refused to give that he might then try Fitch at Kingston, then Murray and Wright at Savanna la Mar. On Mar. 8, under a covering letter to Messrs. Went, a third set with our Limits to Windward, if he cannot obtain them, to proceed to your address, upon the terms you propose to sell our Cargo of Slaves at, by which Method the Sales must be greatly advanced in our fav. If Bills could be sent us at 12 Mo. Sight for the Nt. amt. it would be more agreeable, provided they would be accepted in London when demanded; but if not to be complied with without injuring the Sale greatly We must then be content with having the bills remitted to us at the periods you fix, which we conclude will be in Bills of 30 or 40 days Sight, otherwise sell here at a Disct. by our original Orders Capt Champlin was to call upon Messrs. Fitches at Kingstown. We are now countermanding them, to proceed direct to you, If possible sell our Sloop for us, or get a Freight to NYork or Philadelphia. We flatter ourselves you will render us a sale equal to Mr. Lopez' Cargo. not a single Guineaman has left the Continent since 1st Decr. In Confidence you will promote our interest in this Sale

Dear Sir: By this I acquaint you of Safe arival At the above place, after a passage of 68 Day's and am Sorry to acquaint you I am but in a very poor State of Helth such a one as I am afraid will put me a[t] one Side for a Long time if not for ever. I arrived hear four Day's ago and to my great Disapointment found no Letters from you as you wrote me you would Leave for me At the Hous of Mounteger and Barnard, but agreeable To your Order in yours of the 30 July 1774 which reced Under Cover to Mr. Mill at Cape Coast 2 Day's before I left it, I Made applicatison to those gentlemen And they wound not at any rate or terms take me up. I then Next made applicatison to Mr. Clarke and [he] refused Likewise and said it was out of his power to take Hur if he Could pay in Bills at 3 years, And likewise had received no advise about such a Vessel. I then of instructions was sent to the Adventure. If on Captain Champlin's arrival at Barbados he found no letter from Messrs. Threlfal and Anderson, he was to offer his cargo to the Wents, accepting £35 if necessary. If they would not assure that price he was then to try the Grenadas, where he was to receive £36 or sail for Savannah la Mar, where he was to offer his cargo to Murray and Wright. On Mar. 21 the Newport firm wrote to Captain Champlin that they had just learned that 1600 slaves had been sold in the Grenadas in December and January and that 2000 had gone to Leeward. Because of this news the captain was directed to accept £34 from the Wents rather than quit Barbados (Champlin Letter-Book, no. 135). The Letter-Book also contains a letter dated Mar. 23, 1774, which probably belongs to 1775. At the time of writing the house had received news that Joseph and Eliphalet Fitch had sold De Wolf's cargo at a price averaging £42. 10 (post, no. 258), and Captain Champlin was directed to disregard previous orders and, if he could not obtain £35 from Went and Son or £37 from Threlfal and Anderson, to proceed at once to Kingston and place his cargo in the hands of the Fitches.

[252] ¹ Clarke Letter-Book, no. 76. It is to be remembered that when Captain Clarke wrote the following letter he had received none of Fletcher's numerous directions.

Offerd my Slaves to Mr. Jackson and Co a house hear which would not take her nither after to Mr. Moger but thair is not one in this place would Or could take me up. Not even Bills at that Monstrous price of 12, 18 and 20 Mont. From the foregoing I would not have you think I have Brought off a bad Cargo of Neagrees For I assure you not, for it is alowed by Mr. Clarke Who is thought to be a good Judge of Slaves and Sells as many As any hous in the Island, Sayes they are five pound Better than any Gould Coast Cargo that ever he saw. And had it not bin for my freight Slaves I Should have gone to Kingston from a paragraft of your's Of the 30 July, at before menchond for as Mr. Clarke And the Other Gentlemen that has Seen them Say, they never Saw so many Cromitins [Cormantines] as now on Board Her, And I am sure I never Brought of so many nor in so good Order. I come now to tell you what I have Done with them. I have this Day agreed to put them into the Hand of Malcum and Nevinson Marchts at St. Lewsea, Malcum you know was at Rhode Island with you, Upon such tirmes as wass given by several Vessels now in port and tirable, they are Viz 12, 18 and 20 month, Intrust on the 2 Last Bills after 12 mounths, which Will Bring my ninepence to nothing and will not releave you. However my state of helth is such And the times so bad from the Large quantity of Negros being Brought hear that this is the only And all the Chance I have to make any Tolarable Dispatch or in fact git rid of them at all, And they are very Expencive and provisions scarce and Dear. tomorrow I shall [go] with the Brig [to?] Lewsea and our Sails will be Appointed that Day weak and am to be Dispatched in 6 Days after the Sailes is Compleated. whare to go and What to do After, I am sure I Cannot tell, as it is Impossible to git a fright hear or at Lewsea or I believe in any Part of the Island for Mr. Malcom and likewise Clark and Barnard all says that not to flatter me with Hopes for it is not to be done. Nither is thair Money to be got Hardly to pay Disbustments it is as bad hear as was at Barbados on that Account.

I Obsarve in yours of 30 July you take notis the Fletcher is more Expencive in Cargo and Outfitts than before. I beleave when you Deduct the Loss on Her Voige for Molasses you will find her very little More, her provisions was Cheaper and not one farthing was laid out on her but what was Necessary and the Schooner likewise. I had her to Sheath which is Expenceive. I am Confident I took every prodent method that I was Capable of but the Expences would and did Arise, as you Obsarved that Expences would arise At Hull as well as London and now I may say, at Rhode Island as well thair But that you have Experinct'd before. All I can say I am Clear as to myself of laying one farthing that I Could avoid in fiting out any of the Vessels.

I have not the happiness of knowing how you find the Thames Account and disbustments but I hope Satisfactory not with Standing they are so much higher than Expected When we Left London. I am hartily sorry if it has put you to any Inconvence that will prove Disagreeable to you, but we was Imbarcht and Could not go back, Thairfore I pushed on with all my power for to Compleat it. not-with Standing Every thing that has Before past I am now the Mist [Least ?] pleast with what I have don this Day than with any Ac'tt of past Conduct, throughout my hole Trancactisons since I left you for it is Damnable to have Suit Bills. I have heard nothing about the Fletcher but hope you have the Bills are [ere] this for our part, and likewise for the 15 Slaves sent in her on the Thames Acct. I Brought Off the Coast 100 Slave Freight for Mr. Bell at £5 Sterling per head and have Deliverd them all in good Order, have Lost on our Voyage 7 Slaves Otherways and Excepting one or two more have a Cargo of picturs, And as Mr. Clarke Observes Cannot help making grate Avarage. I was taken sick about a month Before I left the Coast down to leward Collecting my slaves and have never got the better of it yet and Wheather ever I shall or no I Cannot tell.

How about Comeing home to you in the Brig I do not know What to say but if I gro better I will but shall [be] intirely Directed by My helth and the Advise of the Docters for at present I can hardly keep an hour of the Bed At a time. And have been much Oblig'd to Capt. Anderson in a Ship belonging to Mr. Morstons House whome is bin about for me and likewise Mr. Clarke whom Has kindly Assisted me in makeing the Contract. So bad as it is it wass very hard to make, Esspechly in my bad State of helth, for the planters are so Much in Debt from the grate quanty of Neagros that has bin imported that the Guine Factors Do not incline to take up Guinamen at any rate indeavour to git out as fast as pasable and will take none but what thair friends Contracts for in England and of which they have advise and are Desired by thair friends to sell, so you may see what tarible times we have fell in with. We have Brought in for Cargo 188 Slaves for Schooner and Cargo and Brigs Cargo. from Illness I have not settled the Acct: yet but hope to be able before the Vessel Leaves this wheather I come in her Or not to London, Which I should be very Sorry if I cannot. Thair is about 20 slaves more freight that I Brought, Belingin to Several persons, which will make the Freight amount to about 600 £ Sterling which had it not have bin for these Crewel times Might have Maid a saving Voige. Capt: Thurston the Schooner Nancy Captn. is sick Likewise and some of my people So that I never had such a Sickly ship before Among My officers and Saylor's tho I have lost none But two of the Schooners is ded. as thair will be Oppertunityes now of writing I ad no more.

KINGSTON Apriel 1st, 1775.

Dear Sir, We recived Yours by Yesterdays Post from Lewsea and are Exetremely Sorry that continud so much Indisposed. god Send a Speedy Change for the better. we wrote you by our Clark Mr. Austin about Six days ago mentioning that Fletchers Orders had come to Mr. Hibberts House dereccting you to Sell with them at Montegu bay. no doubt long 'ere this, you have recid these Instruc-tions and Seen Mr: Bernard relative the Disposing of your Cargoe.²

Such long and Tedious detentions must Occation you great Un-easiness, and be rather Dessagreeable to Malcolm and Nevison after Consenting to rest with them. The Guinaman Sold at Kingston lately have been taken up at 12, 15 and 21 Months, Except those Sold to the Contractors for Dollers, and they give no more then 36 £ Ster'g per head for prime men Slaves so that none of the Car-goes Sold to them Average more than about £34 Ste'g which is amaterial difference indeed. Gould Coast Cargos Sold for the Islands Consumption, open on the day of Sail at £66 and Duty and Priviledge £70. we mention'd in our last that poor Stockford de-parted this life last Sunday after lingering in a deliurous Setuation for Six days. he left in our hands about 400£ Four Hundred pounds this Currency as per Acco't Settled with him before he wass taken with a Relapse, likewise Close, watch, Buckles, buttons and etc. Pray give us your advice what to do with his Effects. Mr. Hill the Chief Mate went home Master and Sail'd from Port Royal the 24 Int: bound for London, after waiting Upwards of Six days in hopes of a change in Stockford favor but alas it proved in Vain. we Ship'd Eighty Cask Sugar and Rum on the Oners Accot: agreeable to Mr. Fletchers Orders, and procured Indigo and other Light Frieght within twenty or twenty five Cask of a full Loade. For the Balance of This Cargo we Sent Bills at Six and twelf Months Sight, and closed the Voyage with Yours and all the Oners different Accounts, which

Your payments will be in the Month of May next, and in the Month of May 1777 and we flatter Ourselves there is not a Negroe sold but what will be paid for. It gives us much Concern that nothing eligible has offerd for the Venus, had you not limited us to selling her or loading her for London or New York we might have served you by loading her for Bristol, which there is now a pretty tolerable chance of doing had you been pleased to have favoured Us with a discretionary power we certainly should have used it to the best of our Judgement for your Interest, but nothing favourable offering compatible with your Instructions you must expect to see her soon in Rhode Island, and we are sorry to say an Empty Vessel.

Capt. Robert Champlin, Of [y]our letters from Anambo 2d and 14 April We recd. and flatter our selves you are at least a month on your Passage to the Islands. As Slaves are low to Windward have no expectation of your selling there for our Limits and of course will proceed to Mesrs. Fitches of Kings Town Jamaica, who from their letters to us have agreed to sell your Cargo and give bills on NYork. Our particular Instructions to you has been heretofore lodged with them; we can only ad that nothing but Wars is here, and orders may soon come to the men of Wars to seize all Vessells without Distinction, being 3, of 20 Guns here, besides cutters and Press all they can. If there is a Possibility of selling the Sloop do it at all events—nay even take £100 Sterling for her rather than bring her home, tho I think £200 might be obtained for, but if you are obliged to bring her home, head up all your Swords and other arms in a Tight hhd. and Stow in a Tear among your hhds. of Water for Ballast or the man Wars will take them from you lay out no money on your Sloop. Amount to 11 oz Trade, this is the black trade, and the White trade is 12 oz,² in Short by what I can find out By all the Captains here there Slaves Stands them in 24£ Ster'g and upwards round. The Vessels now here are the Swallow Nelson her purchase Compleeted, will Sail in a Short time, Marquis of Rockingham, Charles, wants 90 Slaves, the Britania Hughes has About 50 Slaves, Juno, Eagles just arr'd, (all of L'ple [Liverpool]), The Unanimity Chambers wants 40, The Peggy Martin, about 20, on board, Sophia Bold taken up by Mill and Miles (all of London), The Phenix Taylor wants About 80, The Tom Nicholson wants 50, The King George Williams Contracted wt the Whites for all his Cargo, (all of Bristol,). There is Several Vessels to windward Among Whom C't Farrar from Liverpool who we heere has 1700 Brass pans and 1000 Shantee romauls, if so will when he arrives carry all the Trade for without a Shantee Romal and 4 Brass pans you cannot think of purchasing a Slave. Since my Arrival have done but little, raised about 70 oz. gold and have made barters with the Whites about 50 Slaves and if Mr. Mill Complies with his promise have 20 More from him, but as he is a realiseing and intends Coming off many Obstacles may Arrise that he Cannot Comply. As to the black trade I have purchased two Women and trusted About 8 Slaves goods which is the Whole of the bussiness Since I came down in the roade, being Selling a little Brandy for Gold, which by no means is liked equal to our rum, A few days ago arrived here a Small Vessel from the Granads with about 6000 Gs. rum, was taken up by Mill, Miles and Brew, at 140 and 160 Gs. per Slave.

²These prices should be compared with those prevailing about fifty years earlier. See this work, II. 372-383.

A few days ago Capt. Hill returned from to windward very Sick, but are in hopes is Something better now. My Cooper came out with a Pox on him and as yet the Doctor has not been Able to remove it, and for the want of him we are much distress and in a little While Shall not have an Ancor to give on a Slave. And as one Misfortune does not come Alone, the 3d Instant our boatswain lost our 2d boat After landing 2 Punch'n Brandy at the Saltponds, lost in her 1 Empty Punch'n 1 do. Ancor and 1 Swivil Gun. Mr. Carr is to windward in the 1st Boat wth a Cargo of brandy, Goods etc. etc. after Gold. In my barter for 20 Slaves with Mr. Miles I gave him 40 oz Gold for 70 oz Trade, which is 10 oz. trade loss on the Stripe Taffity and Cottonnee. I endeavoured to let you know how matters are a going, and like to go, for there is no hopes of any alteration like to happen Soon for the better. . . .

my register, And that I Should go to Cape Coast and make a protest, The next Morning I went up and when I came there the Secretary said it was not in his Power to grant one that would be of Any Service and so Said the governor. At the Same time the Weasel Man A Warr Capt. Warren was there and he Seem'd to be very much exasperated against the Americans, and was determined to take All he found, from What I could learn from the Masters at Cape Coast he Examined the Vessels very Closely to See if there was Any American property. I was advised by Friends that it would be better to go out of Sight for a Week or 10 days 'till he pass'd, and the next day I run out of Sight a land and Stay'd 'till he pass'd, and before I could return to the roade Again the Pallas C't Cornwallace² Arrived, and as I had left the roade I thought proper not to come in Again untill he pass'd by. I then Staid on Shore and Sent Capt. Hill out in the Ship to Stay 2 Weeks and then return, Which he did, but the Man a Warr had been detained by having Some Palavers to Settle wth the Dutch forts, that the Ship was Oblidged to go off again and stay a week longer. She this day returned to the roade, and I am bound down to Accara to deliver the Deans Company³ an hundred or 150 Slaves goods, which I agreed for Whilst the Ship was at Sea if the goods Suted. The Weasel I Saw returned on the Coast whilst I was at Accra last, About 5 days ago, and the Attalanta is likewise to come back, Whether to Stay on the Coast or not is not known, So that I am determined to get All the goods out of the Ship as Soon as possible, that they may have only an Empty Vessel to take if they are determined to bring of the Coast, which I am Affraid will be the Case, if the Weasel is to be Stationed here. It is a very unhappy Circumstance for Our Voyage, for it has kept me this 6 Weeks from Bussiness. However trade has been excessive dull and those in the roade All the time has not purchased 20 Slaves. If it was not for the longtime of payment wth the Deanish Company (which is to be the Middle of August) I Should think I have done more than if I had been in the roade, but I have been So harrassed ever Since the Arrival of the Men of Warr that I am glad to get the goods out of the Vessel at Any rate, Esspecially where the payment has always proved good, if no farther Accts. of this Men A Warr Shall Set out in the Morning for Accara in the Ship. As I now have given you A full Account as I possibly can at presant, Must beg of you if Any thing can be done with you towards the preservation of the Intrest that you will do it. I don't think that any part of the Intrest is in danger of being Confiscated except my part, and that is because the Register Mentioned me belonging to Rhode Island, but to be brought off and leave the Cargo behind will be a great disapointment to you, which is the greatest part of my uneasiness at presant. I hope to return in time to give you farther Accounts of our Barter to leeward by the Companys Ship. After Setling of that barter can give some near gues of our purchase, which I am Affraid will be far Short of What was expected when I left you, for the price is now 10 and 12 oz to the Whites for Women and Men, and do not imagine I Shall be at Barbadoes till Novr.

I imagine you Will have time enough to Send Any Orders there that may be of Service to me After the receipt of this and I Sincerely hope the Affairs of America will be Settled. . . .

CAPE COAST ROADE, 6th May 1776.

Per the Sophia C't Bold

Sir, In my last per the Rockingham Capt. Charles of the 1st Ult. I acquainted you I was about to barter with the Deans Company at Accra for 100 or 150 Slaves, provided the goods Suited, On the Ships return I proceeded with her to Accra and there Compleated the barter for 147 Slaves, which are to be All paid by agreemant by the Middle of August, And at the Same time delivered All the goods, I have now dissposed of All my Cargo Except 10 punch's of Brandy and the Jamaica Rum, great part of which I Shall want for Wooding, Watering and other expences, We are now Returned with out Ship to Cape Coast from Accra, in order to fill our Water, get our Wood and provisions, and to Collect our debts here and at Annamaboe, to Compleat which it will take 6 or 8 Weaks, When done here Shall return to Accra to be ready when our Slaves there becomes due,

By the nearest Calculation I can Make my purchase will amount to About 275 Slaves, but as my Stay on the Coast will be this Some time yet and of Course more Expencive I cannot justly Assertain the number, but it will be near what I before Mentioned.

The purchase Runs Short of Expectation when Sail'g but the prices is Much More than I expected when I left you, for All the Slaves is at 12 oz for Men and 10 oz for Women thats purchased from the Whites, and from my Unhappy Situation, and the Excessive dull trade I have made very little other trade than with the Whites, So that I labour under every disadvantage in point of profits to the Voyage, However I hope if we get Safe to Markett, with our Short purchase that we Shall not lose Money.² . . .

CAPE COAST ROADE 6 July 1776.

D'r Sir, In my former letters Pr Capt'ns Bold, Smith and others, I fully informed you in what manner I had disposed of my Cargo, and time agree'd on for payment was the middle of Augt. And Expected to be at Barbadoes in Novr and I Should purchase About 275 Slaves. I now add that Trade has been entirely Stop'd for this 6 Weeks pass'd, Owing to the Chief of the people a going back against the Asshantees to Warr, and are not yet returned, but there is no likelihoods of comeing to battle as the Asshantees is returned back to their Country again, and it is not likely their will be any great matter of trade for this some time again, (as the Chiefest of our trade comes through the Asshantees).

Everything Seems to contribute to our disapointment, About 3 weeks ago the Deans and Dutch Governors at Accra, and likewise their towns people, went together at Logerheads and fought for 3 or 4 days, from Which Accident has Stop'd all trade that way, and have just reason to think from that dissturbance it will put it out of the power of the Deans Governor to pay us agreable to contract, And am affraid shall not leave the Coast in all September, If so, cannot be at Jamaica 'till Decr.

Your favour Pr Constantine Capt. Robe of the 29th Jany. came to hand the 10th Ult. I observe your further orders about not Stopping to Windward, which Shall comply with, all my Letters before to you I have desired to have your orders at Barbadoes, and for fear you Should have Sent any there I have desired Messrs. Jones and Ewing if any letters Should be lodged with them for me, that they would forward them under cover to Messrs. Hibberts and Nephews at Kingston, and if the North side to Messers. Barnard and Montague, at Montego Bay, as I should not stop at Barbadoes. I shall agreable to your orders proceed immediately to Montego Bay, where I hope it will be agreable for the Former house to take me up, or our Former Friends, but Should I be oblided to call on Our Friends, P and W. Shall Observe your note About the Planters Bills. [You] mentioned the Fletcher was still unsold, I wish we had been lucky enough to have fited her out with Brandy when I Sail'd for at that time Brandy was much wanted, as there was no rum at Markett, and She might by this time have been with you Again, with part of my Cargo and her Own, which as things has turn'd out would have been greatly to Advantage, Dutch Brandy has the preferance to English Brandy, and rum before both.

There has been here since my Arrival 6 Rummen from the West Indies, two of Which is gone off, So that the Coast has been very well Supplied with rum, and the Hawk and Apollo, two Ships belonging to London, has Brought from Holland 70,000 Galls. of Gin and Brandy. The latter has not sold any yet, She has been Arrived but a few days. The Former has sold I believe near all amongst the Dutch Castles. If you should determine to send the Fletcher with Brandy, Dutch Brandy would be the best, and I believe by farr the Cheapest.

I am excessive sorry to hear there is no likelyhood of matters being Accomodated between Great Britain and her Colonies, and likewise that such Acts of Parliament pass'd, to take All the American Vessels, for I assure you we had like to have been taken off the Coast, from the orders the Men of Warr had dated Octr. 11th 1775; had I not keepled out of the way All the time the Menawar were on the Coast. And I have been in the greatest Dilemma Imaginable About the Acts, and what to do with the Vessel, As I never durst take Any Slaves on board not thinking the Intrest safe to be brought off in her, Untill a few days ago I found Some Exemtions from Acts pass'd to take All Americans, in the publick Ledger of Feb'y 7th (Viz. Exemption 4th) is Ships cleared out from any port of Great Britain or Ireland before the 1st Jany. 1776 for Any of the British Sugar Colonies in the West Indies, and Ships cleared out from the Said British Colonies and bound to Great Britain or Ireland, Provided $\frac{2}{3}$ of the owners of Such Ships as[are] his Majestys Subjects Residing in Great Britain or Ireland, or Some of the Said Sugar Colonies. The Above Act entirely Acquits us, as we are cleared out for Jamaica, and Coppy of Our Register Sent to Montego Bay, will entirely Acquit us from farther trouble.

Your paragraph Concerning geting a few Guns on Account of the American privateers, there is none to be gott, Every body that has any do not chuse to part with them for the Same Reasons, And for my part I do not think but that the American Privateers are So large that 4 or 6 Guns would be of little use, if to be had. You better know what danger there is of privateers than I do, So beg you will Insure my Intrest, [f]or as much as you think prudent, but as our Stay on the Coast will be so long, I am in great hopes Every thing may be Setled before we Reach the W. Indies, and That Great Britain and her Colonies may be Unitted in a Everlasting Union, Is my Sincere Wish. . . .

267. CAPTAIN PELEG CLARKE TO RICHARD MILES AND JEREMY B. WEUVES, 1776.¹

Gentlemen, There is a debt due to Capt. Caleb Gardner in behalf of the Estate of the late Robert Johnson from late Richard Brew of Annamaboe,² Amounting to thirty Eight Slaves, which I am empowered to receive, as will appear by the Power's which were lodged Some time ago in the Secretary's office at Cape Coast Castle, I there-²The letter to Messrs. Hibbert, which was also written on July 6, stated that Clarke did not expect to leave the coast before the middle or the end of September.

CHRISTENBORG CASTLE ACCRA Decem'r 1 1776.

D'r Sir, I dare Say You'l be Supprised as well as Dissapointed when this Letter Informes you I am Still on the Coast Acation'd by the Danish Company not paying me Agreeable to Contract, The reason of there noncompliance is there falling into a palaver with there Duch Nabours which for along time Stop'd there Trade.²

However, trade has taken arun here for this last month and I have recived all my Slaves to about thirty Six or Seven which I hope to gitt Very Soon and dout not of Sail'g of the Coast by Christmas.

I am Sorry I have So dissagreeable a Story now to tell, which is about the 8th of Last Month our Slaves rose on board and a large Number of them jumpt overboard, out of which twenty Eight Men and two woman whare Drown'd, Six men taken up by the Moree Towns people which Mr. Klearck the Governor of the Foart, at that place,³ took out of there hands and has them in his Foart I indeavourd to gitt them, but the Towns people Ask Eleven oz. pr head for takeing them up, So I could not Settle it with them, and being Oblig'd to return to Accra again in Oder to Settle, I have beeg the favour of Mr. Mill to Settle it for me and i dout not he will do it much Sooner and on more reasonable'r termes then I can.

Thare is likewise apawn boy Mising which for a woman Slave, and was not heard of when I Left Cape Coast, and if not found will add one More to our loss. I am Sorry to Say that the Insurrectison on board happen'd not by Accident Somuch as through avery grate Neglect in Mr. Hill, in not Chaining the Slaves that day as Usual and agrater peace of Misconduct in going out of the Vessel and takeing all the Chiff Officers with him that knew whare any thing wass, and Leaving the Slaves out of the Chain, (and on deck). The reason ³ "To Rich'd Miles and Jer: Ber'd Weaves, Esqrs, Executors of late Rich'd Brew, Annamaboe." Richard Miles, not long after this, received an "ad interim" appointment as governor in chief of the British settlements on the Gold Coast. He was superseded in March, 1780. In 1782 he was made governor and held the office two years. J. B. Weuves, probably the second executor, was governor in 1781. George Macdonald, The Gold Coast, p. 346.

[268] ¹ Clarke Letter-Book, no. 76.

² Clarke had written on Oct. 1 that the Danes had disappointed him. At that time he had on board 109 slaves, his boat had gone to the Danish factory for 12 or 15 more, there were 10 awaiting him at the English factory at Prampram, and some due to him at Anamabo. He had sent two slaves off by Captain Champlin, for the benefit of his family in Rhode Island, which was cut off from receiving any funds directly from Fletcher.

he gives for going on Shore wass about three of the people he had differ'd with that Morning and had Stop'd there Allowance of adram for gitting Drunk with the rum Sent in the boate for the people that Swims of the water, and when the boate returnd again In shore for More water the people wood not Come of, So he went on Shore after them and in the time of there being a Shore the Slaves took the Oppertunity to rise and jump over board, they being well Secured in Irons, they could not[swim?], Nor did they any mischiff Otherways. Dissapointments, Crosses and Losses has closely attended us this Voyage, whare and how they will end God only knows, We have lost three Ancors, 2 boats with them there Sails, Oars etc. besides 2 Swivel guns.

I am hartily Sorroy I had so Dissagreeable a Story to wright you, However we will now leave it, and acquaint you that our Slaves on board are all well and we have About 200 on board, and I dout not of Compleating my purchass of 275 Slaves not-with-Standing the grate Exspence that attended our long Stay on the Coast. Our beef and other provishons runs very Short and not a bar'l of any kind to be purchast at any rate whatever, but as Long as we have Slaves provishon plenty there is no dainger of Starving. We heave had no late Arival on the Coast, and there is but Very few goods, and no rum, there will be agrate Opening in avery Short time for Some fourtanate parson or other, wharein he may Make a very grate Voyage. The Coast is now in want of allmost Every Necessary both for trade and Every thing Else. The last rum Vessel that wass here is Capt. Stanton Hazard in a brig of Mr. Romes and had it not have been for his Uncommon Leakage he wood have made avery grate Voyage. he has lost on forth part of his Cargo, he Sold at 140 g'l for men and 120 for woman he is now at Cape Coast. If the Fletcher wass here She wood turn out a Cargo of Brandy Excessive well, for I assure you Lichcure never wass more wanted then at preasant.

I have fully Aquainted you in my former letters of our Situation and dout not you have taken Every precaution Necessary to gard against the Worst, and Every Dainger that thretten's us, and that a Cobby of our Regester is Loged at Monteagu bay, whare I hope to be in Feby. I have left orders with the Dochter to Write you, if any of the Vessels Sails from windard while I am Down here, Therefore if any thing new hass Transspired he will let you no. . . .

CAPE COAST ROADE, 15 Decr. 1776.

Sir: Agreeable to Capt. Clarkes desire, I take the oppertunity of the Hope C Fletcher sailing from hence to write you a few lines, in order to acquaint you how your affairs is situated here, but am exceeding sorry it is not in my power to send you more agreeable Accounts, for, as Capt. Clarke has from time to time Observed to you, the Voyage has been attended with nothing but losses and disapointments, so to compleat the whole, on Friday the 8th Inst. we had the misfortune to lose 36 of the best slaves we had by an Insurrection, this unlucky affair happened about a mile to leeward of this roade, when there was only the Boatswain, Carpenter, 3 White people and myself on board (of white people). Capt. Clarke Mr. Carr and boats crew were on there passage up from Accra, 3 of the white people had that morning left the boat when a watering and Capt. Hill was gone ashore wt Mr. Risle and boats Crew in order to get them off again, We had 160 Slaves on board and were that day lett out of the Deck Chains in order to wash, about 2 OClock They began by siesing upon the Boatswain (luckly the only white person upon the main deck) but he soon got disengaged and got abaft the Barricade, after receiving a wound on his breast and one under his Chin, both well again. They Continued to threw Staves, billets of wood etc., and in endeavoring to get down the Barricado, or over it for upwards of 40 Minutes, when finding they could not effect it all the Fantee and Most of the Accra Men Slaves jumped over board, in my opinion with an intend to get up abaft, but the Currant running to strong to leeward very few of them could fetch the Ship again. At last we got a signal hoisted for the boat to come off (having none alongside). Sometime after the boat and a Cannoe came off and picked up 6 men and M. boys after being upwards of 2 hours in the water and got far to leeward. When all was a little setled we found 32 Men and Men boys w't 2 women a mising, the best Slaves we had. We only fired 2 masquets amongst them, one wt Powder only and one wt a little dust in it, had we fired more almost every one of them would have jumped over board, a few got cut wt cutlasses, but are geting well again, no white man excepting the boatswain got hurt, had the women assisted them in all probability your property here at this time would have been but small. The women having no hand in it was owing to their having no time to consult about it, as their rissing at that time was entirely owing to there being so many white people out of the Vessel, (which they said themselves) though they had 2 or 3 times before been going to attempt it. The only reason we can give for their attempting any thing of the kind, is, their being wearied at staying so long on board the ship. Those left will give no reason for their rising, but lay the blame entirely on those that lost. There is 4 Men and 2 Men boys now in Mauree fort (a dutch fort about 4 Miles to leewd. of this) which was picked up by the natives, who the Gov'r sent off in cannoes for the purpose. They at presant insist upon the full price for them, but Capt. Clarke is in hopes of geting one half for the other, being the Common Custom of this Country. There was a rum brig lying at C. Coast, but could see nothing of the affair, by reason of the ship rideing right head too her. You will probably think I have been too particular for so disagreeable a Subject, therefore shall say no more of it

Capt. Clarke arr'd the 9th ult. from Accra wth 11 Slaves, Mr. Carr has Since brought up 44, so that we have now recd. 114 Slaves from the Dainish Company. They have had a good dale of Shantee trade lately, but their factorys to leeward has had little or none. Capt. Clarke went down to Accra the 26th Ult. and I believe will not return till all is setled there, as Mr. Carr went down the 8th ult. in a large boat he bourowed in order to bring up all or most of what is due so that we have Some hopes of sailing in all this month. There is 4 or 5 Slaves due here and at Annamaboe yet, one of which I'm affraid will be lost, as a pawn ran away from the boat at C. Coast the 8th ult. and they deny his ever geting to Annam'e. He had been back and forward in the boats all the while we have been upon the Coast, by desire of his Father. Capt. Clarke ordered the Ship up here as there is no wood or water to be got to leeward of this, and the boat brings up the slaves as fast as they are purchased. the Ship is now full wooded and watered

We have now 192 Slaves on board, in pretty good health, but have had the misfortune to bury a boy of a Dropsy. That unlucky accident has hurt the looks of our main deck much, and men slaves is very scarce wh is a jeneral Complaint. . . . There has been no fresh Arrivals letely, excepting a rum brig from Granada, who immediately disposedd of what rum he had to the whites at 120 and 140 G. pr slave, that article begins to be very scarce here.

The trade here begins to come in and most of the Vessels are out of goods. The Constantine C't Robe of Bristol, The Fly, Blandle, of Liverpool, are done purchaseing, and only wait for some debts. The Gascoyne, Thoburn, of London is nigh done, so that the Brooks, Noble, of L'ple is the only one purchaseing in Annamaboe, never theless the prices never were so high, being got to 9½ and 11½ oz. Pr. Slave to the blacks. C't Noble has keep't up his good, in order to lower the price, but 'am affraid will not succeed. The Hawk, Mill (lying here) has got very few goods. Gov'r Mill intends going off in her, from Whydah, the begining of the year.

The most Commanding articles here at presant is Rum and Tobacco. There has been no Portugee Vessel down lately, so that what little Tobacco there is sells for 5 and 6 oz. trade Pr roll, which since we arrived has sold for 1 and 1½ oz. trade.

Powder is at presant much wanted all along the Gold Coast, many of the beech towns being at Warr amongst themselves, or wth their Gov'rs.

Mr. Watts late chief of Tantan² has resigned his place on account of disputes he has had with the natives, and is going off in a brig belong'g to Granada, which Arr'd last July.

The Assortment of Goods upon a Slave is much the same as when we Arrived. . . .

Mr. Fletcher wishes to engage a freight for the Vessel, but it will be impossible to make any such agreement wt the Guinea factors, in the presant temper of the times. If you come wth your Vessel to Kingston (wch is contrary to our presant expectations) we may possibly be able to give you some assistance in selling the Negroes, or making the most advantageous terms wth others for the benefit of yourself and Owners, but it will be out of our powers to go to any out port to sell the Cargoe.

LONDON 10th Feby. 1777.

D'r Sir. . . . I apprehend f'm all Accts. you will find the times much worse at Jama. than ever you expected for Sale of your cargo, owing to the great glut of Negroes carryed down to that Island of late, has reduced the price Much, and payments they are got to immoderate lengths, so that no trade can possibly Support the credit given, besides those Jama. houses here that has stop'd and got time to pay (wch I advised you off in my last) must Effect many of the planters at Jamaica very much. The House of Sericold and Jackson was the beginners and occasioned all this mischief. I hope you have Steared clear of any of there connexions at Montego Bay. Many house here, Morse and Smiths, has lately Stop'd owing to the formers connexions, all which makes the times here very Alarming, and no body here will scarce accept bills without Value in hand. I cannot say more than I have in my former on our concern, being well Satisfied you will do everything for the best that tends to our Interest wth Safety. If you have been Oblidged to Sell your Slaves on the plan Mr. Hibberts has lately adopted (wch I fear other houses will too Soon follow,) Viz: Selling the Cargoes on the Owners Acct. and risque, I would recomend, if not too late, to get the Houses own bonds that Sells the Cargo preferable to the diff't Planters Bonds, by wch means we have but one house to look to, instead of so many diff't People, and in such case to take more produce on our own Accts. than before ordered, esspecially dispatch sake, so as to Sale wth the 1st Convoy, which I take for granted you will not fale to do, and give me timely advise by the Man of Warr and Packet, that I may make the necessary Insurance. If I had thought the times had been so bad, I should have recommended to you, if cou'd have been done, to rented Ab't 60 Negroes on our joint Acct. upon lease for 3 years to 4 differ-ant people, good Safe Men, to make good the Valuation, or Selling price at the usual rent given for New Negroes, Say f'm 8 to 10 Pr Cent on Value, And at the end of the lease to pay the Amount or else deliver up the Negroes and pay for the difficiency, but I suppose it will be too late to think of it and only mention this as it occurs to me, as it might have been for our benefit. I must inform you that an act of Parliament will soon pass, which Empowrs the Admiralty to grant Letters of Marque to Merchant Ships, to make Prizes of any American Ships or Property—wch as you have been so harrassed on that Acct. and to prevent any future troubles, I am to desire you will make over a deed sale for your quarter part of the Vessel to me or Mr. Barwell Evins, or any other friend in trust, after wch you can with safety make an affidavit and get a New Register made out for Ship Thames in my name and Mr. Evins only of London as Sole owners, and cargo to be Ship'd on owners Acct. Marcked 8 T and to let no part appear in your Name, which will entirely put it out of the power of any Busy person giving trouble. And upon the Ships Arrival here, all matters will be properly adjusted between us as before, as I think you may rely on my honour, on the Occasion, this I before hinted in my letters of 7th Feby. and 25th Novr. Was you to mention yourself of London in the Register I think will not be so Safe as the other way, you being so well known f'm R. I. might give room for Ill natured people to make a handle off, and if you Should have Already got a Register made out before this comes to hand, you can Assign your reasons to the Collector, that you have Sold out, in order to get a new Register in the name of the Sold Owners of London etc., what I have before hinted I think will be Sufficient for your government on that head. I am likewise of opinion it will be for our Mutual Intrest your comeing home to England in the Ship, as we can then adjust and Settle all Matters between us, after wch if you chuse it you can go home to your family, in some of the Transports, or Store Ships, otherways we may perhaps get a Freight for our Ship that way, and in case Matters are Setled wth America this Summer their will be a good opening for trade f'm hence thither. I Shall Honour your bill on me as advis'd for £36 Stg. when due, and have pd. Mrs. Clarkes bill on me for £100 S'g both wch are charged to Your debt. I am Sorry to find you have lost the S. Bower Anchor, and that the Old Cable proves so bad, if you should be oblided to get either at Jama. you will do it in as Cheep a way as you can, Mr. Westmorland can Assist you in this Matter f'm Kingston, old Cordage used formerly to be had at Greenwich Kingstons etc. I must inform you I have Sent out a power of Attorney to Mr. Westmorland, and to Mr. Delarach of St. Eliz'bs Jama. to transact any affairs of mine in future, So that any papers or Bonds of our Concer[n]s may be left in their hands if Necessary when you leave the Island.

MONTEGO BAY 25th Ap'l 1777.

Much Esteemed Friends, I Received your kind fav'r wch you lodged in the hands of Messrs. Bernard and Montague, and am much obliged to you for your Information how slaves sell at Kingston and likewise the mode of payment. I have agreable to Mr. Fletchers orders applied to Messrs. Bernard and Montague but there terms are such that I cannot by any means think of complying with, which is to have our slaves sold for Bonds on Account of the Owners, those payments I am sure never will be agreable to Mr. Fletcher, for I am very confident they will cut but a poor figure in purchaseing a Guinea Cargo in London. I am now a treating wth Malcom and Neveson to take me up. Mr. Malcom is at presant here, I expect Mr. Neveson up to day from Lucea, at presant no terms are offered as agreed on, but wait the Arrival of Neveson. I was sorry to see it was not agrable to you to sell a Cargoe of Negroes any where but at Kingston, for it was my orders from Mr. Fletcher that if the House of Hibberts would not sell for such payment as would sute to dispatch my doctor to you, and that he did not doubt but you would do the business. Mr. Fletcher ordered me down on this side as imagineing Slaves would sell higher than at Kingston and I had much reither it had been agreable for you to have come over and Sold the Slaves, for it is entirely out of my power to come round to Kingston. My Ship is a compleat wreck for the night after I left Cape Coast I lost my Fore Mast, Fore top Mast, Fore top G'n Mast, Main top Mast and Sprung the head of my Main Mast, in a tarnado, So that in 2 Moments I was a compleat Wreck, and Considering my cargo and the place where I was it was truely to be said we were in a deplorable condition, such a one as I never before saw, nor never wish to see again. But this Voyage has been a Compoun of Losses, Crosses and disapointments, which I assure you so close attended us that we Scarce ever was clear of one 'till plunged into Anot'r and our evil genius has not yet left us, we have not been Successful in any one thing the Voyage, except in having lettle or no mortality, burying but 4 Slaves all this long disagreeable Voyage, and keeping out of the hands of my Countrimen and arriving safe here after a long Passage of 15 Weeks and 12 Mo'ts Stay on the Coast. But have brought in my Slaves in very good order and healthy 240 of them, but as you justly observe the temper of the times are Such that there is nothing to be hoped from them towards Releaving a Short purchase and a large loss by Insurrection of 33 Slaves, wch you have heard of before now. I am informed that letters have been Returned from this place back to Kingston. I beg that if there is any in your hands or in the Post-office you will desire them to be sent back.

LONDON 12 Sept. 1777.

Dear Sir, . . . I mentioned something in my last of a Guinea schame with Rum from Jamaica in Comp'y with Mr. [illegible] Malcolm Esq. he to hold a Quarter part of Vessell and Cargo, but without he Guarantee the Sales of Negroes on Ships return and give Bills at 1, 2 and 3 years with Intrest on said Bills after 6 Months, Otherwise I will not be concerned, and Mr. Malcolme At same time to Supply the Cargo Rum and Outfitts for the Other owners 3 Quarters to be paid out of the Second Bill at 6 Months now sent Me home, allowing them the Difference of Interest the bill has to run, but not to Draw any Bill on me for an Adventure on that account, for reasons already Assigned. If you go to Jamaica you will turn the matter in your mind, and should think it will answer and is agreeable to Mr. Malcolm you have my Liberty for Self and other Owners to proceed on it provide you go the voyage your self to Guinea Otherwise I will not be concerned—which is my full Instructions on that matt'r which you will abide by. If any certainty of Getting Slaves for Rum in a Short time at 140 or 150 Galls pr Slave it might Answer, but not otherwise as Insurance will be high, and it depends on Vessells are already gone on the Rum Trade from Jamaica or Windward Islands. All this I shall leave to your prudent consideration.² . . .

March 10, 1778.

. . . Mr. Bell has got a Birth in a Ship for 600 Slaves from Liverpool for Affrica, which goes for 600 Slaves. I have settled with him for Ballance of his wages as well as for his Priviledge and hard money, so that the Bill you sent for £47.16.9 answers the Two Latter. He has allowed me for the money received of yours of Mr. Westmoreland £52.0.3 Jama. Currency, which is at your Credit he also has delivered me your acct with Mr. Westmoreland with an Order on Mr. Jno. Peatt for Ballance say £171.31 4 Jama Currency.² . . .

[279] ¹ Clarke Letter-Book, no. 76.

[280] ¹ Clarke Letter-Book, no. 76.

² Fletcher wrote again to Clarke on Apr. 16, 1779, probably concerning the voyage of 1777, that the underwriters refused to pay for the losses of the voyage, on the ground that Clarke had deviated from his course. They later paid £400 (Clarke Letter-Book, no. 76). The absence of material for the years 1779 to 1783 indicates that the Revolution for the time destroyed the American trade in slaves.

Mrs. Whiting, widow of Nathaniel Whiting, had leased the slave Fantee to Edward Jones for twelve months, in return for 54 Spanish milled dollars. A few months later Jones complained that Fantee had stolen from him and his friends and had then run away. After his capture, on the road to Boston, Mrs. Whiting disposed of him (ibid., pp. 190-192). The law of 1779 forbidding the exportation of negroes probably allowed for the sale of refractory slaves, otherwise this transaction would have been illegal.

PROVIDENCE, 26th 8th Mo. 1783.

Respected Friends, Being informed yesterday that you had in Contemplation sending a Vessel to Africa for the purpose of getting Negroes and selling them as Slaves in the West Indies;² and as I have ever entertained a respectful opinion of your humanity, as well as integrity as Merchants, and remembring how it was with me, when our Company were engaging in that Traffick, that altho' the convictions of my own Conscience were such as to be averse to the Voyage, yet in reasoning upon that Subject with those who were for pursuing it, my holding Slaves at that time so weakened my arguments, that I suffered myself, rather than break my Connexions, to be Concern'd, but as I have many times since thought, that if I had known the Sentiments of others, or had their concurring Testimonies to those Scruples, I then had, I should have been preserved from an Evil, which has given me the most uneasiness, and has left the greatest impression and stain upon my own mind of any, if not all my other conduct in life; and it appears particularly so when I am favoured with a quiet retrospection and arraign it before the righteous judge of all men; Under these considerations I felt some engagement for your preservation from so great an evil as I have found that Trade to be, and with a view to dissuade and discourage your pursuing the Voyage, That you may avoid the unhappy reflections which I have had I am induced to Write you and desire your serious consideration on the Subject, when you feel your minds calmly disposed for pursuing such a course of life, as will preserve your Characters as Men of Humanity and feelings for the distresses and afflictions of others, which I have observed with much Satisfaction, on some occasions to be very Conspicuous. . . .

you are Men of Feelings, and abilities to live without this Trade, why then should you be concern'd in it against your own—against the feelings of your Friends. I rest in hope, that my last has been a mistaken information, for when I delivered Clarke the Pamphlet, on this Subject I understood your intention was not to Trade in Slaves, but in Ivory, Wax, Gold dust etc. If this be the Case and you should give

The next manuscript is a much-corrected draft of the same letter, initialed "M. B.," and endorsed, "Copy to Clark and Nightingale, 26 8th mo. 1783." This house had offered Aaron Lopez a schooner suitable for the Guinea trade, ten years before. There was in their letter at that time no indication that they had used this vessel, or any other, for that trade themselves. Lopez Letter-Book, no. 634, p. 33.

Orders to the Captn. not to Suffer any Negroes on Board, it would be grateful to many of your Connexions in Town, as well as your Friend.³

NEWPORT, April 29, 1784.

Much esteemed Friend: I am much pleased with your zeal, and persevering, assiduous attempts to discourage and abolish the slave trade and the slavery of the Africans among us.² Though I have a degree of the same zeal, yet I am apt to sink under discouragements which you seem easily to surmount. I have dared publicly to declare that this town is the most guilty, respecting the slave trade, of any on the continent, as it has been, in a great measure, built up by the blood of the poor Africans; and that the only way to escape the effects of divine displeasure, is to be sensible of the sin, repent, and

[285] ¹ Samuel Hopkins, Works, I. 119-120. Many of the letters which follow are in part printed in a "Memoir" by E. A. Park, contained in the first volume of the Works. Dr. Hopkins had become pastor of the First Congregational Church of Newport in 1770. From that time until his death he took an active part in the movement to abolish the slave trade and to improve the condition of the blacks. In many of his projects he was aided by Dr. Ezra Stiles, pastor of the Second Congregational Church of Newport 1755-1776, and throughout his life he and Moses Brown of Providence were in close sympathy on questions pertaining to the negro. He at one time wrote of Moses Brown: "Moses Brown is a man of a respectable character, as an honest, sensible man. He is a man of interest. He was not educated a Quaker, but joined that sect some years ago. He is a brother to the famous John Brown, the rich merchant in Providence. This Moses was once concerned in the slave trade; but for many years has been convinced of the iniquity of it, and his sin in practising it has lain heavy on his conscience. He thinks it his duty to do all in his power to put a stop to this traffic, and an end to the slavery of Africans, and to assist them to obtain their freedom, in all the ways he can. And he is active and unwearied in his endeavors to promote these ends. And I must say, that he and a number of his brethern, who join him in this matter, have acted a judicious, faithful, and honorable part. We have no men of any other denomination in these States, who appear so conscientious, discerning, faithful, and zealous, in this matter, as these Quakers do" (Hopkins to Levi Hart, Nov. 27, 1787, Works, I. 123).

reform.³ This has greatly displeased a number, and I fear the most are far from a disposition to repent, especially they who have the greatest share of the guilt. This town, I greatly fear, will be the last in the State to do what they ought to do, and be foremost in it, respecting that most abominable traffic, and the consequent slavery that is among us. This gives me a gloomy prospect of our future circumstances. The freemen have chosen a new set of representatives, except one.⁴ Though some of them are, in many respects, worthy men, I believe not one of them will vote for any law to discourage the slave trade, or the slavery of the Africans. And I suspect that they who planned this choice had a particular view to this. . . .

The Friends have set a laudable example in bearing testimony against the slave trade, and exerting themselves to suppress the slavery of the Africans; and I must say, have acted more like Christians, in this important article, than any other denomination of Christians among us. To our shame be it spoken! The church in which I preside have agreed to declare, that the slave trade and the slavery of the blacks, as it has been practised among us, is a gross violation of the righteousness and benevolence which are so much inculcated in the gospel, and therefore, we will not tolerate it in this church. But it is thought that present circumstances will not admit of our addressing the General Assembly on that head, so as to answer any good purpose. What I published formerly in the weekly paper here, consisted chiefly in extracts from other authors,⁵ all which you have doubtless seen, and most of them have since been printed in the Providence papers. Our printer gave such offence to a number, by publishing those extracts, and was so threatened, if he continued to insert such things in his paper, that he has been backward to do any thing of this kind since. He has, however, consented to print some observations on that head, which I thought proper at this time, next Saturday, a copy of which I shall send to you when I have opportunity.⁶

³ Dr. Hopkins's congregation was largely connected in one way or another with the slave trade.

287. DR. SAMUEL HOPKINS TO MOSES BROWN, 1787.¹

NEWPORT, March 9, 1787.

My Friend, I wrote you two days ago, But having since received a letter from Mr. Law, dated, Charleston, Feb. 16, I write again to send you the following abstract from it:

A Capt. Moses Smith of Providence, shipped two free Negroes, as seamen on board his vessel; and when he arrived in this place, he, instead of paying them their wages, according to agreement, sold them for Slaves. A gentlemen whom I desired to inquire into the matter, informed me yesterday, that they were redeemed, and set at liberty. But I think such iniquity ought not to go unpunished, if any law will take hold of it; And I wish you to write to Mr. Moses Brown, if nothing more, it may be a means of their preventing others doing in like manner.

You will please to make what use of this you think best. He informs me that the Legislature in N. Carolina had made a law prohibiting the importing Slaves into that State; And that a Senator, member of the Legislature of South Carolina, then sitting at Charleston, had told him that he did not doubt but a law of the same tenor would be enacted at that session.²

the progress of their favorite cause. In 1786 Brown gave £20 toward a prize for the best essay against the slave trade, moved to this act by the results of the Cambridge prize which had brought forth Clarkson's Commerce of the Human Species. The sentiment against the trade was growing but the trade itself still continued—In 1785 Dr. Hopkins wrote that a vessel had recently sailed from Boston for Africa. Nathaniel Russell was selling an occasional negro for the Champlins in Charleston (Moses Brown Papers, V. 21, 55; Champlin Papers, 1786-1788, no. 138). "Providence, January 29 We hear that a schooner, which sailed about 12 months since from New-Port, for the coast of Africa (belonging to Messrs. Seymour and Company of Grenada) was lately met with at sea, by a vessel bound to Bristol, in England. She was without Sails, had only 15 negroes on board and those in a very emaciated and wretched condition, having doubtless been long at sea. The negroes it is supposed had rose and murdered the Captain and crew; after which many of the blacks must have died. Those found on board were carried into Bristol" (New York Packet, Feb. 14, 1785). Capt. Robert Champlin, at this time in the service of the Graftons of Salem, delivered a cargo of negroes in Charleston in 1785. His instructions, dated Oct. 19, 1784, his wage agreement, and several letters relating to his sale are to be found in the Essex Institute, envelope marked "Slave Trade in Salem."

NEWPORT, Oct. 22, 1787.

My kind friend: I thank you for your two letters of the 9th and 15th Inst. and for the news papers you have sent me. I have received those which contain the last Part of Crito.² Those containing the first part, which you say you ordered to be forwarded to me, have not yet come to hand. Perhaps they have not been sent. Mr. Foster has undertaken to get the transcript you sent me inserted in the Herald. I did not receive it soon enough to be inserted last week. I have been hoping for Ramsey's treatise,³ and am sorry to inform you I have not yet received it. Hope it will come safe. I am hurt by the doings of the convention respecting the Slave Trade.⁴ It is as you Suppose. They have carefully secured the practice of it in these States for 20 years, and prevented any Asylum for slaves during that term, unless every individual State, should suppress this trade. They have taken it out of the hands of congress. We cannot determine That the major part of the delegates were pledged with [289] ¹ Moses Brown Papers, VI. 15.

this. Some of the Southern delegates no doubt, insisted upon it that the introduction of slaves should be secured, and obstin[a]tely refused to consent to any constitution, which did not secure it. The others therefore consented, rather than have no constitution, or one in which the delegates should not be unanimous. I fear this is an Action, which will bring a curse, for that we cannot prosper. At the same time it appears to me that if this constitution be not adopted by the States, as it now stands, we shall have none, and nothing but anarchy and confusion can be expected. . . .

It has been objected by some of the ministers against preferring a memorial to the General Assembly respecting the Slave trade, That the present ruling part in the Assembly, have appeared to be so destitute of all principles of justice, or regard to it, and have acted such an iniquitous part, that there is an inpropriety in applying to them for justice; especially for the ministers of the Gospel to do it, whom they hold in the highest contempt, and would embrace any opportunity to pour contempt upon them, which we should give them by laying such a petition before them. This prevents any thing of that kind being done at present.⁵

290. ACT TO PREVENT THE SLAVE TRADE, 1787.¹

An Act to prevent the slave trade, and to encourage the abolition of slavery.

Whereas the trade to Africa for slaves, and the transportation and selling of them into other countries, is inconsistent with justice, and the principles of humanity, as well as the laws of nature, and that more enlightened and civilized sense of freedom which has of late prevailed: and whereas, the General Congress of the United States, in the year 1774, taking the said trade into consideration, agreed and resolved as follows: "That we will neither import nor purchase any slaves imported after the first day of December next; after which time we will wholly discontinue the slave trade, and will neither be concerned in it ourselves, nor will we hire our vessels or sell our ⁵ In August Dr. Hopkins wrote: "I do not think it likely that the Assembly will take the matter up, so as to do anything against the slave trade, at the next session. If they do not wholly dismiss the petition I shall be glad. I have pretty good evidence that some of them speak fair words to you and your friends, who yet are determined against doing anything against the slave trade. I enclose to you an Essay which I have attempted to get published in the Newport Herald. And the printer promised me that he would insert the whole of it, at the head of his paper, this week, so that it should be out before the sitting of the Assembly. But he has since told me that he cannot print it, and has returned it. He says he has consulted his friends, and they tell him that it will greatly hurt his interest to do it; that there is so large a number of his customers, either in the slave trade, or in such connection with them, or so disposed with respect to it, to whom it will give the greatest offence, that it is not prudent for him to do it." Hopkins to Brown, Aug. 13, 1787, Moses Brown Papers, VI. 11.

commodities or manufactures to those that are:" Nevertheless, forgetful of the danger which then impended, and inattentive to the principles of justice and sound policy manifested in the aforesaid resolution, a renewal of the African trade for slaves has been entered into by divers inhabitants of this state: For the prevention whereof,

Be it enacted by this General Assembly, and by the authority thereof it is enacted, that no citizen of this state, or other person residing within the same, shall for himself or any other person whatsoever either as master, factor, or owner of any vessel, directly or indirectly import or transport, buy or sell, or receive on board their vessel with intent to cause to be imported or transported from their native country, any of the natives or inhabitants of any state or kingdom in that part of the world called Africa, as slaves, or without their voluntary consent.

And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that every citizen, inhabitant, or resident, as aforesaid, who shall import or transport, or cause to be imported or transported, any of the said inhabitants of Africa, contrary to the true intent and meaning of this act, and be thereof lawfully convicted, shall forfeit the sum of one hundred pounds, lawful money, for every person by him or them so imported or transported; and the sum of one thousand pounds for every vessel by him or them employed in the importation or transportation aforesaid, to be recovered by bill, complaint, or information before the superior court, or either of the inferior courts within this state: the one moiety whereof shall be paid into the general treasury for the use of this state, the other moiety to and for the use of the person or persons who shall prosecute for the recovery the same,

Provided, nevertheless, that this act do not extend to vessels which have already sailed, their owners, factors, or commanders, for and during their present voyage.²

²From the tone of the correspondence between Brown and Hopkins in the months preceding this meeting of the General Assembly one may gather that the abolitionists themselves did not expect the passage of this measure. Indeed, one is puzzled to account for its success. The Newport deputies were the same as those of 1785 and 1786 with the addition of William Tripp, and among the entire body of deputies there had been few changes in the two years past. Christopher Champlin and Esek Hopkins were no longer in the Assembly, which may or may not have had significance; but Caleb Gardner, who sent vessels to Africa in 1786, 1787, 1788, and 1789, had become one of the "assistants," and George Champlin was still among the Newport deputies. As soon as the bill was passed those who had been working for it turned their attention to Connecticut. Within a month Hopkins sent a number of newspaper articles thither for republication, with these comments: "Is it not extraordinary that this State, which has exceeded the rest of the States in carrying on this trade, should be the first Legislature on this globe which has prohibited that trade? Let them have the praise of this; especially as the Assembly were so nearly unanimous, there being but four dissenting voices. If Boston and Connecticut should not join us in this, I fear this law will soon be like some other Rhode Island laws" (Hopkins to Levi Hart, Nov. 27, 1787, Hopkins, Works, I. 123). About this time Brown wrote to Hopkins that plans were already on foot to carry on the African trade from Middletown and Norwich. See Hopkins to Hart, ibid., pp. 123, 158.

291. JONATHAN EDWARDS TO MOSES BROWN, 1788.¹

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 20, 1788.

Dear Sir, . . . I inclose a copy of the late act of our Assembly² concerning the slave trade. I am mortified, as I dare say you will be, that the bill was so mutilated in the upper house. You will find, there is nothing in this law, to prevent the exportation of slaves, and of servants born since March 1st 1784. I expect that now the poor creatures will be carried out in ship-loads. I have heard since the passing of this law, of one man employed in purchasing Negroes for exportation. The lower house were not pleased with the law as it now stands; It passed it because the upper house would not do better. Mr. Mitchel of Wether[s]field is said to be the chief cause of the mischief. I wish you and two or three of your friends had tarried a few days longer; I conceive it might have answered a good purpose. Or if you will come up with another memorial on the fifth of January when the Assembly is to meet in this city again, I will join with you in another attempt.³ If you should conclude upon this measure, I wish you to inform me of it and also wish that you would as far as may be, inform yourself of any facts relating to the exporting of slaves or of children born since March 1st 1784, from this State.

[291] ¹Moses Brown Papers, VI. 45. Brown and Hopkins had for some time been sending literature to the Rev. Jonathan Edwards the younger, minister in New Haven, who was a member of a committee of clergy appointed to petition the New Hampshire and Connecticut legislatures for a law abolishing the trade. From both of these states Rhode Island vessels bound for Africa were said to be clearing. No prohibitory law was ever passed in New Hampshire, probably because the evil never assumed large proportions. Ibid., pp. 43, 49.

NEW BEDFORD, 5 mo 6 1789.

Esteemed Friend, Moses Brown, A circumstance has taken place here within the knowledge of several friends as also by their advice, which we should all have been glad had been undertaken by or in behalf of the Society for the abolition of Slavery,² but the urgency of the occasion not admitting time to consult or inform them, and not knowing how far individuals not qualified to represent the body might act, favoured the conclusion not to take up the matter in their behalf. The Brig't *Hope*³ John Stanton master arrived at Westport (Acoaxet) on the 3d inst (after laying several days at Howlands Ferry) late from Africa and West Indies, the Capn with Caleb Gardner came over here to enter the Brig'n from St. Martin's and clear the Cargo for Newport the 4th: and returned the Fifth, and the following particulars having been obtained vizt. that she sailed from Boston in 6th mo last for Africa thence brot 116 Slaves, and sold them in West Indies, that application was now made for a new Register, to change the name of Vessel, Capn. and Owners and that after Sheathing she was to proceed to Boston for a Cargo Rum to prosecute another Voyage, thus informed Wm. Gorden (Deputy [293] ¹ Moses Brown Papers, VI. 67. William Rotch, jr., was the third member of his family concerned in New Bedford commerce. To them and the group of Friends with whom they were associated may be attributed the strong antislavery sentiment which prevailed in this place throughout the eighteenth century.

² This refers to the Providence Society for the Abolition of the Slave Trade organized in February, 1789, of which Moses Brown was an active member from the beginning. Its constitution is printed in Hazard, College Tom, app. xvi., pp. 256-260; the act of incorporation, with a list of members, including many from Massachusetts and a few from Connecticut, as well as those from Rhode Island, is in R. I. Recs., X. 382-385. A "Citizen," writing in the Providence Gazette, February, 1789, objected to the organization since it might injure the reputations of the slave traders, some of whom were "the best citizens of Newport," and also since it tended to prevent the slave trade, which was a real benefit to the Africans, as it saved them from the barbarities of their native land and introduced them into civilized regions. The writer added that the spirit of the society was adverse to the Constitution of the United States, one article of which was made on purpose to prevent the injustice which the society and its adherents were practising (Hopkins, Works, I. 126-127). The "Citizen" was answered by a number of writers and a most acrimonious series of letters ensued (United States Chronicle, Feb. 19, through March), in the midst of which John Brown wrote to Moses: "Brother Moses, I wish to know weether you are the author of the ps signed 'a friend' tho a [illegible] to a Citizen as printed in the Last Saturdays paper. P. S. I might have given up my name as the Author of the Citizen had not the Billet you coate from the printer advised my not gratifying the Inquirer." Moses Brown Papers, VI. 57.

Sherriff) took out a Writ agreeable to the Slave Trade Law of this State including Caleb Gardner, Nathl. Briggs and John Stanton, with Summons for them to appear before Edw Pope Esqr. the 22d of 6 mo next, which writ was served upon them very unexpectedly this morning after Sun rising, but unfortunately before the Subpoena was served upon the Sailors, they found means to cross the River into your State, and altho it is left in an officers hand to watch their return I have no expectation evidence will be obtained from them. I hope care will be taken to procure sufficient evidence to prove that the said Brig. brought from Africa Slaves either by the people of said Vessel and others that have been there, without going to the West Indies therefor. They obtained a bondsman for their appearance, and told the Officer, "they were not residents in this State and that the Vessel was not owned by them, but by some person in New York wherefore the action could not stand," this was all the plea that was made, if its found either of the three persons were not resident in this State at the time the Brig was fitted out the action will be drop'd with that person, but as this was not ascertained the whole were taken in and the day of trial was put at a distance in order that knowledge might be obtained. The Sum sued for is £6000. Gordon will send to Newport to obtain the depositions of the people who were in the Brign but your assistance will doubtless facilitate. I have recommended his applying to Lyman. I expect to be in Boston all next week, and shall be very glad to hear from thee on this subject by post doubtless proof can be had there of this Vessels carrying Slaves to Martinico.

The declaration to the writ will be sent to Boston and if it is not properly drawn our law admits of another being filed any time before the Court.

The Brigs Register is now in the office, Gardner and Briggs Owners.⁴

BOSTON 5 mo. 16, 1789.

Esteemed Friend, Moses Brown, I was much pleased this evening in finding a letter from thee, as I fear'd a conveyance for my letter was too uncertain to get it to hand in season. I am glad to find thy approbation in our proceedings and that it will be assisted by the society. T Dawes Jr is engaged in the case (sincerely) he has now gone to N York and will consult the best Council there, to find if the State law will be any way superceded by the Federal Constitution. I have also engaged Chr'r Gore,² an Attorney much approved, who engages from principle, and assures me there is not an attorney in the State, who is not oppos'd to the traffic. I find all orders of men here are averse to it, and seem pleas'd with the effort to suppress it, except a few hot heads, one Sam Brown from your parts a principal, these have made a considerable noise, and have been very severe upon the Quakers and abolition Society. Sullivan is absent at Barnstable Court. I have left a state of the Case with S Eliot who will engage him in it. J. Lowell is also gone and would also be applied to but from a hope he will be app'td judge of the Federal Court is thou't best not to consult him as Councillor as his Candour would not admit of his afterward judging the Case, and if the prosecution continues its likely they may appeal to that Court.³ No person can be more favourably disposed than himself.

I have got from the Naval Office here a certificate of the Clearance, and inclose thee a list of the hands from the Book of clearances, that they may be known by the society and their disposition taken. The N Officer inquir'd the cause of my application, and offered every service in his way to prosecute the matter. I have not been able to find where the Owners lodged in Town, have had a person to make enquiry, who stopped on being cited to the Quakers who it was supposed had gained the knowledge but it will be easy to find who of them were here. . . . You will pursue the matter with diligence, and will take the deposition of a Capn. Smith just in from Martinico who was there when Stanton arrived.

I agree with thee in sentiment that its not the money that is the object and the prosecutor would willingly relinquish every Idea of pecuniary advantage, but I believe the Cause must be supported and carried to a length that will clearly convince those traders, they are fully in our power before any proposal of that kind be made, as it will be construed as apprehension we could not support the case.

An Israelite from Newport—M S⁴ now in Town, has said, he wished to see the operation of this matter, if those persons who have associated and made a great noise, will step forth and shew themselves openly to oppose the Traffic, and (I also infer) if the case should fail he might venture to engage [a]gain in it.

² Greater talent the abolitionists could scarcely have enlisted. Thomas Dawes, jr., was not long after made judge of the supreme court of Massachusetts; Christopher Gore was soon to become the first district attorney for Massachusetts, and later governor and United States senator. Both Gore and Dawes had been sitting in the Massachusetts convention which ratified the Federal Constitution.

³ John Lowell was appointed United States judge for the district of Massachusetts not long after this.

⁴ Moses Seixas (?).

The lawless advocates have pleased themselves with this expectation that when money come to be called for the prosecution would cease, but they have been informed, it will not be the least impediment.

I have engaged a person just going for Martinico, to procure a Certificate of the [torn] of the Vessel from there, should any [torn] they knowlege it will be well to [torn] likewise. . . . Brigs took out a Register in name of his Brother Thos Briggs I think of Pownall Preasant New York, and shew'd our Officer his instructions from him, for the last outfit. C Gore thinks we had best get some of our friends to make some enquiries of him to find if he has any knowledge or concern in the matter before he shall be inform'd by his brother, as I know not where to apply, I wish thou would take some step to find this.

And should thou gain any necessary knowledge please to communicate it to me, also to Thos. Dawes Junr or C Gore. I hope you will be able to get depositions from some of the hands which will substantiate the Fact.⁵

NEWPORT November 18, 1789.

Dear Sir, . . . I learn that it is a question before the Society, or the committee, Whether any prosecutions shall be commenced against those whose vessels sailed on the slave trade, before the institution of the society; but since the law made in this State took place? It appears to me, and I believe to most of the members in this town, if not all, that if this question should be determined in the negative, the consequence will be very hurtful to the Society, if not fatal. The past neglect to prosecute, and the known hesitation respecting it, has had a great and apparent effect already. The slave traders are more bold and resolute to go on in the trade,² and entertain a low and contemptuous thought of the Society. And if the prosecutions in question should be finally dropped, I am confident it will sink the Society in the view of the public in general, and we shall lose our influence, and the design of the institution will be, in a great measure defeated. I think that lenity, in this case, or any thing that looks like irresolution, neglect and dilatoriness, will fix a slur on the society which cannot easily be wiped off; but will sink it into discredit. . . .

⁵ Rotch wrote in July that two sailors from the Hope had been summoned but that no information could be obtained from them. They were to be committed for contempt of court, and depositions were to be taken to prove Caleb Gardner's residence at the time of the brig's outfit. Gardner must, as a matter of fact, have been a member of the Rhode Island Assembly at about that time. For the further history of this case see post, no. 297.

Mr. Hart informs me that a number of Merchants in Norwich have lately gone into the slave trade. But it is under such cover that he knows not that such evidence of the fact can be obtained, as to afford ground for a legal prosecution. Perhaps time will bring forth evidence.

297. CASE OF THE HOPE, 1792.¹

Gordon vs. Gardner and Others.

. . . The said action was entered at the Court of Common Pleas, at Taunton, in the County of Bristol, in Sept. 1789, and, on account of various objections from time to time made by the defendants to the formalities of the process, was continued to March, 1791, when it was tried.

[296] ¹ Moses Brown Papers, VII. 21.

² While distilling and the slave trade were closely bound together during these years, not everyone concerned in the former was also engaged in the latter: "I presume you have been Acquainted that Francis Malbone is a Candidate for a Representative to Congress—his opponents may endeavor to prejudice the minds of many of the good People of this State against him as being friendly to the Slave Trade. Mr. Malbone since the War has and now is Concerned in a large Distillery and his Circumstances otherways favourable for prosecuting the Affrican Trade, but those leading motives with the addition of that powerfull Argument the prospect of much gain, have not been Sufficient to Induce him to be concerned in the Slave Trade." George Champlin to Moses Brown, Aug. 15, 1792, Moses Brown Papers, VIII. 4.

[297] ¹ Salem Gazette, Jan. 24, 31, 1792. See T. C. Amory, Life of James Sullivan, II. 15-16, and ante, no. 68. Though the case was brought in Massachusetts it concerned a Rhode Island vessel and most of the individuals involved belonged to Rhode Island. It has therefore been placed with Rhode Island material.

Judge Howell, of Providence, President of the Abolition Society, opened the cause, and stated the case: that John Stanton was commander of the brigantine Hope;² and Caleb Gardner an owner: that in the spring of 1788, she was rigged, victualled and manned at Newport; then went to Boston, where she took in her cargo of rum, etc. which said Stanton and Gardner purchased just before at Medford, in person: that she cleared out at Boston for the Cape of Good Hope, but went to Africa, and took on board more than one hundred slaves, besides one born afterwards on the passage: that the said Stanton proceeded with them in said brigantine to the West Indies, performed quarantine for the smallpox, and then sold them for slaves. Judge Howell then read the various depositions in the case, clearly proving all the foregoing facts; and then applied the Act of the Commonwealth, which he said was an honor to Massachusetts, who indeed had in many instances offered an example for freemen:

. . . The Defendants, he said, belonged to his own state; but he knew no distinctions favorable to place, when he was pleading the cause of humanity. . . . It was his opinion, he said, that were they to forfeit the whole sum of 50 l. for each unhappy victim to their avarice, and 200 l. for the vessel employed, it would be but justice according to the law, and infinitely less than they merited on the principle of natural equality. He enlarged on the particulars of the transaction; but said, as he could not tell what the defence would be, and as that defence would be answered by a gentleman engaged with him, who would close the case, he should leave it to a righteous jury of Massachusetts.

Mr. Channing (Att'y-General of Rhode Island) then opened the defence, and said, that he could not controvert the facts of fitting out the vessel for the purposes described in the writ, nor the fact of her really taking the 100 persons from the coast of Africa, and afterwards selling them for slaves in the West-Indies, in manner declared in the writ. One fact, however he should deny, viz. that the defendants were residents of Massachusetts when the crime was committed; and if even it should be found that they were residents, yet if they were not citizens, he should deny the authority of Massachusetts to controul their actions beyond the sea. He thought it hard, very hard, and illiberal, for this Commonwealth, to meddle with the actions or consciences of the people of Rhode island. It was quite enough that they were amenable to the laws of their own State. Rhode island had taken as good care of her citizens' conduct relative to the slave-trade as Massachusetts had—they had a similar Act, and it was almost copied by the one on which the present action was grounded. If Massachusetts were to take this money from his clients, the same thing might afterwards be done by Rhodeisland: For the vessel was fitted as much in the latter state as in the former; and in this way there might be no end to oppression. That a man should suffer only once for an offence was a doctrine he had never heard disputed: But a very different doctrine must be the result of a conviction of his clients in the present action. He was most sanguine, he said, that his defense was on strong and legal grounds. He did not know how the Jury might feel, he was sensible of a great influence against his clients—the action was nominally the action of Gordon, an individual—but it must be evident to all, who were the patrons of the suit—the number of the Society of Friends and of the Abolition Society, that always attended the cause at every term, shew clearly the real Plaintiffs of the action. But his clients were not to be borne down. He inveighed against the constitutionality of the statute; and said, that such an one was never heard of before in any part of the globe. If it meant to controul the actions of a foreigner done in Africa or the West-Indies, because that foreigner once passed through Massachusetts, it was absurd, and so far could not be a law, but a dead letter. He apprehended, however, that the law did not really intend, by the word resident a Rhodeislander, who only touched at Boston to take in or purchase rum and depart; but that the word resident was tantamount to inhabitant; and upon this distinction the law might be better understood and carried into effect; and the inhabitants of each State controuled by their own, and not by a foreign legislation. He conceived, he said, that the same objections would go to the second as well as to the first count in the writ, so far as applied to mere residents; for even in the second count for the 200 l. the charge was not only the fitting out at Boston but the actual transporting slaves out of the jurisdiction of the commonwealth.

Mr. Channing was followed in his defence by Gov. Bradford,³ of Rhode island who on the same side enlarged on the principles before stated. He went particularly into the evidence of his clients' residency at any time in Massachusetts; and dwelt long, with great force, on the danger there might be of a double conviction. He endeavored to demonstrate that however erroneous might have been the conduct of his clients, it would be infinitely better for society, that they should escape the forfeiture, than a doctrine be introduced, subversive of the safety of mankind. This would be doing wrong, that right might take place; this would be establishing the blacks in the present instance, but destroying the rights of both blacks and whites in all cases. He was for the rights of all. The Governor concluded with his usual candor and generosity of pleading and left the case to the jury, who he was sure would intend right in whatever verdict they might give.

Judge Dawes of Boston, then closed the cause for the Plaintiffs. He said it was now near nine o'clock at night, and he should consider the condition of the Court and Jury, who had been so long detained. He did not know what use it could be to the defendants to consider the Abolition Society as the actual Plaintiffs in this prosecution; it was surely not less meritorious on that account and indeed there was less suspicion that the money to be forfeited, was the object of the action. But be that as it may, there was a citizen named in the writ to whom the Law had given the right of action. The wisdom of the Legislature was conspicuous in this circumstance. They knew that what was every one's business was nobody's; And as the principles of humanity might not always be inducement sufficient to bring forward a prosecution; they have set avarice against avarice, and given half the forfeiture to any prosecutor. Though in the present case the plaintiff is not charged with such views, for the defendants say he is only the nominal prosecutor. To establish the Law was the object, not money. To demonstrate this, Mr. Dawes said he should not rely at all on the first count in the declaration which sought the forfeiture of five thousand pounds for the one hundred slaves, and in this he had the support of his client whoever it was. There were two counts: The first alledging that the defendants being only residents and not citizens of Massachusetts, transported slaves from Africa to the West Indies. He should not now consider the question whether the act could or could not controul them, being citizens of another State, for transporting those slaves beyond sea. For he relinquished that first count altogether—the second count in the writ charges those defendants, whilst resident at Boston, with fitting a vessel out for the Slave Trade, by which they forfeit two hundred pounds. On this he should rely, and had not a doubt of success. Much had been said against the merits of the Act. He should leave its merits to other people; as he himself when on the Boston seat, in the Legislation, had, on the request of the Abolition Society, who were now present, introduced the Act, being a copy of the Rhode-Island statute. For this deed he should at least never feel any compunction. As to the power of the Act to controul a Rhode-Islander, whilst at Boston, he thought no man in his senses could doubt. The Act names citizens, inhabitants, residents. The different qualities are clear. The law may punish the first for an act done both at home and abroad, the two last for crimes committed here whilst resident here. A foreigner coming to Taunton, and abiding only a minute or long enough to commit a theft there, is indictable and is called in such indictment, resident at Taunton. Allegiance is twofold, perpetual and temporary. The latter is what a foreigner owes to our laws while he is among us, be the time ever so short, and he owes it in return for the protection he receives at the same time. No lawyer will doubt this. The second count only charges a fitting out at Boston with an intention to transport slaves. It is true the law is careful that nothing shall be admitted as evidence of such intention but the fact of transporting and selling slaves afterwards in the same voyage. Now all this is proved, and the defendants are afterwards found here and prosecuted on the statute for an act they commenced when among us.

In answer to the other objection that the defendants might be in danger of double punishment, because they had fitted out in both States, Judge Dawes said, if this was true, they must thank their own folly for committing the crime twice. But he apprehended no difficulty on this head, because the only place of fitting was the port where the vessel and cargo were cleared out, and that was Boston.

He said the gentlemen who had spoken for the defendants had managed the case with great address, and had taken care to confess the principal facts of buying and selling the negroes in order to foreclose any observation, on the depositions to that point. He did not wonder they wanted to forget those depositions. The fact proved was a scandal to humanity—above a hundred of the human race, forced from their native shores, husbands from wives, parents from children—handcuffed, and fettered, and crammed into a ship's bottom, and what remained of them carried to the West Indies, after performing quarentine for the small pox, and sold for slaves, condemned to sup sorrow all their days one poor woman among the hundred delivered on the passage of a wretched infant, to add new cries to distress—her husband then in Africa, brooding on his family's woes, and imploring the judgment of Almighty God upon the Christians. But, he said, he should not enlarge, the case was one more in the catalogue of the African slave trade, though it was not so bad as one tried at Guild-Hall, in which case it appeared that the master of a ship selected a hundred and thirty-two of the most sickly of his slaves, and had them thrown to the sharks, in order to recover their value from the insurers.

The Hon. Walter Spooner, for the whole Court, then gave the case to the Jury, in a very impartial manner, and the Jury being about to withdraw, one of them stood up and said, I beg your Honor will tell me what is a resident? To which his Honor replied, "Friend, you are a resident here while sitting in that seat."

(The Jury then went out and soon agreed in their verdict, which was delivered into Court next morning, viz. That the Defendants, were indebted, according to the second count, the sum of two hundred pounds. From which the Defendants appealed to the Supreme Court.)

In October, 1791, at the Supreme Judicial Court at Taunton, the said action was heard on the said appeal, when Judge Dawes opened the cause for the Plaintiff, and stated the same evidence that had been heard at the Common Pleas, relying only on the second count in the writ: Mr. Channing and Governor Bradford then defended the action in the same ingenious and able manner as they had done in the Court below; after which the Attorney General of Massachusetts took upon him the close of this action.

The Attorney-General, Mr. Sullivan closed the cause on the part of the Plaintiffs, with as able and as elegant a speech as perhaps was ever heard at the bar of the Supreme Court. We cannot pretend to follow him through the vast variety, which his ingenuity and ardent and prolific imagination led him. Suffice it to say, that he amply refuted the arguments advanced on the other side. We cannot, however, refrain from stating a few ideas thrown out by that great Lawyer—who is an honor to his profession, and deserves the approbation of his country. He maintained, that if the defendants did not gain a residency, agreeably to the true intent and meaning of the statute, by fitting out their vessel at Boston, (the fitting out at Boston not being denied) and the accomplishment of the design intended by the fitting out, it would be in the power of any man to evade the force of the Act. It was very true, he said, that penal statutes ought in general to have a strict and rigid construction, But the statute on which the action in question was founded, very much differed from all other penal statutes so that the arguments adduced by the defendants counsel could not apply in the present case: For said he, an Act which was made to restrain the inordinant lusts of men—to prevent that havock and destruction, which reigns in one part of the globe—ought to have a more liberal construction—such a construction as to answer the purposes of the Legislature. The Jury, he further contended, ought not to be tender in finding the defendants guilty—and subject them to the forfeiture of the sum sued for—since their minds were so hardened against every feeling of humanity and compassion, as to throw hundreds of their fellow men into perpetual bondage and wretchedness; and since too they have made such a vast sum of money by the inhuman traffic.

The Court were unanimously of opinion, that the fitting out of the vessel at Boston, and afterwards proceeding on her voyage and the carrying into execution the original intent, viz. the obtaining of slaves—brought the defendants within the purview of the statute. They said that, as the facts were agreed to—the first question was—What was the design of the Legislature in making the statute? If it was to have the operation as stated by the defendant's counsel, the design of it would be defeated—for foreigners might fit out their vessels among us—our merchants be privately concerned and perhaps reap as much advantage from the barbarous traffic, as if the statute was not in being—and we should not be able to punish them because their being here, and their trading and fitting out their vessels from our ports, would not gain them a residency. Indeed the statute ought to be so construed as to effect the purposes for which it was made. When can a man be said to be a resident? The common acceptance of the word is, that when the place of a man's citizenship is not accurately known—and when he is transiently here and there—so that wherever he is, he may be said to be a resident of that place. This definition of a residency seems to comport with the common acceptance of the term, and is agreeable to the Law.

The Jury found the Defendants guilty and assessed two hundred pounds for the plaintiffs.

After which the Defendants' counsel moved an arrest of judgment, which is to be argued February term, at Boston.⁴

[298] ¹ Newport Mercury of dates given. The fact that a vessel cleared for Africa by no means proves that it was a slaver, but it does place it under suspicion and makes it worth while to observe all further entries relating to it. A thorough search of newspapers for customs entries during the years 1789-1808 would give considerable aid in compiling a list of American vessels engaged in the trade. On Oct. 20, 1796, Zachary Macaulay wrote to Samuel Hopkins: "You will be sorry to learn that during the last year, the number of American slave traders on the coast has increased to an unprecedented degree. Were it not for their pertinacious adherence to that abominable traffic, it would, in consequence of the war, have been almost wholly abolished in our neighborhood." Hopkins, Works, I. 152.

[299] ¹N. Y. Hist. Soc., Slavery MSS., box VI. The loose sheets from which these accounts are taken give no clue as to the dates of the two sales here included. A memorandum on the trade of the Ascension, on paper of 1878, states that between 1795 and 1798 the vessel was owned by Peleg Clark, Caleb Gardner, and William Vernon, and was commanded by Samuel Chace. The vessel cleared for Mozambique in November, 1795 (Newport Mercury, Nov. 3, 1795). The captain bought goods at Rotterdam and the Isle de France with which he purchased 283 slaves at Mozambique. These he sold at Buenos Aires. There is no evidence as to the source of the slaves sold at Havana, nor can it be ascertained whether the Havana sale was later or earlier than that at Montevideo. Captain Chace and his vessel were captured in 1798.

²How this figure was obtained is not evident. Subtracting the charges from the gross sales seems to leave $45266, three per cent. of which is $1357.98. However the maker of the accounts obtained $45325 and $163.70, he continued to use them.

300. JOURNAL OF THE SHIP MARY, 1795-1796.¹

Journal of a Voyage by Gods permission from Providence in the State of Rhode Island; towards Goree in Africa: on the Good Ship

Ship "Mary" at Elmina Taking on bd. Water, June 1796

Friday June 3d. Rainy almost all day so that the Slaves can scarcely come on deck only long enough to clean out their berths. Very little done by the men except tending the Slaves. This morning the Generall of Elmina Fort died, the fort firing mourning guns, etc. displayed their Collours half mast.

Monday June 6th. Empd. tending Slaves Starting Water etc. Recd. from the Ann. Canoe 5 Trips—by our own boat 2 trips. This morning found our women Slave Appartments had been attempted to have been opened by some of the Ships crew, the locks being Spoild and sunderd. Broached a barrel of pk.

Friday June 10th. Commences calm and pleasant. Loos'd Sails to dry etc. We was this morning informd by one of our Slaves that was not confined but on deck as a Sailor, that the Slaves had intentions of taking the Ship, and also advised by him to be on our guard. About 8 A.M. Capt. Henry went on Shore and also advised me to keep a good look out over the Slaves and when they come upon deck to Examine their Irons particularly. I first clear'd the booms of a number of Small Spars etc. took off the Rackings that they might not avail themselves of geting over the Barricade by the booms, also took off a number of bundles of hoops that lay across the boom. Every thing being clear on the Mn. deck, myself, Jacob Folger and John Jones took off the fore greating and Calld them up two by two as they were Ironed and Examined them, found all the legg Irons in good order, but halld about 5 or 6 Irons off they being too large. When they were all up but 6 or 8 I cast my eyes down the Ladder and saw a large strong Slave, with a naked legg Iron bolt in his hand, which I seizd, and endeavord to take from him, with all my strength but he held it in Spight of me, by that I perceivd his intentions were hostile. As they all gathered round us, and gave a loud Shout, at which I retreated for the Barricade door, looking behind me Just as I got to the Door and Saw the same Man Endeavoring to take a billet of wood that was under a pipe of wine for a quoin, by which means I escaped through the door and barrd it (having call'd to the Centinel to fire as soon as I began to Retreat and saw them after Folger and Jones) as soon as the door was bard I mounted the platform aft of the barricade and directly saw one of them in pursuit of Jones with the bott of a legg Iron in his hand, but He nimbly escaped by the boom and the Barricade but Folger was sadly wounded with thier Iron about the head and would have been Murdered had it not been for our muskets (5 of Which was fired Blunderbust) Folger hove himself down the Mn. hatch way by which he escaped.

In the interim about 12 of them came and placed thier backs against the Barricade and the door, as though they had an Intention to force it but, in so awkward a manner I cannot Judge, If that was their intention or not, by brandishing the breeches of our Muskets they retreated forward and Cordially went below (I having orderd the firing to cease almost as soon as I got on the platform). The Portugues Capt. came onboard by this time, with about 20 armd men and others, and we opened the Grating and brought them up half dozen or so at once, and among the whole found 20 or thier about had entirely got their Irons off. They having broke down the bulk head between the Sailors Apartment and themselves and came up throuth the fore Scuttle upon our backs. After all was confined and put below We found thier was Missing two of which was seen to Jump overboard and was presently drown'd, one was Shot dead, and one Sick one trampled to death in the fray and four wounded two of which pretty dangerously. Empd. the Remainder of the day Starting water One trip from the Ann. Canoe 2 trips from our own boat. The Surges on the bar Continue heavy so that it makes passing and repassing difficult. 302. CAPTAIN JEREMIAH DIMAN TO CAPTAIN JAMES

ST. THOMAS, April 1, 1796.

Captain James De Wolf:

This will inform you of my arrival in this port safe, with seventy-eight well slaves. I lost two on my passage. I had sixty-two days

⁵ Occasionally the government glanced toward this trade. On Nov. 16, 1799, Timothy Pickering wrote to John Morton, Esq., who was consul of the United States at Havana: "Your situation will doubtless put it in your power to discover many vessels contravening the laws and in such case be pleased to send on the fullest information respecting them that you can collect." Mass. Hist. Soc., Pickering Papers, 12: 35D.

[302] ¹ W. H. Munro, History of Bristol, Rhode Island (Providence, 1880), pp. 350-351. The original of this letter, which Munro says was "furnished for publication in the Phoenix five or six years ago by the son of the writer," has not been located. Mark Anthony De Wolf of Guadeloupe served as supercargo for Simeon Potter, a Bristol slave captain, and, marrying Potter's sister Abigail, settled in Bristol. James, the most famous of his eight sons, was not the only one to enter upon the slave trade. William, Charles, passage. I received your letter and orders to draw bills on thirty days' sight, but I have agreed to pay in slaves—two men slaves at twenty-eight Joes, and one boy at twenty-five Joes and another at twenty Joes.

I found times very bad on the coast. Prime slaves are one hogshead and thirty gallons of rum or seven Joes gold, and boys one hogshead of rum. I left Captain Isaac Manchester at Anemebue with ninety slaves on board, all well. To-morrow I shall sail for Havana, agreeable to your orders. I shall do the best I can, and without other orders load with molasses and return to Bristol.

303. PROTEST OF THE ORANGE, 1799.¹

Bahama Islands ss.

By this Public Instrument of Protest, Be it known and made manifest; That on this Day being Thursday the fourth Day of April in the Year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and Ninety Nine, Before me Vincent Mathews Notary and Tabellion Public by lawful Authority duly admitted and sworn, residing and dwelling at the Town of Nassaw in the Island of New Providence, personally came and appeared Freeman Mayberry Master, John Bigley and Peter Castloff Mates and Nathaniel Lyndon, Job Austen and James Pollock Seamen of and belonging to the Brigantine Orange of New Port, who being severally and respectively duly sworn, upon the Holy Evangelist of Almighty God, did testify, depose, narrate, and declare respectively, as follows, to wit:

John, and possibly other brothers were at one time or another commanders or owners of slavers. The Sally, William De Wolf, delivered a rum cargo and received a cargo of slaves on the African coast in 1792 (N. Y. Hist. Soc., Slavery MSS., box VI.). In a voyage of 1791, on the passage from Africa to Havana, one of the women of the cargo was stricken with smallpox, whereupon the captain, James De Wolf, was said to have thrown her overboard. A Newport grand jury found a bill of murder against him, but he had already left the state and the matter seems to have been dropped (Salem Gazette, July 5, 1791). Mark Anthony De Wolf Howe quotes a letter of Dec. 22, 1794, from Simeon Potter to James De Wolf in which the writer explains in strict confidence how vessels could be fitted out for the forbidden trade at home rather than in the West Indies (Bristol, pp. 72-73). Howe also relates (pp. 82-83) the story of Samuel Bosworth, the Bristol collector, who attempted to buy in for the government the Lucy and Eliza, condemned for trading in slaves. With the connivance of Charles Collins, commander of the Lucy (which was owned by Charles De Wolf), Bosworth was kidnapped and carried several miles from the scene of the auction. Not long after, Collins became collector of the port (Perry, Charles D'Wolf, pp. 27-28). Many years later James De Wolf became a member of the United States Senate and during his election a newspaper controversy rose over the charge that he had made his fortune in the slave traffic. After his election, but before he took his seat in the Senate, William Smith of South Carolina charged that of the fifty-nine Rhode Island vessels carrying slaves to Charleston between 1800 and 1804 ten had belonged to De Wolf (Annals of Congress, 16 Cong., 2 sess., pp. 72-73). Jeremiah Diman, the writer of the letter, was a nephew of De Wolf, the son of Margaret, one of the seven daughters of Mark Anthony De Wolf, and of Joseph Diman.

That they sailed from the Port of New Port, in Rhode Island, on or about the sixteenth Day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety Eight on a Voyage to the Coast of Africa, for the purpose of purchasing Slaves, and from thence to proceed to the Port of Havana, in the Island of Cuba, That on or about the twenty third Day of January, following, they arrived at Isle De Los, on the Coast aforesaid, where they purchased and took on board one hundred and twenty Slaves, with whom they proceeded on or about the twenty third Day of February following for the aforesaid Port of Havana. That nothing remarkable occurred except the Death of one Slave until the twenty sixth Day of March last past when about ten O'Clock at Night of the same Day the said Brigantine struck upon a Reef about three Miles to the Eastward of Man of War Key—near the Island of Abaca one of the Bahama Islands, That upon first striking, she beat nearly over the Reef and then struck fast whereupon they started seventy Casks of Water, and threw overboard all their wood together with the Camboose, but found no good effect arise from it, in consequence of which, during the night, and the next morning, they landed Eighty Slaves and upwards, after which the Sloop Two Brothers of Abaca aforesaid commanded by David Malone came to their assistance, That the aforesaid David Malone, took on board the said Sloop Thirty nine Slaves, and, carried out two Anchors within the Reef, by which means with the aid of the Crew of the Sloop, they hove the said Brigantine off and proceeded for this Island of New Providence in a very leaky state in company with the said sloop and arrived here yesterday Evening. That having arrived and examined the said Brigantine they find her bilged in several Places her Plank started from the Timbers and one Ball broken, so as to render it impossible to proceed upon their first intended voyage without suffering great loss and delay.²

Whereupon the said Master doth require of me the Notary to protest. I the Notary do therefore at the request aforesaid by these presents for and in behalf of the said Master, and of the Owners, Freighters, Shippers, Insurers and all others concerned in the said Brigantine called the Orange and her Cargo aforesaid, Formally and Solemnly Protest against the said Reef Rocks or Shoal for all Losses, Damages, Costs, Charges and expences, had, born, Suffered and sustained by the said Parties Protesting or any of them for or by reason or on account of the Premises herein before narrated and deposed to, or any of them. Thus done and Protested at Nassaw in the Island of New Providence aforesaid. . . .

Afterwards, to wit upon this Day being Wednesday the seventeenth Day of April aforesaid; the said Freeman Mayberry being further sworn did depose and declare that having further examined the said Brigantine Orange they find, her main mast, main Top gallant Mast, and cross jack yard all Sprung that the Salvage of the said Brigantine and Cargo having been left to be ascertained by Persons mutually chosen hath been awarded at the Sum of one thousand Dollars and hath accordingly been paid out of the Proceeds of the said Brigantine and Cargo. Wherefore I the Notary at the request of the said Master do protest as before.³

NEWPORT June 7 1800.

Mr. Nathaniel Lawrence, We received your favor of 4 Ins and have made enquiry of our officers relative to the Insurance you are desirous of having effected; but they do not incline to write on the risk you mention nothing having been done here on African Vessels and Cargoes since the last Act of Congress² interdicting that trade.

³The claim made against the underwriters by Captain Mayberry was for $3472.72. The brig was valued at $3000, the 120 slaves purchased in Africa, at $120 a head, or $12,000. N. Y. Hist. Soc., Slavery MSS., box VI.

SAMUEL C. TAGGART

May 10, 1800 (Statutes at Large, II. 70-72). At this time the Rhode Island representatives were Christopher G. Champlin and John Brown. Champlin does not seem to have voted upon the bill. Brown not only cast one of the five votes against it but spoke against it as well, in all probability expressing the prevailing feeling among the interested Rhode Island merchants. "Mr. J. Brown said, when the motion was first laid on the table, he thought it improper to prevent the citizens of the United States enjoying the benefits of a trade enjoyed by all the European nations. He really was in hopes that the good sense of the select committee would have permitted them to have seen the policy of realizing the act in question. Many members of the House, he observed, knew how the former act [1794] was passed; they knew that Congress was drilled into it by certain persons who would not take no for an answer. It was well known that the Abolition Society, otherwise the Society of Friends, as they were called, were very troublesome until they got that act passed. It was also well known that those people did not do much to support the Government, but that they did as much as they could to stop the measures of the Government and particularly our defensive system, on which our national security depended. . . . He was certain that this nation having an act against the slave trade did not prevent the exportation of a slave from Africa. He believed we might as well, therefore, enjoy that trade as to leave it wholly to others. It was the law of that country to export those whom they held in slavery—who were as much slaves there as those who were slaves in this country—and with as much right. The very idea of making a law against this trade, which all other nations enjoyed, and which was allowed to be very profitable, was ill policy. He could further say that it was wrong, when considered in a moral point of view, since by the operation of the trade, the very people themselves much bettered their condition. It ought to be a matter of national policy, since it would bring in a good revenue to our Treasury. . . . Mr. B. said our distilleries and manufactories were all lying idle for want of an extended commerce. He had been well informed that on those coasts New England rum was much preferred to the best Jamaica spirits, and would fetch a better price. Why then should it not be sent there, and a profitable return be made? Why should a heavy fine and imprisonment be made the penalty for carrying on a trade so advantageous." Before the Most Noble and Right Honorable the Lords Commissioners of Appeals in Prize Causes.

Ship Ann, Jonathan Dennison, Master.

Robert Honyman, Esq. Commander of His Majesty's Ship Leda, and His Majesty's Procurator General, } Appellants,

Jonathan Dennison, the Master, and Claimant of the Ship and Cargo, as American Property, } Respondent.

Appellants Case*

This Vessel, under American Colours, sailed from Bristol, in the State of Rhode Island, on the 24th of July, 1806, with a Cargo of Rum, Brandy, Gin, Wine, English Goods, etc. cleared out for Cape Coast Castle, where the Vessel arrived in September following, and the Master disposed of Part of the Cargo, and purchased Slaves, and traded up and down the Coast disposing of his cargo, and with the Proceeds purchasing Slaves, at the several Factories; the Vessel sailed from Acra on the 15th November following with Slaves, bound to Monte Video, and was captured in the River La Plata, on the 6th of January, 1807, (the Port of Monte Video being then under Blockade) by His Majesty's Ship of War Leda, Robert Honyman Esq. Commander, in Sight of His Majesty's Ship Daphne and others, and carried to the Cape of Good Hope, where the usual Proceedings were instituted on Behalf of the Captors against the Vessel and Cargo as Prize.

15th June.

A Claim of Jonathan Dennison, the Master, was given for the Vessel and Cargo, as the Property of James D. Wolff, of Bristol, in Rhode Island, a Citizen of the United States of America.

For the privilege of examining these papers and for printing the extracts here used (ante, no. 80, post, no. 312) the editor is indebted to Mr. George Francis Dow, in whose Slave Ships and Slaving (Marine Research Society, Salem, Mass., 1927, pp. 260-265) is an excellent summary of the case of the Ann. Much information is to be found there which is here omitted.

26th August.

The Cause came on for Hearing before the Judge of the Vice-Admiralty Court, at the Cape of Good Hope, when the Claimant's Proctor brought in an Attestation of Jonathan Dennison, with an Exhibit, which the Judge directed to be admitted, and after hearing the Arguments of Counsel, directed the Cause to stand over.

31st August.

The Judge having maturely deliberated, assigned both Parties to exhibit Proof as to the Nature and Extent of the Blockade of Monte Video, and also as to the Nature of the Settlement at Cape Mount,² within Seven Days.

The Affidavit and Exhibit brought in by the Claimant's Proctor on the 26th of August, are as follow.

Affidavit of Jonathan Dennison, the Master, sworn 15th July, 1807, in which he deposes, That the Paper annexed was given by Charles B. Whitehead to Deponent, in case he fell in with a British Cruizer, and that on his being detained by the Leda he gave said Paper Writing or Letter to Captain Honyman, who returned the same to Deponent.

The Paper annexed to this Affidavit is as follows.

BRITISH ACRA, Coast of Africa, 14th Nov. 1806.

These are to certify, that Captain Dennison, of the American Ship Ann, belonging to Rhode Island, and now bound to the River Plate, did the greatest Part of his Business in Africa with L. T. Hebut, Esq. of Lagoe, a British Settlement, and with the Undersigned, also residing at a British Settlement in Africa, and that both L. T. Hebut and the Undersigned, are British Subjects and Natives of England.

Witness my Hand.

Claimants Affidavits

Affidavit of Merrit Bates, late Master of the Juno, then lying in Simon's Bay, sworn 9th September, 1807, in which he deposes, that he has made Three Voyages to Cape Mount, on the Coast of Africa, and that no Factory, except the English, was established there, or on that Part of the Coast.

²From the deposition of Captain Dennison (ans. 27) one learns that the customs officer in Bristol had written Cape Mount in the invoice as the destination of the cargo, and had then altered it to Cape Coast. This may explain the interest of the judge in Cape Mount.

Affidavit of William Bisset, Master of the Experiment, then lying in Table Bay, to the same Effect as the preceeding Affidavit, and sworn on the same Day. . . .⁴

21st Sept. 1807.

The Cause came on for final hearing, when the Judge restored the Ship and Cargo upon Payment of the Captor's Expences.

From this Sentence the Captor's Proctor immediately prayed and was allowed an Appeal, and the Claimant's Proctor also prayed an Appeal from the Payment of Expences.

Both Appeals have been consolidated and assigned for Sentence before your Lordships, and the Evidence in the Cause is as follows:

Preparatory Examinations

[Deposition of Jonathan Dennison, Master.]⁵

To the 3d Interrogatory, That the Ship was taken in the River Plata on the 6th of January last, but for what Reason he is unable to set forth.

4th. That he was Master of the Ship; was appointed to the Command by James DeWolff, Merchant, resident at Bristol, in the State of Rhode Island; that he took Possession of the Ship at Bristol about Three Years since.

7th. That she had a Passport, Sea Brief, and Mediterranean Pass on board, which were obtained from the Custom-House at Bristol by James De Wolf; that her last Voyage began at Bristol, and was to have ended there; that she sailed from thence on the 24th July, 1806, with an assorted Cargo, consisting chiefly of Rum, together with Brandy, Gin, Wine, and English Goods, and India Prize Goods, and 80 Hogsheads of Salt for Ballast,⁶ cleared out for Cape Coast, where the vessel arrived on the 12th of September, where Deponent disposed of Part of the Cargo, and purchased Slaves; that he traded up and down the Coast disposing of his Cargo, and with the Proceeds purchasing Slaves at the several Castles or Territories, and sailed from Acra on the 15th of November following with Slaves obtained on the said Coast, together with Goods therein enumerated, bound to Monte Video.⁷

⁵Dennison deposed that he was born in Providence, R. I., and that he had lived there for the last seven years save when at sea.

⁶The certificate signed by the collector and the surveyor of the port of Bristol stated that the rum was of De Wolf's own manufacture. The outward cargo was valued at $25,754.45.

⁷A considerable portion of the ship's log while on the coast is printed among the papers in the appendix to the brief. The Ann found Captains Drown and Brooks at Anamabo on Oct. 6, and on the 8th she spoke the ship Union of Newport.

9th. That the said James De Wolff was the sole Owner of the said Ship.⁸

11th. That the Slaves were Natives of Africa, called Zanteen [Fanteen] Slaves.

12th. That James De Wolff was the Lader of Part of the Cargo laden on board at Bristol; that Deponent shipped the Slaves, 163 in Number, on the Gold Coast of Africa; that Deponent was the Consignee of the Goods; that the whole of the Cargo was to be delivered at Monte Video, for the real Account, Risk, and Benefit of James De Wolff.

20th. That if the Cargo had arrived at Monte Video, it's destined Port, he should have disposed of the same, as the Consignee, for the real, Account, Risk, and Benefit of the aforesaid James De Wolff.

29th. That the Ship was steering towards Monte Video at the Time she was seized and taken; that her Course was at all Times, when the Weather would permit, directed to the said Port; that her Course was not altered upon the Appearance of the Vessel by which she was taken in the River Plata about Ten or Twelve Miles from Monte Video. . . .

[Deposition of Daniel Shaw, the Mate.]⁹

7th. That her last Voyage began at Bristol, from whence she sailed to the Gold Coast of Africa; that she arrived on the said Coast at Almina, with a Cargo consisting of Rum, etc.; that the Master disposed of the greatest Part of the Cargo on the said Gold Coast of Africa, and with the Produce thereof purchased Slaves; that the Vessel then sailed from Acra, having the remainder of the Cargo undisposed of, and 163 Slaves, bound to Monte Video.

9th. That James De Wolff was the sole Owner of the Ship.

11th. That the Slaves were shipped at different Places on the Gold Coast of Africa, but principally at Acra.

12th. That to the best of his Knowledge and Belief James De Wolff was the Lader of the Goods on board the Ship; and that the Master is the Consignee thereof; and that a Mr. Hohard and a Mr. Whitehead, at Acra, were the Shippers of the Slaves; that the Master was the Consignor thereof; that James De Wolff is the sole Owner of the said Goods and Slaves; that the said Goods and Slaves were to be delivered at Monte Video. . . .¹⁰

*Letter of Instructions, dated 18th July, 1806, from James De Wolf to the Master.*¹¹

You having engaged to go a Voyage to Africa in my Ship Ann, my Instructions are, that you proceed with all possible Dispatch direct to Cape Coast, and make Trade at that Place and its Vicinity, and purchase as many good healthy young Slaves as it may be in your Power to purchase, by bartering away your present Cargo with the Natives; and, after completing your Business in Africa, you will proceed to Monte Video in South America, and there dispose of your Slaves, and purchase a Return Cargo of Ox Hides and dryed Beef, and some Tallow and other Produce of that Country, such as you may judge will pay a handsome Profit; and after completing your Business there, you will return home to this Port with all possible Dispatch. . . .

The Consolidated Appeal now comes on for Hearing; and it is humbly hoped, on the Part of the Appellant, that your Lordships will be pleased to pronounce for the Appeal, reverse the Sentence appealed from, and condemn the Ship and Cargo as Prize to the Captor, and otherwise affirm the Sentence, and condemn the Respondent in the Costs of the Appeal, for the following, among other

REASONS

Because the Vessel, was at the Time of Capture, prosecuting a Voyage to the Colony of the Enemy, in violation of the prohibitory Laws of America for the Abolition of the Slave Trade, and is not therefore within the Provisions of the Order of the 24th of June, 1803.¹²

Because, independent of that prohibitory Law, the Voyage commencing at Elmina, a Dutch Settlement on the Coast of Africa, and destined to Monte Video, was illegal.

Because that Destination was pursued in violation of the Blockade of Monte Video, then existing.

¹² "In consideration of the present state of commerce, we are pleased hereby to direct the commanders of our ships of war and privateers not to seize any neutral vessel which shall be carrying on trade directly between the colonies of enemies, and the neutral country, to which the vessel belongs, and laden with the property of inhabitants of such neutral country: provided, that such neutral vessels shall not be supplying, nor shall have, on the outward voyage, supplied the enemy with any articles contraband of war, and shall not be trading with any blockaded port." American State Papers: Foreign Relations, III. 265.

Case for Hearing on behalf of the Master, the Claimant on both Appeals.

. . . .¹³

From the Sentence of the Court below, the Captors and Claimants have prosecuted their respective Appeals. The usual Proceedings have been had therein in this Court, the Appeals have been assigned for Sentence, and the same now come on for Hearing; and it is humbly hoped, on the Part of the Claimant, that your Lordships will pronounce against the Appeal of the Captors, and affirm the Sentence with Costs, so far as the same restores the Ship and Cargo, and pronounce for the Appeal of the Claimant, and reverse the Sentence, so far as the same rejects the Prayer of the Claimant for Costs and Damages, and subjects the Ship and Cargo to the Payment of Captor's Expences, and to condemn the Captors in Costs and Damages for the following amongst other

REASONS

Because the Ship and Cargo most clearly appeared to belong to the American Citizen for whom they are claimed, and were engaged in lawful Trade, and there was no just Reason, for the Capture and Detention.

312. THE CASE OF THE NANCY, 1807.¹

Before the Most Noble and Right Honourable the Lords Commissioners of Appeals in Prize Causes.

The Schooner Nancy, Joshua Viale, Master.

The said Joshua Viale, the Master and Claimant of the said Schooner, and Sixty-five Slaves laden therein, on Behalf and as the Property of Messrs. Phillips and Gardner, of the City of Charleston, in North America, Merchants, Citizens of the United States } Appellant.

Against

William Selby, Esq. Commander of His Majesty's Ship of War Cerberus, and Lieutenant George Bligh, Commander of the hired armed Schooner Venus, the Captors of the said Ship and Cargo } Respondents.

(On an Appeal from the Vice-Admiralty Court at Tortola.)
Appellant's Case.

This American Schooner, laden with Slaves, and being in Prosecution of a Voyage from Senegal to Charleston, was seized and detained on the 1st Day of November, 1807, by his Majesty's Ship of War Cerberus, William Selby, Esq. Commander, and his Majesty's hired armed Schooner Venus, Lieutenant George Bligh, Commander, and carried to Tortola, where a Libel was filed against the Schooner and Cargo.

A Claim was given by the Master for the Schooner, and sixty-five Slaves, on behalf of John Phillips and John Gardner, of Charleston, Merchants, Citizens of the United States of America.

Preparatory Examinations

Deposition of Joseph Viale, the Master.²

To the Third Interrogatory this Deponent saith, That the Capture was made about five Leagues to the Northward of St. Thomas's, on Sunday last, the First Day of the present Month, as he believes; does not know upon what Pretence it was done; that he was in Distress, and asked for Assistance from the Tender he fell in with; that all his Hands, as also himself, were sick, except two; that one of them died; that the Tender put an Officer and five Men on board, and ordered the Schooner for Tortola, where she was conducted, and arrived on the Monday Evening following; she sailed under American Colours, and had none others on board.

4. That he was appointed to the Command by Phillips and Gardner, of Charleston; that he first took Possession of her at Rhode Island, in the Month of October of last Year; John Davis, of that Place, the then Owner, delivered him the Possession; that Phillips and Gardner afterwards bought the said Schooner, in the Month of June last, and continued Deponent in the Possession.³

6. That neither himself nor any of the Officers or Mariners have any Share or Interest in the Schooner or her Cargo; that Manuel Joseph, one of the Crew, owns two Boy Slaves as his Privilege, and William, one other of the Crew (does not recollect his Sur-Name), owns a Man Slave as his Privilege also.

7. That she was built in Pennsylvania; she sailed from Charleston, on the present Voyage, the 1st Day of June last, or thereabouts, ² Captain Viall (Viale) testified that he was born at Warren, R. I., that he had lived there six years out of the preceding seven and one year in Charleston, and that he considered Rhode Island his home. The Nancy was 106 tons burden, and was navigated by nine sailors. It was valued at $4000 but had been purchased by the present owners for $2000. The complete statements of the deponents are given in the appendix to the brief.

laden with Provisions and some Lumber,⁴ to the Amount of about 4000 Dollars, and he had also besides 6000 Dollars in Cash; cleared out for Africa; that he arrived at Senegal about the 1st Day of August following; he there sold the Lumber and Provisions, and with the Proceeds and the Cash he carried, purchased to the Number of about eighty Slaves as the Cargo; that they averaged as near as he can judge, about 125 Dollars a-piece; that Manuel Joseph and William purchased the three privileged Slaves above-mentioned, out of Money they carried, and with their Wages Deponent advanced them; that they took their Departure from Senegal on the 30th Day of September last, bound back to the Port of Charleston, where the Voyage commenced, and was to have ended; that the Slaves have several Times risen on the Crew, with an Attempt to take the Vessel; that to the Number of about three have been killed in subduing them, and one besides jumped over board; four died of Sickness, about that Number at present sick; that about ten Days after they sailed from Senegal his Crew began to be sick, so much so as to prevent their proceeding for their destined Port, he therefore bore away for the West Indies, with a Determination of going to the first Port most convenient to make; that on Friday, the 30th Day of October, they discovered the high Lands of Spanish Town, and bore away for the first Port; that St. Thomas being the most convenient, he intended to have gone in there at the Time of the Capture; that he there meant to have taken in other Hands, to enable him to proceed on his Voyage to Charleston; that Deponent has made one other Voyage, besides the present, in the said Schooner, when she was owned by John Davis, of Rhode Island; it commenced there in the Month of October of last Year, laden with Lumber and Provisions, to the Amount of about 7000 Dollars, including Rum and Tobacco, which also composed the said Cargo; that he went with the same to Senegal, where he sold, and purchased about fifty Slaves, in return for the said Cargo; that when he went out he had verbal Orders from Mr. Davis to proceed to Charleston with the Slaves from Senegal; that he accordingly did so, and on his Arrival at Charleston, finding no Orders there from ⁴ In Captain Viall's attestation in support of claim on the appeal he stated that the outward cargo consisted of "1200 Feet of Lumber, 12 Casks of Rice, 14 Barrels of Flour, 10 Barrels of Beef, 40 Barrels of Bread, 12 Boxes Spermaceti Candles, 4 Hogsheads of Rum, 12 Barrels of Sugar, 10 Barrels of Molasses, 4 Kegs Butter, 10 Boxes Claret, 40 Boxes Herrings, 6 Half Barrels Crackers, 1 Hogshead of Hams, 50 Boxes Segars, 12 Barrels Loaf Sugar, and 2 Bales of Dry Goods, and also 6000 Dollars in Specie." The bill of lading corrects certain of his items: 11,286 feet of lumber, 20 barrels rice, 15 barrels flour, 5 barrels pork, 12 barrels molasses, 40 hams, 14 barrels loaf sugar, 10 barrels brown sugar, 1 crate ware, 40 reams paper, 5 quarter chests hyson tea, 12 boxes claret wine, 4 ditto fruits in brandy, 1 hhd. cod fish, 6 kegs Dutch butter, 2 boxes containing 200 dozen handkerchiefs, 54 strings of beads, 76 barrels of bread, 8 half barrels crackers, 20 barrels beef, 4 hhds. rum, 44 boxes herring, 3 barrels sugar.

the said Owner, he consigned himself to Phillips and Gardner, who sold about thirty of the Slaves; that afterwards the said Davis wrote to him from Rhode Island, that he was to consign himself to Christian and De Wolfe,⁵ Merchants at Charleston; that he accordingly applied to them, and they sold the Remainder of the said Slaves; that the said Davis also wrote to them, advising them thereof; that Davis, in the said letter to Christian and De Wolfe, authorized them to sell the said Schooner, and wrote also to advise Deponent of the same; that they accordingly sold her, and Phillips and Gardner became the Purchasers; that the above are the only Voyages he has been upon in the present Vessel; that the said Schooner is at present under the Direction and Management of Phillips and Gardner, her now Owners, as to her Employment in Trade; he has never as yet corresponded with them on the Concerns of the said Vessel, or her Cargo, or with any other Person.

8. That the outward Lading consisted of Flour, Hams, Beef, Bread, Lumber, and a few trifling Articles of Dry Goods, as also 6000 Dollars in Cash; and that the present Lading consisted of sixty-five or seventy Slaves, including three privileged ones; that he forgot before to mention that the Mate had also a Girl Slave, as Privilege, which he purchased with his own Money he carried out; believes he bought her for sixty or seventy Dollars; that the said Slaves were taken on board from about the 1st of September, to the last Day of the said Month.

9. That John Phillips and John Gardner were the sole Owners of the Schooner when taken; he knows them to be the Owners from their purchasing her of Christian and De Wolfe, who were authorized by John Davis, the former Owner, to sell her; that the said Owners are Americans by birth, born in the State of Rhode Island, where they always lived, till about five or six Years ago, they removed to Charleston, South Carolina, where they have since lived and carried on Business as Merchants; that the said Owners are Citizens of the United States.

10. That Christian and De Wolfe, as the Agents of John Davis, made the present Bill of Sale to the said Phillips and Gardner, of the Schooner; believes it is dated some Time in May last; it was made at Charleston; believes it to be in Possession of the said Phillips and Gardner.

12. That Deponent was the Lader of the Cargo, and Phillips and Gardner above named, are the sole Owners and Consignees of the same, and it was to be delivered at Charleston on their real Account,

Risk, and Benefit; that he had no Orders from them, or any other Person, to proceed to any other Port;⁶ that he has no Interest whatever in the said Cargo; that he does take upon himself to swear that at the Time of the lading the present Cargo, now, and if it shall be restored and unladen at the destined Port of Charleston aforesaid, it does and will belong to the said Phillips and Gardner, and to no other; that the said Cargo is the Returns of the Goods and Money carried out shipped and owned by them; that Deponent is to derive a Commission of 10 per Cent. on the Sale of the Slaves at Charleston, in lieu of every Thing else.

13. That no Bills of Lading were signed for the present Cargo.⁷

20. That in case the said Schooner had arrived at her destined Port of Charlston, and the Cargo been there unladen, it would have remained the Property of the said Phillips and Gardner until sold; they were to have taken the Chance of the Market for the Sale of the said Slaves.

26. That there was one Passenger, [h]is Sirname is Bartholomew; believes him to be an American; knows not his Rank, Profession, or Occupation, or if he had any Commission; he came on board at Senegal somewhere about the latter End of September last; he went out there from Charleston in an American Vessel, and he was on his return to Charleston; knows not his Business; he has two Slaves, one Male and a Female, on Freight, which he includes in the Number mentioned; he has no Property or Concern in the Vessel or the Rest of the Slaves.

29. That the said Schooner after leaving Senegal, steered her Course for Charleston, until about 10 Days ago he ran down his Latitude for the West India Islands; that from Senegal he steered West when the Winds would permit; that they were light and variable till he got to the Cape de Verde Islands, when he got into the Trades, and sometimes steered West and by North, and West and by South, and steered much the same Course when he made Spanish Town; her Course was not altered upon the Appearance of the Man of War's Tender, it was at all Times directed for Charleston when the Wind and Weather would permit, until he altered it for the West India Islands to make the first Port he could to procure fresh and able

⁶The letter of instructions contains the following: "on your Arrival at Africa you will endeavour to dispose of your Cargo on the best possible Terms and vest the Proceeds in such Articles as will best suit this Market, and return with all possible Dispatch to this Port; you will be particularly mindful to leave the Coast timely (allowing double Passage) to arrive at this Port previous to the 31st December next."

⁷The slaves had all been taken on board at Senegal during the months of August and September. The captain also testified that insurance had been placed on vessel and cargo, at Charleston, from Charleston to Africa, and back to Charleston, to be void after Dec. 31, 1807. He did not know the premium.

Hands to enable him to proceed to his destined Port of Charleston aforesaid.

N.B. The Master having been ill while under Examination on the standing Interrogatories, made an Affidavit to the following Effect the Day after his Examination, to correct his Deposition, viz.

That he was yesterday examined on the standing Interrogatories; that he then was, is, and for some Time past has been in a bad State of Health, and at Times very imperfect in his Recollection; that considering what passed on his said Examination, he is apprehensive that he stated the Cargo of Slaves on board the said Vessel, with the Exception of some few priviledged Slaves, to have been the Property of Phillips and Gardner of Charleston; whereas the Fact is, that 10 were shipped by one La Coste a Frenchman, on Freight at 40 Dollars a Head to be sold for the Account of the said La Coste, and the Proceeds to remain for him with the said Phillips and Gardner; that one of the said Slaves on Freight jumped overboard, having rose, with others, on the White Crew of the said Vessel, and was drowned; that the other nine are still on board forming Part of the Cargo, and were originally marked with a bit of Lead round their Necks, which the Deponent apprehends may have been removed; that he can however notwithstanding from Recollection still point the surviving nine Slaves out; that Deponent thinks it his Duty to come forward to give the present Explanation to prevent Inconvenience as far as he can to the Parties actually interested in the Residue of the said Cargo.

Deposition of Thomas Bartholomew, a Passenger

To the First Interrogatory, That he was born near the City of Lyons in France; he has lived in New York, and Charleston, South Carolina, for the last seven Years; That Charleston is now his Home when not at Sea; that he has lived in the United States of America since the Year 1789; that he now considers himself a Citizen of the United States; was admitted a Citizen thereof, at a District Court held at New York in the Year 1803-4; that he has resided in New York and Charleston ever since he became a Citizen of the said States, except when he has been absent from Charleston on Voyages, sometimes as Master, and at other Times as Part Owner of Cargoes to the West India Islands, that is to say, to the English and Neutral Port, and once to the Havannah, and on the present Voyage to Senegal.

6. Deponent owns two Slaves, one a Boy named Abil, and another a Girl named Pindar; that these are on Freight, that the Chief Mate he heard from himself, owned a little Girl Slave as Privilege, he gave 75 or 80 Dollars for her at Senegal; that Manuel one of the Portuguese, he also understood, owned two Slaves, both Boys, one named Sambo, and the other Frank, heard him say that he gave 120 Dollars for Sambo, and 60 for the other; heard the said Manuel say, that he carried out Money with him from Charleston; Deponent also heard one other of the Crew, Bill, say, that he owned a Man Slave between himself and another Sailor.

7. That he believes the present Voyage commenced at Charleston in the Month of June last, laden with a Cargo of Lumber and Provisions bound to Senegal, cleared out for Africa; that she arrived at Senegal some Time in the Beginning of August following; that the Master there disposed of the Cargo; and with the Proceeds, and 6000 Dollars in Cash, he heard him say he carried out, purchased 60 odd Slaves on Account of the Owners of the said Vessel, although he only entered and paid the Duties at Senegal on 4000 Dollars; that there were 10 Slaves, besides the Cargo, on Board on Freight, and besides those belonging to himself and the Crew above-mentioned; that those ten were shipped by one Louis Coste, a White Person resident at Senegal, consigned to Phillips and Gardner at Charleston, on his Account for Sale, as he knows no other Person to consign them to; that the said Vessel took her Departure from the River of Senegal on the 29th Day of September last, bound back to the Port of Charleston where the Voyage commenced, and was to have ended; that four or five Days after the Voyage commenced, as the Slaves were all together messing one Day, the Males and Females apart, the Males who were forward, one of them seized the Master as he was pouring Molasses into his Victuals, that most of the other Males then rose, some of whom seized him; that the Master and Crew then drove them below with small Arms, one of the ten on Freight jumped overboard, and a few of the said Slaves got slightly wounded; that an old Woman died at Sea from Sickness, and two Slaves in the River Senegal, before they left it; that they also lost one of the Crew of the said Vessel at Sea, who had been in ill Health; that he frequently on the Passage heard the Master and Crew say, they were apprehensive the Slaves would break out; that a few Days after the said Slaves rose in the Manner abovementioned, the two Mates and two of the Seamen fell sick of Fevers on different Days; that he then heard the Master say, in consequence of his Crew becoming sick, and being apprehensive of the Slaves rising, that he should bear away for the West Indies for the first Neutral Port, whether St. Thomas or St. Bartholomews, which ever he could most conveniently make; that a few Nights before they discovered Land, he heard the Report of a Pistol, and found it was one of the Crew on Watch, who had fired the Pistol; that he did so, he told the Deponent, imagining that the Slaves were about to rise; that the next Morning one of the Male Slaves was taken from below dead, and thrown overboard, who had been shot by the Pistol which had been fired off; that the same Man stabbed another of the Slaves the following Night, supposing that they were again going to break out; that on Saturday last the 31st Day of October, about Twelve of the Clock at Noon they discovered Anegada, and the high Land of Spanish Town, when they steered away for Saint Thomas, which Port they were bound to when taken, for the Purpose of procuring able Hands to navigate the Vessel to Charleston, her destined Port; that he has understood from the Master that the Schooner has made one other Voyage, besides the present, to Senegal; that she went out from Rhode Island to that Place, laden with Provisions and Dry Goods, and at Senegal took on board about sixty or seventy Slaves, which he carried to Charleston, where they were sold by Phillips and Gardner, on Account of Davis, of Rhode Island; that the said Master also informed Deponent, that Davis then interested Phillips and Gardner in the present Voyage, in both Vessel and Cargo, and, as he understood, in a Moiety with Davis; that much about the Time the present Vessel left Charleston, Davis dispatched a Pilot Boat Schooner from Rhode Island, for Senegal, on a similar Voyage, on Account of himself and the said Phillips and Gardner; that the Pilot Boat Schooner arrived at Senegal before the present Vessel did, and left it with the said Schooner bound also to Charleston, but they parted from one another the same Day they sailed, on Account of the Pilot Boat outsailing the said Schooner; that the said Schooner is under the Direction and Management of Phillips and Gardner, of Charleston, and Davis of Rhode Island, as to her Employment in Trade.

9. That he believes Phillips and Gardner and Davis to be Owners of the said Vessel; he founds his Belief from what he heard the Master say, and the Master also of the Pilot Boat Schooner.

12. That the Master was the Lader of the Slaves termed Cargo; Phillips and Gardner and Davis above-named, he believes to be the Owners and Consignees of the same; Louis Coste was the Lader of the 10 Slaves on Freight, and also Owner of the same; that they were consigned to the said Phillips and Gardner for Sale, on his Account; that the said Coste is a Frenchman, residing at Senegal; that the Deponent is the Lader and Owner of his two on Freight also, and consigned to himself; that the Mate and Mariners are the Laders, Owners, and Consignees of the four Slaves, their Property; that the said Slaves were to be delivered at Charleston, on the real Account, Risk, and Benefit of the several Owners above-named; that the Master has no Interest in the Slaves shipped by him on Account of Phillips and Gardner and Davis, besides a Commission of 10 per Cent. he is to derive on the Sale at Charleston; Deponent does take upon himself to swear, that at the Time of the lading the said Slaves, now, and if they shall be restored and unladen at their destined Port of Charleston, they did, do, and will belong to the same Persons above-mentioned, and to none others; that he founds his Knowledge of the above Circumstances from what he heard the Master of the present Vessel say, as well as the Master of the Pilot-boat Schooner.

. . . .
The Appeal having been proceeded in, now comes on for Hearing; and it is humbly hoped, on the Part of the Respondents, that your Lordships will be pleased to pronounce against the Appeal and affirm the Sentence appealed from, with Costs, for the following, among other

REASONS.

1st. Because the Vessel was, at the Time of the Capture, prosecuting a Voyage from the French Colony of Senegal, on the Coast of Africa, with a Cargo of Negro Slaves, ostensibly bound to Charleston, but in Fact to the Havannah, or some other Port in the West Indies, then hostile to Great Britain, contrary to the Belligerent Rights of this Country.

2d. Because the said Trade was and is contrary to the prohibitory Laws of the United States of America, by which Laws the Claimants are precluded from setting up any Right of Property in the said Slaves, and the Vessel was subject to Confiscation. Admitting that the prohibitory Laws of a foreign Country are not directly to be enforced by a Court of Prize, yet the Subjects of a Neutral Power, when trading contrary to such Laws, cannot claim the Benefit of such Relaxations of His Majesty's Belligerent Rights, in respect of their Commerce with the Enemy, as were conceded to Neutral Powers, from a friendly Consideration of their Interests in Branches of Commerce which they desired to retain and protect. Independently therefore of the Fact that both Terms of this Voyage were hostile Ports, and supposing One of them only to have been a hostile Colony, the Vessel and Cargo were liable to Condemnation.

⁸ Much of the above information was repeated in the deposition of the second mate, Nathaniel Wheaton, a native of Massachusetts.

⁹ The cause was heard in the vice admiralty court of Tortola on Nov. 27, 1807, when the judge condemned the schooner to the captors and the slaves to his Majesty. From the condemnation of the schooner and 65 of the slaves an appeal was entered, on the ground that these were the property of American citizens.

3dly. Because the Natives of Africa, composing this Cargo, were condemned to His Majesty, pursuant to the Act of Parliament made for abolishing the Slave Trade, only for the Purpose of restoring them to their Freedom, to which they have been accordingly restored; and your Lordships, if you reverse the Sentence of Condemnation, must restore them to a State of unlawful Imprisonment and Slavery; and this at the Instance of a Person who cannot even receive them and carry them to any Part of the World without a new Violation of the Laws of his Country; and who, by those Laws, is expressly precluded from all Property therein. It is further submitted, that the said Africans cannot be lawfully either exported from a British Colony, or held in Slavery there.

4th. Because the Transaction was fraudulently conducted, and the Master now admits that Nine out of the Seventy Slaves included in the Sentence of Condemnation, were French Property, although he had concealed that Fact both in the Papers and in his Deposition in Preparatory. It is submitted, that this Fact not only destroys the Credit of the Master, but renders it quite impossible that any Part of this Cargo should be restored; for, though he pretended, in an Affidavit irregularly introduced, and which is clearly inadmissible in Evidence that he knew how to distinguish those Nine Slaves from the rest, he admitted that they were not distinguished by any Mark, nor could be identified by any other Means than his own discredited Testimony; nor is it now by any Means possible that such Identification can be made. Your Lordships therefore are desired by the Appellant to decree, that out of Seventy human Beings, all at present in a State of Freedom, and Nine of whom are admitted to be lawfully entitled to be free, Sixty-one shall be given up to perpetual Slavery, although, from the Fault and Fraud of the Appellant himself it is impossible to distinguish the Nine free Persons from the rest, and it must therefore almost unavoidably happen, that some or all of them must, in the Execution of that Decree, be the Victims of a wrong Selection.¹⁰

THE MIDDLE COLONIES

INTRODUCTION

No attempt has been made to carry the documentation of the slave trade of the Middle Colonies to such detail as that of New England. Their importation of negroes was slight in comparison with that of the colonies to the south of them, and their carrying trade but a small part of their general commerce, by no means comparable to that of the northern colonies. Two subjects not elsewhere presented are illustrated by the documents pertaining to New York—the trade of the Dutch to the Continental colonies and the Madagascar slave trade. In other respects the history of the slave trade of these colonies is much the same as that to the north, on a greatly reduced scale.

The first negroes to gain a place in the records of the colony of New Netherland were not brought from Africa but were probably taken from Spanish or Portuguese prizes. Such names as Paul d'Angola, Simon Congo, Antony Portuguese, John Francisco testify to Portuguese origin. These negroes were brought into New Amsterdam about 1625 or 1626, four or five years after the establishment of the Dutch West India Company.¹

The various freedoms and exemptions projected by that company contained promises to supply the colony with slaves, but the promises were not observed in a manner that satisfied the patroons. The instructions to the Director General and Council of New Netherland for July 26, 1646, provided that, "for the promotion of agriculture there, it is deemed proper to permit, at the request of the patroons, colonists, and other farmers, the conveyance thither of as many negroes as they are willing to purchase at a fair price; and the Director and Council shall notify the Assembly hereof, every year, when further order shall be taken regarding the transport of negroes thither".²

¹ E. B. O'Callaghan, ed., Voyages of the Slavers "St. John" and "Arms of Amsterdam," 1659, 1663 (N. Y. Col. Tracts, no. 111), p. xiii. In 1644 Director General Kieft gave liberty to those slaves that had served the company for eighteen or nineteen years. The company must therefore have obtained slaves for its own use as early as 1626, even if it was not yet selling slaves to the colonists. In 1628 the Rev. Jonas Michaelius, complaining of the servants in the new colony, remarked that the Angola slaves were "thievish, lazy, and useless trash". J. F. Jameson, ed., Narratives of New Netherland, p. 129.

Sporadic attempts to carry out such plans as these the Amsterdam chamber of the West India Company certainly made, as the papers hereafter printed demonstrate, but without great success. Trade direct from Africa by the Company itself or by others licensed by the company was occasionally tried but was not the usual method of supply. The most thriving slave trade at this time was probably that of Brazil, and in 1644 it was suggested that the colonists be allowed to send their food stuffs to Brazil and carry away negroes (doc. no. 316). Permission to do this was granted in 1648, but already the revolt of the Portuguese against Dutch rule in Brazil had begun and the Dutch were before long driven from that colony. In the same year (1648) the Amsterdam chamber notified Stuyvesant that under certain restrictions the colony might trade to Angola, but little use seems to have been made of this permission (no. 317).

The directors also fostered or attempted to foster a slave trade from Curaçao to New Netherland. By 1661 they conceived that New Netherland might be used as a base from which to carry on a slave trade with the English in neighboring colonies, but they had little time in which to execute this design.

As one incident in what was in large part a struggle between Dutch and English for the control of the slave trade, the colony changed owners in 1664, and though her new owners were left, at the close of the Anglo-Dutch War, firmly established on the Guinea coast the English trading company was greatly weakened. The new and stronger company of 1672 was too engrossed in supplying the wants of the more inviting West India markets to provide many laborers for the northern colony. Meanwhile, toward the end of the century, New York found an alternative method of supplying her own needs by a trade in negroes, as well as in other commodities, with the pirates who infested the East India route and had their headquarters at Madagascar. How many of these Madagascar negroes were brought into the colony can never be known with certainty, since importers were scarcely in a position to make legal entry. Of the direct trade of the colony with Guinea Lord Cornbury wrote to the Board of Trade in 1708: "sometimes we have a vessell or two, that goe to the Coast of Guinea, and bring negros from thence but they seldom come into this place, but rather goe to Virginia, or Maryland, where they find a much better market for their negros than they can doe here."³ The extensive report of the Board of Trade in 1709 gives little clue to the New York demand for negroes, since it is combined with that of Carolina.

Legislation though frequent probably affected this demand but slightly. New York, in common with most of the colonies, discriminated in favor of negroes brought directly from Africa. In 1709 a duty of £3 was laid on negroes from any other place. In 1716 an act placing a duty on all vessels trading into the colony refers to a duty on imported slaves. On July 7, 1718, Governor Hunter wrote to the Lords of Trade: "I never heard of any Negroes imported directly from Africa in Vessels belonging to Great Britain, and the duties laid on Negroes from the other Colonies are intended to encourage their own shipping and discourage the importing their refuse and sickly Negroes here from other Colonies which they commonly do."⁴ A duty of £2 on negroes brought directly from Africa and £4 on all others was imposed in 1728. This brought forth protest from the Board of Trade but was allowed to stand, and was continued in 1734. In 1753 a duty of 5 and 10 ounces plate was continued or re-enacted and was apparently maintained up to the period of the Revolution. Importation was unequivocally forbidden in 1788.⁵ This prohibition was modified in 1801 by allowing bona fide owners of slaves, coming into the state with intent to settle, to bring their negroes with them. Neither act forbade to citizens of the state participation in the slave trade to other places. At the end of the century New York merchants were sharing in that trade to a considerable extent and it is possible that the most important period in the history of the New York carrying trade lies outside the limits of this work.

The presence of negroes in New Jersey in the seventeenth century is made certain by legislation concerning them as early as 1683.⁶ There is also a record of a dispute between the collector of the port and a master just returned from Madagascar with negroes. The

In 1709 Governor Hunter was instructed to protect the interests of the African Company in the colony and to report the amount of importation of negroes (ibid., p. 136). When the Duke of Chandos attempted to revive the fortunes of the African Company he wrote asking whether there would be "Encouragement for the African Company to trade to these plantations." ⁵ Du Bois, Suppression of the Slave Trade, pp. 205, 210, 213, 214, 217. A somewhat cursory examination of the newspapers displays a growing sentiment against the trade and slavery itself during the years following the Revolution. The New York Packet printed the Pennsylvania act for the abolition of slavery, the constitution of the Society for the Promotion of the Manumission of Slaves, and an occasional letter in favor of the abolition of the trade (Jan. 24, Feb. 21, Mar. 31, 1785). The act here referred to however did not forbid slavery in New York nor the carrying of slaves by the citizens of the state. Slaves were still being advertised for sale in the papers of 1792. An account of the slave trade into New York is to be found in A. J. Northrup's Slavery in New York (New York State Library Bulletin, History No. 4), pp. 246 ff.

master, fearful that if he took his cargo into New York it would be seized, entered the negroes in Perth Amboy and sold them in New Jersey.⁷ The amount of negro importation in the next twenty-five years was not sufficient to make record keeping necessary. In 1709 Governor Lord Lovelace wrote to the Commissioners for Trade: "Your Lordships' directions relating to the accounts of the numbers of the negroes imported from Africa for severall years past I am afraid cannot be complied with."⁸

The first duty was laid in 1713, after some friction between assembly and council over its terms.⁹ That it was not prohibitive is shown by the report of importations from 1718 to 1726 (no. 370). Attempts to lay a duty in 1739 and in 1744 were blocked by the council, but the assembly met with success in 1762.¹⁰ In 1769 a prohibitive duty of £15 was imposed, and final prohibition was accomplished in 1786 by emancipation of negroes within the state and by a duty of £50 on all importation of negroes who had been brought from Africa since 1776. On March 14, 1798, it was provided that any vessel fitted out for the slave trade within New Jersey was forfeited and any further part taken by citizens of New Jersey in the slave trade thus became unlawful.¹¹ If New Jersey citizens entered into the illicit trade to any extent they probably did so from the port of New York.

The number of slaves in the colony was never large. In 1738 there were 3981 slaves in a population of 47,369, in 1745, 4606 in a total of 61,403, and in 1770, 11,423 in 169,954.¹²

Though negroes were to be found in the territory which later became Pennsylvania as early as 1638 and continued to be imported until 1768 or 1769, the number was always small. The fact that in spite of a more favorable climate this colony had a smaller black population than either New Jersey or New York may be a result of the strong Quaker influence which prevailed there throughout a large part of the eighteenth century. Much of the history of slavery in Pennsylvania has been written in terms of the abolition movement sponsored by the Quakers, and the fact that Philadelphia merchants were engaged in bringing negroes into the province and in carrying them to other markets is frequently overlooked.¹³ Two periods of active importation can be discerned, one about 1730, just after the reduction of the duty from £5 to £2, the other at the close of the 'fifties, brought to an end by the duty act of 1761, which increased the impost to £10.

The first duty was 20 s., imposed in 1700, possibly because by that time merchants were bringing from the West Indies, by ones and twos, a sufficient number of negroes to yield a slight revenue. This duty was doubled in acts of 1705 and 1710 without comment from England, but in 1712, actuated by fear of insurrection similar to that which New York had experienced, the assembly raised the duty to £20, a sum which was of course intended to be prohibitive. This act the Commissioners for Trade and Plantations annulled, and the assembly reverted to £5, a restrictive though not a prohibitive amount. The law of 1715 laying a £5 duty was disallowed in England in 1719; but a new act had already been passed by the colonial legislature in 1718. In 1726 the colony ventured to increase the duty to £10.¹⁴ A petition presented to the general assembly in 1722 on behalf of day laborers who were injured by the use of negro labor may have had some influence in the sentiment for a duty.

The act of 1726 may actually have lessened the supply of incoming negroes, or the employers of labor may have feared that it might do so. For one reason or the other, not long after its passage the iron-masters of Pennsylvania petitioned for abolition of all duty because of scarcity of labor.¹⁵ While the legislature did not go as far as that, the duty was reduced to £2. For a short time the supply seems to have responded to this, but the stimulus to importation did not long continue to bring in negroes and by 1750 few were being sold. The end of the decade however witnessed a revival in the trade so marked as to alarm the assembly, which laid a duty intended to be prohibitive.¹⁶ This was continued until 1773, when it was increased by £10. Slavery was abolished in Pennsylvania by an act of 1780, and participation in the slave trade was prohibited on February 3, 1789. Philadelphia's share in the trade to other markets can be surmised only by the occasional references to Pennsylvania vessels on the West Coast, in the West Indies, or spoken by some passing ship which reports its encounters at the nearest port.¹⁷

Were this a history of the abolition movement, Pennsylvania would furnish a large body of material. From the protest against the trade by the Germantown Friends in 1688 to its outlawing by legislation in 1807 the influence of such men as Anthony Benezet, John Woolman, Benjamin Lay, and Ralph Sandiman can scarcely be overestimated. Their story is not to be told here, but their work must be remembered if one is to understand why the slave trade was so small a part of Philadelphia commerce.

Monday, 20 January, 1648.

Again the seventh section of the Management is taken into consideration, and it is resolved that private inhabitants of New Netherland shall be allowed to export their country produce under suitable duty, in their own or chartered ships, to Brazil and Angola, on these following conditions: first, that the aforesaid ships, when in Brazil, shall not be at liberty to return back with sugars to New Netherland aforesaid, but shall let themselves be chartered directly hither. Secondly, that the permit to proceed to Angola above mentioned, shall only be provisionally granted, and that for the time that the dispensation shall continue in regard to the exportation of slaves, which was accorded on Thursday last. Thirdly, that those willing to go to Angola, shall, previous to their departure from New Netherland, take out commission and permit from here, and also give security, similar to all other persons trading from this country. Mr. Mortamer alone requested, that before the passing of this resolution, he may communicate its contents to his Chamber, and learn their opinion thereon.²

body of the West India Company, made up from all the chambers. Instructions to the director issued in 1646 advised admitting as many negroes as were requested and would be paid for by the colonists (ibid., p. 162). A sentence in a letter from the directors at Amsterdam to Director Stuyvesant implies some importation from Brazil in or before 1646: "Having observed that more negroes could be profitably traded off there than were carried thither in the ship Tamandare, we shall pay attention that for the future more negroes shall be conveyed thither" (O'Callaghan, Voyages of the Slavers "St. John" and "Arms of Amsterdam," p. 99). The supposition that these slaves came from Brazil is based upon the very slight evidence afforded by the name Tamandare, which is that of a bay on the coast of Brazil. They were the slaves whose sale was later complained of by the people of New Netherland: "Even the negroes which were obtained with Tamanderé were sold for pork and peas: something wonderful was to be performed with this but they just dripped through the fingers." N. Y. Col. Docs., I. 302.

[317] ¹*N. Y. Col. Docs.*, I. 215. The advice of the chamber of accounts of the West India Company, drawn up Apr. 19, 1647, delivered to the company on May 27, 1647, and incorporated in the "Report on the Affairs of the West India Company" of January, 1648, suggested that direct trade between New Netherland and Brazil would cause the former, "by slave labor [to] be more extensively cultivated than it has hitherto been, because the agricultural laborers, who are conveyed thither at great expence to the colonists, sooner or later apply themselves to trade, and neglect agriculture altogether. Slaves, on the other hand, being brought and maintained there at a cheap rate, various other descriptions of produce would be raised, and by their abundance be reduced in price, so as to allow, when occasion would offer, of their advantageous exportation hither and to other parts of Europe."

Done NEW AMSTERDAM this

Remonstrance on the preceding proposed Contract

Honorable, Wise, Prudent Lords, Petrus Stuyvesant, Governor General, and the Councillors of New Netherland, Curaçao and Dependencies thereof.

Honorable, The undersigned Burghers and inhabitants of this city New Amsterdam, your Honors' liege subjects, most respectfully represent that they are inclined to a foreign trade, and especially to the coast of Africa, according to the concession of the hon'ble directors granted in the year 1652, as a special privilege to the inhabitants of this place, in order to fetch thence slaves and other wares might be disposed of here and elsewhere, whereby this city and the entire country would increase and prosper in merchandize, commerce, population and more especially in the tobacco trade, to the advantage not only of these inhabitants, but also of the Hon'ble West India Company which would behold, in time, a vast, populous, and rich commercial province spring up in these parts therefrom.

But it has appeared to them that those who would execute with skipper or merchant going to that country a draft of partnership, which is beset and pinched by such precise conditions, would risk their lives and goods, and at best gain nothing, or run the risk of having ship and goods confiscated. For, besides the entire of the Gold Coast being excepted in that concession, it appears that Cape Verde, Siera Leona, the Greyn (Pepper) and Qua Qua Coast are also excluded; for it is not permitted to resort further West, at farthest, than Popo Sonde. Moreover, the Gold Coast, which from Cape Apolonia to Cape des Rodes or Mount Berique is reckoned 60 leagues, can be extended much further, as will be seen, to any place where gold may be found. And as regards slaves; for each head 15 guilders must be paid, and then the payment for them in tobacco or beaver is again taxed when shipped to Fatherland, which imposes too heavy a burthen on this hazardous trade.

The Hon'ble Company, in the meanwhile, must perceive that our neighbors, the French, English, Swedes, Danes, and Courlanders,³ are by means of the Netherlanders who repair to them trading along the entire coast, even under their strongholds, without any profit being derived therefrom by the Company; Yea, they suffer rather very serious loss thereby, as is manifest from the example of Arent de Groot, who in the year 1638 built a fort at Cormantyn for the English, and of Hendrick Caerloff, the former fiscal, who built another at Cape Corse in the year 1650 for the Swedes.

Your Honors' subjects, passing by these strongholds, take another course and as faithful subjects address themselves to you, humbly praying permission to trade free and unobstructed in ship or ships, along the whole of the west coast of Africa, that is, from Cape Verd to Cape Lopes de Gonsalve, in all bays, rivers and coasts, without any exception, the Hon'ble Company's strongholds alone excepted, according to the rules and orders, on payment, either here or in Holland, of such moderate duty as shall be agreed on. This doing, etc.⁴

On June 6, 1653, the directors of the Amsterdam chamber wrote to Stuyvesant: "We have by contract given and granted to some private Merchants permission empowering them to repair to the Coast of Africa to trade for Slaves there, and to carry and convey them to the West Indies and the Islands situate thereabouts, and as we expect that the aforesaid Ships or some of them will go to New

Friday, 6 August, [1655].

Whereas the Director General and Council of New Netherland find that the negroes lately arrived here from the Bight of Guinea in the Ship Witte Paert, have been transported and carried hence without the Hon'ble Company or the inhabitants of this province having derived any revenue or benefit therefrom, the Director General and Council have resolved [and concluded that there shall be paid]² at the general treasury [10 per cent of the] value or purchase [money of the negroes who shall be carried away] or exported [from here elsewhere beyond the jurisdiction of New Netherland. Dated as above.]

Netherland to sell their Slaves also to the Inhabitants there, in such case we desire and request that Your Honor will not demand any Duties from them, but lend them all reasonable Assistance, in order to the removal of every obstacle which might prove a hinderance to Agriculture. This for your information and notification." Ibid., pp. 103-104; N. Y. Col. Docs., XIV. 209-210.

²The resolution of the Amsterdam chamber which granted permission for this voyage is to be found in N. Y. Col. MSS., 12: 7. M. J. Kohler cites a letter from the director of the Amsterdam chamber to Stuyvesant, written July 24, 1653, which illustrates the determination of the directors to foster the agriculture of New Netherland by providing the colony with a supply of negroes:

"As some of the Jewish nation who are associated with Juan Delino, colonist on said island (Curaçoa), did solicit our consent to purchase a few negroes if any were offered for sale in New Netherland and export them to Curaçoa, to promote as they pretend, their agriculture, we must inform your Honor that we have declined to grant their request, because the company did prefer to encourage first the population and agriculture of New Netherland, whereof all servants ought to be kept there, and no one permitted to leave the country if it ever shall arrive to any degree of grandeur, all of which we have sent for your instruction." 323. DEPOSITION OF JOAN GAILLARDO FERRARA, 1656.¹

. . . That he, the affirmant, being, in the month of April, of the year 1652, on a voyage from Jamayca to St. Jago de Kuba, in the ship named St Anthoni, whereof Silvester Peres was skipper, and being come to the latitude of Cape Morante, was met by a certain privateer ship whereof Martin Janss Raeff was captain, which ship was navigated, in consequence of the captain's absence, by his Lt.-General, Coert Tysen Campen, which privateer attacked, fought, boarded and conquered his, the affirmant's, ship and made a prize thereof, and proceeded to New Netherland, in the harbor called Mandes, and whereas he, the deponent, had a deep interest in said ship carrying, among other merchandise, four-and-forty negroes and negroesses, he, the affirmant, in further proof of his property therein, declares that said black men and women are branded in manner as follows:

To wit: First. Thirty-two of them are marked AR being the name of Anthonio de Rivera, and three more are marked J, being the name of Jean Loper[z] which marks are branded on the left breast; and then nine more are marked A. being the name of Allonso, which marks are branded on the right breast. Thus done, in good faith, in Amsterdam, present Henrick Vericselen, Dirck Tack, as witnesses hereunto invited. J. THIELMANS, Notary Public.

[323] ¹N. Y. Col. Docs., II. 27. The unavailing struggles of Joan Gaillardo Ferrara to obtain negroes or compensation for negroes seized by pirates can be traced through the first and second volumes of the New York Colonial Documents. Two documents dealing with the case are here printed. The Spanish minister presented Ferrara's cause to the States General, which sent an order to the Director General and Council of New Netherland for the restitution of Ferrara's property and the arrest of the pirates. After the passage of a year, during which the deponent had made a futile voyage to New Netherland, the Spanish ambassador again took up the matter and once more directions were sent to New Netherland for investigation and action. The response was that the pirates charged with the theft of the negroes had never been in New Netherland; that, four years before, Coert Tysen had sold negroes there but that as he had a commission from the French government of St. Christopher he could not be excluded from the colony; and that the negroes under discussion, having changed hands several times, could not with justice be taken from their present owners without compensation. With this Gaillardo was obliged to be content. Ibid., I. 580-581, II. 1-4, 23-43.

325. CHARTER OF THE SHIP EYCKENBOOM, 1659.¹

IN the Name of the Lord, Amen. In the year of the birth of Our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, 1659, the 25th of January, before me Henrick Schaeff, admitted by the Court of Holland a notary public residing in Amsterdam, and the undersigned witnesses, in their own persons came and appeared Messieurs Edward Man and Abraham Wilmerdoncx, directors of the Incorporated West India Company at the chamber here in Amsterdam hereunto authorized by the board of their associates, as charterers on the one part, and skipper Jan Jansen Eyckenboom of Hoorn, master under God, of his ship named the Eyckenboom, long 1° XX, wide XXV and one half, hold XI and one half, over it five and one half and six feet, with a half deck and forecastle on either side, and the aforesaid parties declared and do hereby declare to have made and concluded together a certain Contract for a charter of said ship, in the form and manner hereinafter described,

To wit: That the aforesaid skipper shall be bound immediately to deliver his aforesaid ship here in the city fitted out, tight, well caulked, and provided with good and sufficient anchors, cordage, tackle, sails, running and standing rigging and all other necessaries and appurtenances thereunto belonging, and the same to mount with ten good pieces of cannon, with the requisite powder and shot and other ammunition in proportion, but the necessary consumption of powder and shot aforesaid shall be made good by the company, which shall also put on board said ship in addition to the ten pieces aforesaid as many other guns as they please and can conveniently place, and shall provide and pay the expence of the powder and shot therefor, on condition that in the necessary consumption thereof, the aforesaid skipper shall bear the contingent of his ship aforesaid; that further, said company shall man said ship with such and so many hands and provide them with such stores as said company will please and think proper. Which being done on the one side and the other, the aforesaid ship shall on the part of said company, be laden with a full and suitable cargo, or to such extent as said company shall think proper; being laden with all such goods, wares, and merchandizes as they will determine, the aforesaid ship shall, with the first fair wind and weather that God will grant, be dispatched and sail from this country direct to the coast of Africa and run along said coast from above downward, or from Cape Verd down, and touch, trade, lie and remain at all trading posts and ports, according to the pleasure of said company and their commissary, unto the Castle St. George d'el Mina, where they shall receive or find orders from the company's director general and council or shall be furnished with them on sailing hence; And sail towards the Bight of Guinea and touch and trade at all other places lying therein according to the order which shall be given him by the director general or here; from thence proceed further to the islands of Curaçao, Bonaire, and Aruba in the West Indies, and also to New Netherland, and all round every where else the company, or its ministers, shall determine and order, and likewise at all said quarters and places trade and traffic goods, wares and merchandizes and also take in people, load and unload at the pleasure of the aforesaid company or its ministers; And to that end sail to and from, run hither and thither, anchor, lie, load and unload at said coasts, quarters and places as often and as frequently and so long as the service of the company such shall demand; Furthermore, return and come thence to this city Amsterdam or the destined port of discharge, and on her safe return and arrival, there discharge and deliver to the aforesaid company her laden return cargo and goods. Which done, there shall be paid to him the skipper for the contracted freight, every month, the sum of eight hundred guilders of XX stivers each, on condition that the company is bound for the term of six successive months or longer, to be calculated according to the length of time, all current months according to the almanac, to run and commence when the ship shall, in the prosecution of the voyage, reach the sea outside the last bouy of the Texel, and to expire when she shall arrive and cast anchor before this city of Amsterdam or her destined port of discharge, payable xiii days at three weeks after the aforesaid discharge here, besides average and pilotage according to the custom of the sea, and over and above also hat money for the abovenamed skipper at the company's discretion. And said skipper, with and besides the company's crew, shall also make the voyage with the aforesaid ship in order to look to said ship, her appurtenances, etc., making use of the company's stores, but the monthly pay or wages not being at its charge; And he shall be, over and above, subject to the orders and instructions, articles and other rules of the company during the voyage, no more nor less than if he had been sworn to observe the same, they being taken as inserted herein, and especially also in regard to particular or private forbidden trading, in shipping or conveyance of particular or private goods, merchandizes or wares, on pain according to the aforesaid articles, orders and instructions of the said company. The abovementioned directors, parties hereunto, pledging for the payment of the aforesaid contracted monthly or freight moneys, average and pilotage, their private persons and property, and the aforesaid skipper, specially also his person, ship, appurtenances and contracted freight moneys, and generally all his other property, real and personal, present and to come without any exception, submitting the same to the court of Holland and all laws and judges, all aboveboard. Done at Amsterdam in the presence of Cryn van Seventer and Marten Hegervelt, free citizens [poorters] here, witnesses hereunto invited.

326. BILL OF LADING OF THE SPERA MUNDI, 1659.¹

I, Jan Pietersen of Dockum, skipper under God of my ship named the Spera Mundi, now lying ready before Curaçao with the first fair wind which God shall vouchsafe, to sail to New Netherland, where my correct unloading shall take place, acknowledge that I have received under the deck of my aforesaid ship, from you Frans Bruyn, to wit, five negroes, whereof one is a negress, all dry and well conditioned, and marked with the annexed mark. All which I promise to deliver (if God grant me a safe voyage) with my aforesaid ship at N. Netherland aforesaid, to the Hon'ble Director General Petrus Stuyvesant, or his factor or deputies on payment for the freight of the above described goods, at the discretion of the said director general, and for the performance hereof, I bind myself, and all my goods and my aforesaid ship and appurtenances. In witness of the truth, I have signed three Copies hereof with my name, all of the same tenor, the one being satisfied, the others to be void.

328. DIRECTOR STUYVESANT TO VICE-DIRECTOR BECK, 1660.¹

AMSTERDAM IN NEW NETHERLAND, 17 February, 1660.

. . . Four Negro Boys and one Negro Girl have, as you advised, been sent to, and received by me per the Ship Sphera Mundi;² 3 on mine and 2 on Commissary Van Brugge's account, their price being left to our discretion. Upon this subject I must say, that the assignment sent to me by Frans Bruyn is unsigned. However, in order to avoid any difficulty, I left this time the choice to the commissary who took the negro girl and one of the stoutest boys. But greater difficulties have arisen in this wise: one of the five died on the passage hither; some were sick or have become so after arriving. To prevent any misunderstanding in future, the sold negroes ought to be consigned to the purchaser by their names or marks.

² These negroes had been taken from a cargo of 331 slaves which arrived in Curaçao in August.

As regards the price which was left to our discretion, in order to prevent any suspicion of self interestedness, I wish your Honor to inform me after the others have been sold, what price they brought.

I have observed by your dispatch to the hon'ble directors, dated 3 September, forwarded by the ship Sphera Mundi the 26 December last, that the negroes were sold to Mr. Corn's van Ool at 140 pieces of eight, viz., from 40 to 16 years; from 16 to 12 years, three for two; under 12 years, two for one.³

We hope and trust that by complying with such price and terms, we shall avoid all suspicion of self interest. I am willing to take my share of the expence and risk of their passage hither, because I desired the negroes for my own service and the promotion of agriculture, not in the expectation of any gain, and therefore sent for young ones, in which regard the worthy inhabitants, christians, and those of the hon'ble company, ought, I think, to be preferred before Spaniards and unbelieving Jews.

You will see by the enclosed extracts from my letter covering yours to the hon'ble directors, what I have proposed to them. It is therefore desirable and somewhat necessary that a fixed price should be set on horses conveyed hither, or ordered from Curaçao by private persons, as well as on negroes as far as practicable, according to their ability and age, because the one as well as the other are most urgently required here for purposes of agriculture and its advancement, and finally would tend to the greater advantage, trade and prosperity of the hon'ble company and its subjects. . . .

In regard to the negroes which the hon'ble directors ordered to be sent hither, they ought to be stout and strong fellows, fit for immediate employment on this fortress and other works; also, if required, in war against the wild barbarians, either to pursue them when retreating, or else to carry some of the soldiers' baggage; it being very apparent that we shall be constrained to wage a righteous and offensive war against them, for the peaceable possession once of the land, and the avenging of numerous suffered affronts and murders. An important service would be conferred on the company, on us and the country if there were among the sold negroes, some of experience who have resided a certain time at Curaçao.

³This, though it is not clearly stated, undoubtedly means that the negroes were sold according to Spanish custom—not per head but per pieza de India. Of those from 16 to 12 years of age it took three negroes to make two piezas de India; of those under 12, two to make one.

329. VOYAGE OF THE GIDEON, 1663.¹

Charter party of the ship "Gideon" for a voyage from Holland to Africa and New Netherland.

This day, the 15th of November anno 1663, before me, Hendrick Schaef, notary public, admitted by the Court of Holland, residing at Amsterdam, and the undersigned witnesses. In their own persons came and appeared Messieurs Abraham Wilmerdoncx and Jacob Pergens, directors of the chartered West India Company, chamber of this city, authorized thereto by the gentlemen, their fellow members of the board, of the one part, and Skipper Simon Cornelisz Gilde, master (under God) of his ship named Gideon, of the other part, to me, the notary, well known, and declared that they had agreed and contracted with one another that the aforesaid skipper shall do his best to make ready his aforesaid ship Gideon as speedily as possible and barring all accidents, which may God prevent, to deliver the same without fail at the Texel, ready to sail, and to take on board such merchandise of the aforesaid company as he shall be able conveniently to stow in the hold of his ship, in the space which shall be found available after all the necessary stores for his intended voyage have been taken on board, and without receiving any freight therefor to transport the same to the coast of Africa, to Castle El Mina, or to Angola, as the honorable freighters shall be pleased to order, and that the aforesaid skipper shall there take on board, free of freight, thirty lasts,² or more, of merchandise, according to the amount of space available in the ship as aforesaid, and therewith to sail direct to Angola, to such places as he shall be ordered to visit by the director general and as the company's agents in Angola shall think proper. Also, that the aforesaid skipper shall there from time to time, as promptly and as quickly as possible, take on board as many slaves as he can conveniently transport; also take with him from there to Curaçao and no farther as much copper and as many elephant tusks as he can conveniently load into his ship, likewise without receiving any freight therefor, unless less than two hundred and seventy-five slaves were taken on board, in which case he shall receive as freight for the copper, elephant tusks and other wares as much as is hereinafter specified. Furthermore, he shall proceed with his slaves first to Cajana,³ situated on the main wild coast of America, and there deliver to the company's director as many slaves as he shall be ordered to, and then depart with the rest for the island of Curaçao, and there deliver the rest to the vice director. Furthermore, he shall transport without charge from Curaçao such wares on account of the company as the vice director shall think proper and he can conveniently load into his ship, and further proceed with from three hundred to three hundred and fifty negroes to New Netherland and, having delivered the same there to the director general or his agent, be free to go with his ship where he pleases; on condition that, if on the fifteenth of August next ensuing the aforesaid skipper has not yet arrived with his slaves at Curaçao, the directors shall not be bound to send him with slaves to New Netherland, but parties shall be mutually free and released from their obligations at Curaçao. Furthermore, on arrival of the aforesaid skipper at Cajana, Curaçao, and New Netherland, his slaves shall at each place be immediately taken from board and he shall be given therefor three receipts of the same tenor, in which it shall be expressly stated how many negroes from four to eight, how many from eight to fifteen, how many from fifteen to thirty-six and how many above thirty-six years were delivered. And the aforesaid skipper shall at his own charge furnish proper food and drink to the aforesaid negroes as long as he shall have the same on board, and therefore defray the cost of food, water casks and all that shall be needed for the storage of water and victuals for the aforesaid negroes and the partitioning-off of the ship, without the directors, with respect to the food, being bound to do more than at their discretion to give orders that the aforesaid skipper, lying at anchor to take on board slaves, may obtain some refreshments from the land on the directors' account; and with regard to other expenses they shall be held liable only for such as are specified below. Furthermore, the company shall have liberty to send in the aforesaid ship one or more persons in their service to the Gold Coast, Angola, Curaçao and New Netherland, and especially a supercargo, whose wages shall be paid by the company and who must be entertained in the cabin at the expense of the skipper. Furthermore, the aforesaid skipper, fulfilling his part of what is hereinbefore written, shall receive for each day that he shall wait at Castle El Mina or on the wild coast of Cajana the sum of fifty guilders, each time to be reckoned from the day he casts his anchor at the respective places until he shall lift the same again, and further be obliged to wait at Angola, without being able to claim any lay-days,⁴ until he shall have obtained his slaves; likewise he shall be obliged to wait at or on Curaçao for the space of three weeks, after the expiration of which three weeks at Curaçao he shall receive his lay-days as before at the rate of fifty guilders a day. Secondly, in case he shall not receive two hundred and seventy-five slaves at Angola as above written, he shall receive as freight for the copper and other wares loaded on board one half stiver per pound.⁵ Thirdly, the honorable directors, on presentation of one of the receipts above mentioned, shall pay to the owners or their agent for each negro who shall be delivered alive on the wild coast or at Curaçao the sum of one hundred guilders and for those who shall be transported from Curaçao to New Netherland thirty guilders each, provided that those between the ages of fifteen and thirty-six years shall be counted as one negro each; that of those from fifteen to eight years down, as well as those above the age of thirty-six, three negroes shall be counted as two; and that of those below eight years two shall be counted as one. With this understanding, however, that in case he be furnished at Curaçao with other negroes than those whom he brought there, for whom a much larger reduction must be made, the proportionate loss shall be made good by decision of arbitrators, to be chosen by parties on both sides. Likewise, the skipper shall receive for all persons who shall be sent over in the service of the company, eleven stivers a day for those who (with the exception of the super-cargo) mess in the cabin, and seven stivers for those who mess on deck. Also, the honorable directors have paid to the aforesaid skipper, under guaranty, for the purchase of food and other necessaries for the negroes, the sum of eight thousand guilders, which eight thousand guilders upon his safe arrival shall be deducted from his freight charges. Furthermore, in addition to the aforesaid eight thousand guilders, they are paying a premium of eight per cent. on the aforesaid eight thousand guilders to the owners, upon condition that in case of loss or capture of the ship (which may God prevent) the aforesaid skipper and his sureties shall be held to return the aforesaid eight thousand guilders promptly and without any exception, compensation or rebate, inasmuch as for the aforesaid premium they assume the risk of the said eight thousand guilders. Furthermore, the honorable directors shall furnish the said skipper with some wrist and ankle shackles to restrain therewith the refractory negroes on board, which shackles the skipper shall be held to deliver on his arrival at Curaçao to the aforesaid directors, or here to the aforesaid company in exchange for a proper receipt. It is further stipulated that if, contrary to expectation, it be found that any one has loaded in said ship any merchandise other than that belonging to the company, the company or the aforesaid directors shall have the right to have a proper search made here or over there, as often as they please, and if it be found that the skipper or any one of his crew has carried on any illicit trade on the aforesaid coast of Africa, whether with white people or black, or that any merchandise or cash has been taken along without permission, in whatever manner it may have been done, the same shall be subject to confiscation for the benefit of the aforesaid company. The skipper shall be bound to engage the crew upon these conditions and if the skipper himself, contrary to expectation, should upon sufficient legal evidence be found guilty of having carried on such illicit trade, he shall in addition to the confiscation of the merchandise forfeit, for the benefit as above written, his share in the ship, the freight and the proceeds of the voyage. All of which shall also take place in regard to each owner individually who shall be found guilty thereof for so far as his share is concerned and no further. It is further stipulated that the honorable directors shall within the space of four months from the date hereof not let any ship go from here to Angola, directly or otherwise, to be loaded and despatched from there before or at the same time as the aforesaid skipper; provided however that this shall not oblige the honorable directors to revoke the commissions heretofore issued, or if any ships from the coast of Guinea should have sailed thither before his arrival there to make any change in the orders issued. And it is promised that the skipper upon the satisfactory completion of his voyage shall be presented with a piece of cloth for a cape for himself and a flag for the ship, at the discretion of the honorable directors. For the performance and fulfillment of what is hereinbefore written, the aforesaid directors bind the hereinbefore mentioned sum of money in hand paid and furthermore all the company's property and effects and especially all the aforesaid negroes or the proceeds thereof, and such other goods as may be sent hither by the aforesaid company's agents in the said ship; and the aforesaid skipper binds his said ship, the freight and all the appurtenances thereof, together with his person and all his other goods, none excepted, the respective contracting parties submitting themselves to all courts and judges, and especially to the Court of Holland, without fraud, and mutually consenting that instruments in proper form be made hereof and delivered. Done at Amsterdam in presence of Isaack Ipesen and Willem de Haes, acting as witnesses hereto, also at Amsterdam.

330. THE DIRECTORS AT AMSTERDAM TO THE DIRECTOR AND COUNCIL OF NEW NETHERLAND, 1664.¹

and seizing our ship 't Waepen van Amsterdam, on her way from the coast of Guinea, which he carried, with her cargo of Slaves, into Virginia. And as you have sent Councillor Johan de Decker and Commissary Verlet thither to reclaim them, we are impatient to learn their return, not without apprehension that we shall hear by the first opportunity that they either were too late, or else were put off with frivolous excuses and consequently will have gone back without having accomplished anything.²

In our last which we enclose, you were informed that we contracted with Symon Gilde, skipper of the ship Gideon, to export a goodly number of slaves from Loango on the Coast of Africa, and to convey them by way of Curaçao to New Netherland; also that this city is a partner therein for one-fourth part, as may be more fully seen by the copies hereunto annexed.

As these slaves are intended solely to promote agriculture in that country, which is the only means of making that state prosperous, so it is our express order and desire, that the aforesaid slaves shall be sold there only to our inhabitants on the express condition, that they shall not be exported out of our district, but specially retained therein, to be employed in the cultivation of the soil, so that the great expense which we have incurred may not be fruitless, but that we may, in due course of time, reap the fruits which we promise ourselves therefrom. The aforesaid ship with about 300 slaves may, according to our calculation, arrive yonder in the month of June or July next.

As your Honor will be greatly relieved by this supply, you will therefore use every effort that one-third part at least of the proceeds shall be forwarded hither in beaver, in order that we may be enabled to pay the freight, or the greatest part thereof at farthest, on the arrival of the aforesaid ship here, which we are bound to do by contract. Otherwise, we shall lose all ambition to continue such transmission of slaves. This we commend to your Honor's special consideration.

And although we have also ordered you, in the aforesaid despatch, to agree amicably with the city's officers about chartering the company's sloop for the conveyance of the city's slaves to the south river,³ yet we have subsequently resolved and determined that it should be effected here by the principals on both sides. Wherefore we have concluded to order and recommend you, in case the aforesaid sloop may be employed for that service, distinctly then to write us your advice and opinion what and how much ought to be charged for her freight, adding the reasons in support thereof, in order to enable us to make proper use of them in the present conjuncture.⁴

AMSTERDAM, this 20th January, 1664.

331. DIRECTOR STUYVESANT TO VICE-DIRECTOR BECK, 1664.¹

AMSTERDAM IN NEW NETHERLAND,
7 May, 1664.

. . . Messrs. the directors, and the Commissioners of the Colonie on the South River, have entered into a contract with Simon Cornelissen Gilde, skipper of the Gideon, to transport hither a lot of negroes for agricultural purposes.² These negroes will, we hope, have arrived before this letter reaches your Honor, or, at least, be embarked after its receipt. We shall therefore recommend that, being properly provided, they may be dispatched hither as speedily as possible. If it happen that Simon Gilde should arrive with the negroes at the island of Curaçao three weeks or a month later than the charter party provides, say, the middle of August, the first installment might reach here before or by the middle of September from Curaçao, and the remainder by the middle of October. In that event a fair price might be realized for them.

332. TERMS OF SALE OF NEGROES, 1664.¹

[Conditions and Terms on which the Director General and] Council of [New Netherland] propose [to sell to the] highest bidder a lot of Negroes and Ne[gresses]. 29 May, 1664.

The buyers shall immediately take possession of their purchased negroes, and may use them as bond slaves, and also sell them to others.

But whereas, the meaning of the directors is, to promote and advance the population and agriculture of this province more and more, the purchased negroes or negresses shall not be sold, carried away or transported beyond this province. Whoso acts contrary hereunto, shall forfeit for each negro or negress, One hundred Guilders, beaver value.

333. DIRECTOR STUYVESANT TO THE DIRECTORS AT

. . . This day fortnight arrived here your Honors' Vessel, the Musch [Sparrow], with forty head of slaves, sent to us by Vice Director Beck to procure provisions and all sorts of timber work, fix ox carts and a new rosmill. . . .

The negroes and negresses have all arrived safely and in health, but were, on an average, quite old, and as the skipper alleges, rejected by the Spaniards. The product of the greater part appears by the accompanying account of the public vendue. They would have brought more, had they not been so old. Five of the negro women, who were, in our opinion, unsalable, have been kept back and remain unsold. In like manner, six negroes also, to help to cut the required timber and to perform some other necessary work for the honorable company.

334. THE DIRECTORS AT AMSTERDAM TO DIRECTOR
STUYVESANT, 1664.¹

Honorable, Prudent, Valiant, Beloved, Faithful, We have heretofore advised you of our intention to let the ship Gideon go from Curaçao to the Mannhattans with her slaves. Having since then, and now for the first time, remarked the hostile and treacherous designs manifested by the English towards the company's rightful conquests on the coast of Africa, where they have already mastered Cape Verd and taken 3 to 4 of the company's ships or yachts, we have come to a different determination. As your Honor also will not be left unmolested by them, for we understand that they have likewise sent 3 ships with men thither to the assistance of their nation, and as the aforesaid ship with slaves might hereby be brought into difficulty, we have thought proper to send her first to the South River, to learn there from the city's director how matters stand at the Mannhattans. On learning of the arrival of this ship there, your Honor must immediately commission some one to go thither, to be present at the allotment of the negroes, and to repair to the Mannhattans with the share, or $\frac{3}{4}$ th the part that is to fall to the company; with this understanding, however, that if the above-named ship had not brought thither above 200 head, there shall be left to the city at least 60 head, as we find ourselves under obligation to accommodate them with that number.² . . .

335. VICE-DIRECTOR BECK TO THE DIRECTOR AND COUNCIL OF
the 21. July, Anno 1664.Honorable, Valiant, Wise, Prudent and right Discreet Gentlemen.

Gentlemen, My last to your Honors was dated 28 April, by the Company's ship the Musch, which I not only hope has arrived in your parts long before your receipt of this, but ardently desire to see her return here every day.

Since then a handsome Genoese [genuees] ship, named the St. Crous [Sta. Cruz], arrived here on the 12th of June last from Cartagena, with One hundred and sixty thousand pieces of eight in specie, to be all invested in slaves through the factors residing here on behalf of the Genoese Company,² who, however up to this time have delayed doing any thing, by advice and order of their principals, in the expectation that they will have concluded a new contract with the company, and that more slaves may arrive here, so as to invest the entire capital which they have brought for that purpose in their aforesaid ship, in slaves and to carry them away at once.

On the 8th instant, arrived here safely by way of Guinea, Angola, and Cayenne, the ship Gideon, Simon Cornelissen Gilde, skipper, the bearer hereof, with over three hundred slaves. I was in hopes by means of these and the supply of slaves already here, to have enough to be able on the advice and order of the company, to accommodate the aforesaid factors for their abovementioned specie, as then was their intent; for they said, in case no seasonable advice or order was received from their principals and the company, that they would then contract with me for as many slaves as were here at present, and might meanwhile happen to arrive, to be paid for on delivery, in order to dispatch their aforesaid ship, which was lying here at great expense. So they were expecting that they could have availed themselves on this occasion, for their vessel, of the slaves brought hither by the aforesaid Ship Gideon, when the abovementioned Skipper Simon Cornelissen Gilde brought me such ample order and instructions to the contrary, that I could not dare to change them, as your Honors will please to observe by the annexed copies. Pursuant to said orders I am sending to your Honors herewith, by the aforesaid ship and skipper the number of slaves to be seen in the accompanying invoice and bill of lading to which, for brevity's sake, I refer.

here, the aforesaid factors will have to content themselves with the slaves which have been previously brought hither on the company's account; and as many of the slaves brought here by the said ship Gideon are affected with scurvy, I have therefore retained the greater number of these here and embarked others in their place from among those brought in previous ships. When those are cured of the scurvy, they can be delivered, in the place of the others, to the aforesaid factors. . . .

336. BILL OF LADING OF THE GIDEON, 1664.¹

I, underwritten Simon Cornelissen Gilde, skipper under God of my ship, named the Gideon, now lying in the Harbor of Curaçao, ready to sail with the first fair wind (which God shall vouchsafe) for the Manhatans in New Netherland acknowledge to have received between the decks of my aforesaid ship, the number of three hundred slaves, consisting of one hundred and sixty men and one hundred and forty women, all merchantable; which slaves I promise to deliver (if God grant me a prosperous voyage), with my aforesaid ship at the said Manhatans to the hon'ble director general Petrus Stuyvesant or his order, on payment of my freight for the aforesaid slaves, as agreed upon and conditioned by the charter party, and for the performance of what is hereinbefore written, I bind myself and all my property and my aforesaid ship with all its appurtenances. In witness of the truth I have signed three bills of lading, all of the same tenor, the one being fulfilled, the others are void.

Written at CURAÇAO, the 21st July, Anno 1664.

337. DIRECTOR STUYVESANT TO VICE-DIRECTOR BECK, 1664.¹

Honorable, Prudent, Wise, and very Discreet Sir, Our last letter to you was by the ship the White Horseman, skipper Hendrick Jansen Stuyvesant, dated the 7th May last. . . .

Since then, viz., on the 24th May, arrived here in safety, God be praised, the Company's ship Sparrow, skipper Jan Petersen Groot of Dockum, by whom I received your Honor's letter of the 28th of April, to which the following will serve as an answer.

The slaves and merchandize arrived safely according to invoice and bill of lading. . . .

I have sold the negroes that have been sent, at public auction to the highest bidder, for provisions, with the exception of six of the men, who are employed in the company's service on the works of the fort, and five negro women who, on account of their advanced age, could not find a purchaser, except at a very low figure. The remainder have been sold at prices mentioned in the annexed copy of the conditions of the sale; being, in our opinion, a tolerably fair price for such a lot. Had they been better, there is not a doubt but they would have produced a much larger amount, as may be inferred from the price of a few who were sold for 600 Guilders and upwards.

[337] ¹*Voyages of the "St. John," etc.*, pp. 216-221.

These negroes have afforded us great relief in the purchase of provisions for the garrison. Otherwise, we should have been constrained by the low state of the treasury, caused by the continued troubles, first with the barbarians, and now at present with the neighboring English, to purchase supplies by bills of exchange. . . .

In our former dispatch, duplicate whereof we here inclose, we stated among other things, if it should come to pass that Simon Gilde arrived at the island of Curaçao, with negroes three weeks or a month later than intimated in the charter party, say the middle of August, therefore the sending of the negroes hither should not be postponed, etc. Having reconsidered this, we have, for divers reasons, whereof one is, that the Right Honorable the Regents of the city of Amsterdam are interested therein one-fourth part, thought it best and most justifiable, not to make the slightest alteration in the charter party which the directors have concluded with Simon Gilde. Wherefore we request and recommend your Honor to regulate yourself by the said charter party in the forwarding of the abovementioned negroes. But as we find ourselves burthened here by an unusually strong garrison, for the support of which, exclusive of the monthly pay, we require considerable provisions, for the purchase whereof we are not well provided; we, on that account, have need, yea great need of a few slaves, in order to truck them for provisions. Yet, for reasons already given, we deem it unjustifiable to send for the said negroes, contrary to the charter party concluded with Simon Gilde.

Yet requiring a large quantity of provisions both for this place and Curaçao, as we have already stated and more fully explained, should an opportunity offer to purchase any, funds would be absolutely necessary. Wherefore we recommend this seriously to your consideration; and if Simon Gilde arrive in season, to send us as many negroes as circumstances will permit. If negroes be scarce, which however we should prefer to have for the good and advancement of the country, according to the Hon'ble Company's order, some other effects, either money or osnaburghs and other coarse linen, or any thing else that is not needed for the public service, might be spared and bartered for provisions. If negroes, your Honor will please to bear in mind to have them sent off in time that they may probably arrive here before, or about All Saints, and that they be suitably provided against the cold.

338. THE COUNCIL OF NEW NETHERLAND TO THE DIRECTORS AT AMSTERDAM, 1664.¹

. . . . Meanwhile, God be thanked, the ship St. Jacob arrived here in safety on the 13th instant, from the South River, and, two days after, the ship Gideon, which sailed from Curaçao on the 21st of July with 300 slaves, 160 men and 140 women, whereof 9 died on the passage. This is a very poor lot; indeed the women so poor that we fear the most of them will remain on our hands, or must be let go at a very low figure, whereof more in our next. . . .

Pursuant to the contract which your Honors made with the directors of the city's colony, we have delivered by lot the fourth part of the abovementioned negro men and women, into the hands of Mr. Pieter Alrichs, commissary of Indian cargoes, and councillor of the colony of New Amstel, who has been here for some time for the purpose of purchasing oxen, cows and horses, to the number of 200 or thereabouts. . . .

The colony has received by lot for its fourth part, 38 men and 34 women. But as there were among these, as well as among those that fell to the company, many above the age of 36 years, three of them must be counted for two. . . .

This serves mainly to advise your Honors of the arrival of the abovementioned negroes who, though a very poor lot, as already stated, yet in our most deplorable state, will wonderfully relieve us, so that we and your Honors' servants and inhabitants, find ourselves greatly obliged, and gratefully acknowledge your care in the sending of the said negroes. . . .

An Order to Mr. Cornelius van Ruyven, concerning the Negroes, etc., of the West India Company.

Whereas there was a certaine Number of Negroes both men and women brought from Curazo hither, the greatest part of which were sold to divers persons before the Surrender of this place, into my hands under his Ma'ties obedience, upon severall Termes and Con-dicons as by their Bookes doth appeare, And I being not as yet satisfied, that the said Negroes are included in the Articles of Surrender, I do hereby Order and require that all payments in Goods or Beaver, that is, or shall be due, according to the severall Sales, made of the 30th of August and 1st of September, and those also of the 12th of September following, be without fraud or Rebate really paid in unto Mr. Cornelius van Ruyven, who is to keepe what hee shall so receive, in his hands for my use, untill the Accompts shall be better adjusted, and in the meane time, that no discount (as to the ³ Stuyvesant in accounting to the company for his surrender of New Amsterdam on the appearance of the English offered as one reason the scarcity of supplies: "14 to 16 days before the arrival of the frigates, there arrived and came, in the ship Gideon between 3 and 400 half-starved Negroes and Negresses who alone, exclusive of the garrison, required 100 skepels of wheat per week" (N. Y. Col. Docs., II. 430). To this the company replied: "Finally, the aforesaid Stuyvesant says: That the scarcity of provisions was caused, among other things, by the arrival of the ship Gideon with between three and four hundred Negroes. Truly, also, a flimsy excuse. For, besides the number not being so large, one-fourth of them had been delivered to the officer of the city's Colonie on the South river, who took his departure with them for the South river three days after the arrival of the frigates because he saw the shape things were taking in New Netherland and around the government; and the remainder were sold shortly after, so that he had not to provide for them." Ibid., II. 495.

Secondly the deputy govern'r of the R'll Company tells me that that Company only pretend to the first empcion [importation] or transportacion of Negroes out of Guiny, and when they are once sold in Barbadoes, Jamaica etc. by them or their factors, they care not whither they are transported from thence; for the more are carryed of, the more againe wilbe wanting; and therefore you need not suspect the Company will oppose the introducing of black Slaves into New Yorke from any place (except from Guiny) if they were first sold in that place by the Royall Company or their agents.²

²Capt. Christopher Billop's petition (ibid., pp. 365-366) adds to this account a few further items about his difficulties. He stated that as commander of the Deptford he had, in June, 1682, captured the Providence, a London interloper, under Capt. George Nantor. The Providence with all that belonged to her was shortly after condemned in the admiralty court at Nevis. Some time after the condemnation he sent negroes to John Injons of New York. The point at issue, that is, whether the negroes sent to New York were removed by him from the Providence, he ignored. ²The Board of Trade was endeavoring to collect any and all material which bore upon the colonial trade with pirates. Closely akin to this was the trade for Madagascar negroes, in which New York had been engaged since 1686, when the Mariner's Adventure was permitted to enter New York and discharge her cargo, after her master gave affidavits that he had not been in the territory of the Royal African Company and offered security for any claims which it might make (Cal. St. P. Col., 1685-1688, pp. 220, 231, 232, 253). A further account of the investigation of this trade and of Bellomont's efforts to bring it to an end is to be found in *N. Y. Col. in troubleing those concerned for what is past, or preventing the like (as much as possible) for the future. But upon occasion of this Perkins it is fit that we acquaint your Lordships a little particularly with his story. He was master of a vessell called the Frederick sloop belonging to Mr. Frederick Philips,³ and (since your Lordship's being there) was sent out under the conduct of Adolphus Philips to cruise for a vessell expected from Madagascar, which vessell they accordingly met, and having taken great quantitys of East India Goods out of her and put them on board this sloop, Adolphus returned in the Madagascar ship with nothing but Negroes to New York. In the mean while this sloop went and lay privately in Delaware Bay till Adolphus came againe from New Yorke to them, and then sent her away (under the conduct of one Jay a Frenchman) North about Scotland to Hamburgh. But at Hamburgh S'r Paul Ricaut his Majesties Resident getting notice of such a vessell with such a cargo, seized what he found and sent the men hither, who have all of them made depositions about the circumstances of the whole voyage. . . .

AGAINST HIM, 1698.¹

To the Right Honourable the Lords Commissioners of the Council for Trade and Plantations.

May it please your Lordships, . . . Glover² was an inhabitant of New York and master of a ship built there, and then riding in the harbour; he had another of the like sort. . . .

As for Glover he went directly, as I heard, with a loading to Barbadoes, and there tooke a new Commission from the Governour, and was thence sent for Negros to Madagascar, and that he was there taken by the Pirates. . . .

I say the same thing in the case of granting a commission to Moston.³ The case (as I recollect) was thus. There were severall English and Dutch merchants of New Yorke who had hired the

To the Kings Most Excellent Majesty, . . . The 10th Article is: That Colonel Fletcher granted also a like commission to Thomas Moston Commander of the ship Fortune, an unfree bottom, tho' it was then evident that the said ship was not designed for any service of war, but for illegal trade, and the sequel demonstrated it accordingly.

In answer to this article Colonel Fletcher acknowledges that he granted the said Commission to Captain Moston upon the desire of several merchants who had hired the ship to fetch negroes from Madagascar; but denies his knowledge that the said ship was an unfree bottom: the evidence of which, as it lyes before us, consists of the information given us by the Earl of Bellomont that the said ship was known to all men to have been formerly a Dutch privateer; also in the copy of her Charter party of affreightment, by which she is hired to lade other goods as well as Negroes; likewise by the cargo she took in publickly at New Yorke, which the Earl of Bellomont writes was goods proper for the pirates; and in the last place by her seizure and confiscation for illegal trade upon her returne thither. . . .

To the Right Honourable the Lords Commissioners for Trade and Plantations.

347. THE EARL OF BELLOMONT TO THE BOARD OF TRADE, 1699.¹

BOSTON, August 24th 1699.

To the Right Honourable the Lords Commissioners of Trade and Plantations.

My Lords. . . . I desire to be directed by your Lordships whether I may not lawfully require bonds of all the ships that go from hence and New Yorke on trading voyages, that they shall not goe to Madagascar nor elsewhere, where pirates frequent. I know 'tis a thing sometimes practised to take the Governors passe for one port or place and sail to another. And that trick was served me last summer at New Yorke by Baldrige² and Taylor who fitted out a Briganteen, and took my passe for Antegoa, but I was told their designe was for Madagascar or Guinea; when the briganteen was at Sea, whether with or without the privity of the forementioned Owners I cannot tell, she turn'd pirate and went to Newfoundland and robb'd ships.

Now that I have had occasion to mention Baldrige, I will acquaint your Lordships with a particularity told me of him by Kidd,³ when I first examined him in Council, because you had directed in your Letter of the 25th of last October or 5th of last January, that I should inquire after some pirates kill'd in St. Maries near Madagascar. I question'd Kidd about it, and he told me Baldrige was the occasion of that Insurrection of the Natives and the death of the pirates, for that having inveigled a great number of the natives of St. Maries, men, women and children on board a ship or ships he carryed and sold them for slaves to a French Island called Mascarine or Mascaron, which treachery of Baldriged the Natives on the Island revenged on those pirates by cutting their throats. . . .

348. HEADS OF ACCUSATION AGAINST THE EARL OF BELLOMONT, 1700.¹

32. The Earle of Bellomont in justification of these proceedings calumniates the people of New York of being Pirates and favourers of Piracy and breaking the Acts of navigation whereas it is evident that but one ship has for ten years past gone from thence on a Piraticall voyage and that was pretended to be commissioned by Leisler; 'Tis true that severall ships have had a constant trade to Madagascar for Negroes and some of them having lately met with India goods there which they bought at easy rates transported them to New York.

These are what I am informed by the Merchants of London will appear to be true.

349. THE EARL OF BELLOMONT TO SECRETARY VERNON, 1700.¹

N. YORK the 6th Decr. 1700.

. . . As to the charge against me for suffering the ship New York Marchand to come hither after having been at Madagascar, I have inquir'd ab't it, and the story of that ship is this: Frederick Philips her owner had appointed her to stop at Delaware Bay, wch is 50 leagues westward of this Province, and there his son met her in the Frederick's sloop, takes out all her E. India goods and sends the Frederick's sloop and goes to Hamborough (the story whereof you know) and come to this town in the N. York Marchand. Upon notice of the ship's coming in (for the sloop I never heard of till from your selfe) I sent imediately to search the N. York Marchand, where there was nothing found but a parcel of Negros, and the trade for Negros to Madagascar was not then under a prohibition, not untill the E. India Act passed in England.² I defie all mankind to charge me justly wth any sort of corruption in the least degree or wth any connivance or partiality shew'd to one man or party more than another. . . .

[351] ¹N. Y. Col. Docs., V. 814. On June 24, 1726, the Board of Trade wrote to Governor Burnet that it had no accounts of the number of negroes imported into New York or New Jersey, and wished them for as long a period as he could obtain them (ibid., V. 780). The detailed list of New York importations, drawn from the Naval Officers Lists, will be found at the end of this section, no. 369.

²The New York duty on negroes at the beginning of the eighteenth century was 15 s. if they were imported directly from Africa, £1 10 s., if indirectly (Cal. St. P. Col., 1701, p. 567). In 1709 a duty of £3 was laid on those slaves not brought directly from Africa. Du Bois, Suppression of the Slave Trade, p. 205.

³"New York, Yesterday Capt. Jarret arriv'd here from Guinea with 74 Negroes" (Boston News Letter, Oct. 15, 1711). Not all the negroes intended for New York arrived there. The sloop Berry, Walter Scott commander, from Jamaica to New York, with 48 negroes, was seized by a Martinique privateer in November, 1711. Ibid., Jan. 14, 1712.

⁴If this is correct the item in the News Letter, Aug. 23, 1714, is in error: "New York Aug. 16. Arrived here are . . . Nathanael Vial from Jamaica in a Sloop, 'tis said he has 90 Negro's on Board."

⁵The report of negroes brought from the West Indies and from Africa did not tell the whole story. On July 25, 1715, Governor Hunter reported to the Board of Trade the passage of an act "to exempt Hana Martin, Doctor Christr. Cooper and Mr. George Smith from the payment of the Tax for 12 Negroes imported from South Carolina" (N. Y. Col. Docs., V. 419). From 1715 on compare this list with no. 369.

⁶Note in manuscript, "Entered from the Coast of Africa but found afterwards to have been from Madagascar." One projected importation is described in the following letter from Cadwallader Colden to a Dr. Home, Dec. 7, 1721: "S'r, I am obliged to you for your kinde offer of buying for mee three or four slaves and that in so doing you will particularly consider my intrest. Please to buy mee two negro men about eighteen years of age I designe them for Labour and would have them strong and well made. Please likewise to buy mee a negro Girl of about thirteen years old. . . . in the bill of lading putt one on my account of risque another on my wife's and a third on Saundys that wee may have Less trouble with the duty." Colden Papers, I. 51.

³Prices of seasoned negroes in New York about 1690 ranged from £16 to £25. Their labor commanded from £5 to £6 a year (Papers of the Lloyd Family, I. 115, 147). On Jan. 27, 1723, a negro girl of seventeen was offered for sale for £45; on Apr. 19, a girl of twenty for £45; on Aug. 1, a negro man and girl for £50 and £60 respectively, on Sept. 24, a girl for £50; and on Oct. 21, a girl with a four-year-old child for £75 (O'Callaghan, Calendar of Historical Manuscripts, II. 476, 477, 479, 481). Inventories of 1729 and 1730 value negro women at £35, £40, and £45. By this time their labor was commanding £8 and £9 a year. Lloyd Family, I. 258, 261, 271, 307, 311.

NEW YORK, 20 Decr. 1726.

My Lords, . . . I send your Lordships herewith an account of Negroes imported to New York since 1700, which is all that could be found. There are bonds here in the Custom House for those that came directly from Africa, but no Agent of that Company has been of late appointed to demand their dues, which possibly it may be a favour in your Lordships to let the Directors of that Company know, that they may employ some body to demand their ten pr. Cent.

If I get the account from East New Jersey before this vessel sails, I will likewise enclose it. There are few Negroes, if any, imported in West New Jersey, but it is not possible for me to get an account from thence to be sent by this opportunity; but I shall obtain it as soon as can be. . . .

I have just received an account of Negroes from the Collector of Amboy, which I likewise enclose to Your Lordships. . . .

The act of 1728 was discussed by the Board of Trade, along with several other colonial acts of similar import, and a recommendation that duties be raised by some other means was sent to the colonial governors in October, 1729 (B. T. Journ., 1728-1734, pp. 64-68). The Weekly Rehearsal, Nov. 27, 1732, contained an account of the representation of the board copied from the Political State of Great Britain, for August, 1732.

this Colony with a considerable number of Negroes on Board her, in her voyage from Africa, touched at Antegua to purchase some provisions and Refreshments but landed none of her Slaves there, and then came to the Province of New Jersey, where there is no duty paid for any Slaves imported, but the owner of the vessel being desirous to import the greatest part of them into this province, if he might be allowed to pay only the duty of five ounces of plate for every head, which seemed to be a doubt in the Act for the settling the Revenue above mentioned being, it was said the ship did not come directly from Africa altho' the intention of the Legislature in that former Act was only to encourage the African Trade and so laid a double duty on slaves imported here from the West Indies, which are generally Refuse and very badd and could hardly be applicable to such slaves coming from Africa and had been nowhere landed although the ship had stop't at some other Port for refreshment before she arrived here; I therefore considered that if I did not pass that Law, none of the Slaves would have been brought hither which would have been a considerable loss to the Revenue and might have encouraged the bringing them in clandestinely, whereby the duty would have been defrauded; so that nothing but these considerations made me consent to that Law. . . .

357. THE BOARD OF TRADE TO THE PRIVY COUNCIL, 1735.¹

To the Rt. Hon'ble the Lords of the Committee of

His Majesty's most Hon'ble Privy Council

My Lords, We have considered the humble petition of the Merchants and Traders of the City of Bristol, whose names are thereunto subscribed, referr'd to us by Your Lordships on the 1st day of November 1734 complaining of an Act pass'd in His Majesty's Province of New York intituled, "An Act to repeal the Act and to cancel the Bills of Credit therein mentioned, and grant unto His Majesty several duties for supporting His Majesty's Government in the Colony of New York until the first day of September which will be in the year 1737."

We have been attended upon this occasion by the Agent for the Petitioners and have heard what he had to offer in support of their petition and having considered the said Act and taken the advice of Mr. Fane one of His Majesty's Council at Law thereupon we take leave upon the whole to observe to Your Lordships that by the following Clauses of this Act it is provided that there shall be paid to his Majesty for every slave, (male or female) "of four years of age and upwards, imported directly from Africa, the quantity of five ounces or Sevil Pillar or Mexico Plate, or forty shill: in Bills of Credit made current in this Colony.

For every Negro, Mullatto or Indian Slave (male or female) of four years of age and upwards imported from all other places by land or water, the sum of four pounds in like money. . . ."

As these clauses are greatly prejudicial to the Trade and Navigation of this Kingdom, and are likewise expressly contrary to His Majesty's Instructions to the Govr of New York, by which he is directed not to pass any Act for imposing Duties upon Negroes payable by the Importer, or whereby the Trade or Navigation of this Kingdom might be any ways affected, unless a clause be inserted in such Act for suspending the execution thereof 'till his Majesty's pleasure should be known concerning the same, we should for these reasons propose to Your Lordships that the Act in question might be laid before His Majesty for his Disallowance.

But considering the Inconveniencies and Confusion that might arise in the province of New York if this Act which settles funds for the support of His Majesty's Government there should be repealed before other provisions are made for the same purposes, we therefore humbly propose that this Act may be suffered to ly by for the present, and that orders may be immediately sent to His Majesty's Govr of New York to move the Council and Assembly of that Province forthwith to pass a New Law for repealing the three foregoing clauses and for providing and settling other Funds for the like purposes not liable to the same objections.

We take leave to transmit to Your Lordships the Draught of such an Instruction as we have prepared upon these heads for the Govr of New York, which, if Your Lordships should approve it, may be immediately sent to him. But if the Council and Assembly of New York shall refuse to comply with this Instruction, we should then propose that the Act in question may be laid before His Majesty for his Disallowance.²

8th Decr. 1744.

Sir, . . . The next Bill rejected by the Council, was, A Bill for laying a Duty on Indian, Negroe and Mollatto Slaves, imported into this Colony.

This Bill the Council considered abstractedly from any Instructions your Excellency has in relation to the African Company, which many of the Gentlemen of the Assembly we suppose are not unacquainted with, and only weighed the Advantages and Disadvantages that would arise to the People of this Colony upon that Bill's passing into a Law. By that Bill was plainly intended an intire Prohibition of all Slaves being imported from foreign Parts, no less than a Duty of Ten Pounds being imposed on all grown Slaves imported from the West-Indies, and Five Pounds on all those directly imported from Africa. Upon the most mature Consideration the Council were of Opinion, that if that Bill, or any other Bill, discouraging the Importation of Slaves, should at this time pass into a Law, the People of this Province in general (a few Labourers only excepted) and the Farmers in particular, would be great Sufferers by it, and that for the following Reasons.

1. It is well Known, that a great Number of Labourers went out of this Province on the late Expedition to the West Indies, and that very few of them have returned; That many, for some Time past, have been going, and still are going, on the Privateering Account; by which Means Labourers Wages are become very high, and the Farmers, Trading-Men and Tradesmen, are greatly straitened for want of Labourers to carry on their Business.

2. It is also well Known, that since the Manufacture of Linnens has arrived to any tolerable Perfection in Ireland, we have had very few Servants or Labourers from that Island, and have no Reason to expect many for the Time to come.

3. The present War throughout the German Dominions, and between almost all the Powers on the Continent of Europe, give us Reason to expect no Assistance from that Quarter. And as our Sovereign is deeply engaged in a war with many powerful Princes, [359] ¹*New Jersey Archives*, first ser., VI. 222-223, XV. 384-385. Lewis Morris, governor of New Jersey 1738-1746. In March, 1714, New Jersey laid a duty of £10 on all negroes imported into the colony, the duty to be imposed for seven years (ibid., first ser., XIII. 541). The reason for the measure Governor Hunter alleged to be the desire to "Encourage the Importation of white Servants for the better Peopeling that Country, a Law something like that in Pensilvania haveing evidently had that effect" (Governor Robert Hunter to the Board of Trade, Aug. 27, 1714, ibid., first ser., IV. 196). In 1739 the New Jersey assembly passed a new duty measure, which was rejected by the council (ibid., XV. 30, 31, 50); in 1744 the assembly renewed its efforts and on Oct. 24 sent to the council a bill which that body rejected on the 26th. Ibid., pp. 343, 345, 351.

we have as little Reason to expect any Number of Servants from the Island of Great Britain. Wherefore we conceive, that it would be more for the Interest of the People of this Colony to encourage at this Time the Importation of Slaves, than by a Law to prohibit them altogether, and therefore we rejected that Bill.²

We hear Capt. Amory a few Days ago, spoke with Capt. Miller in the Ship Hawke, of this Port, from the Coast of Guinea; who had been several weeks on our Coast, and were very short of Provisions.

² Cadwallader Colden, in a letter to Micajah Perry which was probably written in 1731, explains the high cost of labor in New York by "the high rate at which Negro's are sold being at about double of their value in the West Indies and Secondly the Great Charge of mentaining them especially in cloaths by reason of a long Winter in which time likewise they can be of little use." Colden Papers (N. New York had another connection with the slave trade which sometimes affected legislation. Cadwallader Colden, making plans for the raising of revenue, wrote to Governor Clinton on Aug. 8, 1751: "it [a duty on wines and spirits] can be of no disadvantage to Trade, except in one instance, vizt. in the exportation of Spirits from North America to the Coast of Africa, for purchasing of Slaves, in which case, if thought necessary, the duty may be drawn back." *N. A Petition from the Merchants against the Bill for Duty on the Negros.

To the Honourable James Hamilton, Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Pennsylvania, etc.

The Petition of Divers Merchants of the City of Philadelphia, Trading to His Majesty's Coloneys in the West Indies, Humbly Sheweth: That we are informed there is now a Bill Before your Honour for your assent, laying a Duty on the importation of Negros, and that it is to take place immediately on the publication.

[361] ¹ Minutes of the Provincial Council, Pennsylvania Archives, VIII. 576. On Feb. 28, 1761, a bill for laying a duty on negroes and mulatto slaves imported into the province was presented to Deputy Governor Hamilton for his concurrence. He returned the bill with a reprimand for having named in it the officer of enforcement, and with an amendment postponing its operation for six months after passage. His suggestions were accepted and in its final form the measure became a law on Apr. 11, 1761 (ibid., pp. 578-579, 583, 596, 601; Pa. Arch.: Papers of the Governors, fourth ser., III. 60-61). In 1767 John Penn, deputy governor, reported to the Earl of Shelburne that this duty, £10 per head, had yielded for the preceding three years £650 annually. Ibid., p. 343.

We, the subscribers, ever desirous to extend the Trade of this Province, have seen, for some time past, the many inconveniencys the Inhabitants have suffer'd for want of Labourers and artificers, by numbers being inlisted for His Majesty's Service, and near a total Stop to the importation of German and other white Servants, have for some time encouraged the importation of Negros, and acquainted our friends and correspondents in several parts of His Majesty's dominions (who are no Way apprehensive of a Bill of this Nature), that an Advantage may be gained by the Introduction of Slaves, which will Likewise be a means of reducing the exorbitant price of Labour, and, in all probability, bring our Staple Commoditys to their usual prices; And as many of us have embarked in this Trade through the motives before mentioned, We humbly beg your honour will take into consideration the hardships we shall Labour under by such a Law taking immediate effect, when we have it not in our power to countermand our Orders or advise our friends; therefore humbly pray that such time may be allowed (before the Law takes place) as your honour shall think most Conducive to extricate your petitioners from the impending danger.

George Nicholson, Master, and now lodged at Mr. Daniel Cooper's Ferry, on the Jersey Shore.

A Negroe Man, and two New Negroe Boys, who are to be sold by Willing, Morris and Company. The Purchaser to pay the Duty lately imposed by Act of Assembly, if brought into this Province.

Aug. 6, 1761.³

To be Sold, On Board the Schooner Hannah, lying in the River Delaware, very near Mr. Daniel Cooper's Ferry, West New Jersey, opposite the City of Philadelphia, a Cargo of likely Negroes, just imported in said Schooner, directly from the Coast of Guinea. For terms of sale apply to Thomas Riche, David Franks, or Daniel Rundle.

Oct. 22, 1761.⁴

Just imported in the Sloop Company, Captain Hodgson, from the Coast of Africa, A Parcel of Likely Negroe Slaves; Which may be seen on board said Sloop, lying off Cooper's Ferry. For Terms, apply to Samuel and Archibald M'Call, and James Wallace and Company.

May 27, 1762.⁵

Just imported from the River Gambia in the Schooner Sally, Bernard Badger, Master, and to be sold at the Upper Ferry (called Benjamin Cooper's Ferry), opposite to this City, a parcel of likely Men and Women Slaves, with some Boys and Girls of different Ages. Attendance will be given from the hours of nine to twelve o'clock in the Morning, and from three to six in the Afternoon, by W. Coxe, S. Oldman, and Company. N.B. It is generally allowed that the Gambia Slaves are much more robust and tractable than any other slaves from the Coast of Guinea, and more Capable of undergoing the Severity of the Winter Seasons in the North-American Colonies, which occasions their being Vastly more esteemed and coveted in this Province and those to the Northward, than any other Slaves whatsoever.

⁴ N. J. Arch., first ser., XX. 621, from Pa. Gazette, Oct. 22, 1761. Miss Gummere quotes a comment of Anthony Benezet of Philadelphia, which may have been made concerning this cargo: "Those Negroes that were brought last year up the River and sold on the Jersey Shore opposite this City (Philadelphia) were probably of the Fully (Fuli) Nation" (Amelia M. Gummere, ed., Journal of John Woolman, p. 30). It may be remembered that Job ben Solomon (this work, II. 420-427) belonged to the Fulis, a people more closely related to the Arabs than to the pure blacks. Since they were rarely made slaves, Benezet is probably mistaken in thinking that any large number of Fulis had been imported in this cargo.

363. GOVERNOR JOSIAH HARDY TO THE BOARD OF TRADE, 1762.¹

PERTH AMBOY Jany. 20th 1762.

My Lords, . . . I found by these minutes that they intended bringing in a bill to lay a small duty on Negroes imported into this Province, but on a message from me acquainting them that his Majesty's instructions would not allow my assenting to such a Bill, they dropt it; but at the same time they represented to me the inconvenience the Province is exposed to in lying open to the free importation of Negros, when the Provinces on each side have laid duties on them; for which reason great Numbers of Negros are landed in this Province every Year in order to be run into New York and Pensylvania besides overstocking this Country with Slaves of which in the general opinion there are already too many. They have therefore desired I would lay this matter before your Lordships, as they look upon it as a great hardship, I could therefore wish Your Lordships would please to take into consideration and intercede with his Majesty to grant them such relief as in his wisdom he may think fit.²

[363] ¹ N. J. Arch., first ser., IX. 345-346. Governor Hardy (1761-1762) repeated the substance of this communication in a letter to the Earl of Egremont Jan. 22, 1762. Ibid., p. 348.

² The governor's warning did not prevent the assembly from laying a duty on negroes in September, 1762 (ibid., XVII. 333-336). On May 2, 1763, Hardy wrote to the Board of Trade: "By the Intrepide Man of War I send the Bills passed at the last Sessions of the General Assembly of this Province in September, there is among them one entituled an Act for laying a duty on Negroes and Mulatto Slaves Imported into this Province, which I would not give my assent to without a suspending Clause not to take effect untill His Majesty's Pleasure shall be known, it may be proper likewise to inform Your Lordships that the reason for laying a higher duty in the Western division than in the Eastern, is that in the Province of Pennsylvania the duty is Ten Pounds proclamation on all Slaves imported, and in New York only Two Pounds currency; this consideration induced the Assembly to make such a difference in the two divisions" (ibid., first ser., IX. 382-383). The measure laid a duty of £2 in the eastern division of the province; £6 in the western division. Since the law could not go into effect until it received royal confirmation, New Jersey continued without a duty, and advertisements for small lots of negroes are not unusual in 1763 and 1764. On July 13, 1764, the Board of Trade wrote to the new governor, William Franklin: "As we have no particular Objection to the Policy of imposing a reasonable duty upon the importation of Negroes, we should have been glad to have laid the Law passed for that purpose before His Majesty for his approbation, but as the Duty is laid payable by the Importer, and a part of it is reserved in Case of re-exportation, it appears to us to be contrary in both these respects to the 26th Article of Your Instructions." This opinion was reported to the coun-

364. JOHN WATTS TO GEDNEY CLARKE, 1762.¹

NEW YORK, 30th March 1762.

Sir, . . . He [Governor Robert Monckton] mentions to me your Scheme² but as I take it for granted to be now all at an end little will be necessary to say on the occasion, but that I should not have had nor still have any objection to be concernd in it, if they sell reasonable which I cannot imagine they will as things are represented to me. For this market they must be young the younger the better if not quite Children, those advanced in years will never do I should imagine a Cargo of them none exceeding thirty might turn out at fifty pounds a head gross Sales. Males are best. Such a Number as you mention we cannot easily vend, from fifty to a hundred would run high enough, but Virginia could take off a great many. Our Duty is four pound a head from the West Indies forty shillings from Africa. New Jersey pays none at all for which reason the Master might lay a mile or two below the Town and send up word.³ . . .

365. JOHN WATTS TO GEDNEY CLARKE, 1762.¹

NEW YORK 3d April 1762.

Sir, . . . This will barring the Danger of Sea and Enemy, be delivered you by Capt: Joseph Bragg of the Sloop Deborah belonging to Mr: Astin. Upon considering the perplexed Circumstances I was in, I could think of no better Method than to take the Cargo cil on May 22, 1765. Apparently no further action was taken immediately, but in 1769 New Jersey placed a duty of £15 on every imported negro sold in the province, thus virtually putting an end to all slave trade into New Jersey. Ibid., IX. 346 n., 447, XVII. 385.

[364] ¹ Letter-Book of John Watts, Merchant and Councillor of New York (N. Y. Hist. Soc., Colls., LXI.), pp. 31-32. John Watts had extensive dealings with the West Indies, South Carolina, and Virginia. Gedney Clarke, son of Francis and Deborah Clarke of Boston and Salem and brother of John Clarke of Salem, was an active merchant of Barbados and at one time surveyor of customs of the Leeward Islands. His interest in Massachusetts is indicated by the fact that he presented to Christ Church of Boston (Old North Church) a chime of bells. Watts's many letters to him bespeak an intimate business connection. He was also a constant correspondent of Henry Laurens, many of whose letters to him will be found in this work, vol. IV., South Carolina.

² Apparently the scheme was for Clarke and Watts to unite in sending a vessel to Africa for slaves for the northern market. On Jan. 2 Watts wrote to Clarke that Astin, a Barbados debtor of his, had sent a sloop to New York with a rum cargo which was to be sold in New York. The sloop was then to be returned to Astin for a voyage to Guinea (ibid., p. 7). That trading in slaves was not new to Watts is shown by the entry for 1751 in the list of New Jersey importations, post., no. 370.

³ "The Dutys on Rum, Wine and Negroes have heretofore supported our Civil List" (John Watts to James Napier, June 1, 1765, Letter-Book, p. 355). The remainder of the letter is concerned with shipments of rum and with the unsatisfactory conduct of Astin, located at Essequibo, about whom and to whom Watts frequently wrote. On May 9 Watts wrote: "I take it for granted [you] have not succeeded in your Scheme for purchasing Negroes, nor indeed any thing else, by the best accounts we can get." Letter-Book, p. 45.

to myself, a Bottomry Bill on the Sloop, for what may be about the Ballance of my Acct: and send both to you to do as you judge right and fit on all Sides; both as I understand you to be Mr. Astin's friend and as it is proper you should know the grounds upon which I proceed, I send you a Copy of Messrs: Maxwell and Udnys Letter to me and another to Capt: Lowell which paint things in such abominable Colours that I am determined to settle my Affairs with that Gentleman while it is in my Power, and decline any farther intercourse least I should hereafter be dragg'd into a repetition of these vexatious Inconsistancys.

He first proposed that I should fit the Sloop properly for a Guinea Voyage credit him for a Loading and send her to Esequibo, she was accordingly so fitted a Cargo on board (not all that she has at present) and on the point of sailing, when I received Maxwell and Udneys Letter which put an end to that Scheme.

If this proposal faild I was next to take a freight for Barbados if such a thing could be obtained, and if that faild too and nothing better offerd I was even to return her to him in Ballast, so intent was his mind upon the Guinea Voyage after he had persuaded Capt: Bragg to undertake it, who has a thorough experience in that Business. There is a kind of an intimacy between Messrs: Maxwell and Udney and Capt: Bragg, and as soon as he came to understand their representation of Mr: Astin he trembled to think of returning to Esequibo upon Mr: Astins strength only, for fear of being shut up there and both disappointed and deceivd too as he had been before, this led him willingly to throw himself upon your protection, in hopes that something more effectual might be done than he believ'd Mr: Astin could carry through.² . . .

PHILADELPHIA, February 23 [1797].²

A cause of considerable interest, to the credit of our government, and to the credit of the Jurisprudence of this State, was tried in the district court on Monday; it appeared that the Lady Walsterstorff, a ship belonging to New-York³ arrived in the Delaware a short time ago, and upon proper information, she was libelled with her tackle, cargo, etc. under a law of the United States prohibiting the traffic in men.⁴

Upon the seizure of the vessel, two of the unfortunate Africans, that had been stolen from their native country, were found on board, together with several suits of iron such as hand-cuffs, neck yokes, leg-bolts, etc. packed up carefully in casks, and written documents completely authenticating the detail of the voyage to Africa, from the first equipment at New-York to her coming into this port, after the sale of a cargo of one hundred and fifty men, it appeared that the ship after leaving New York, took a lading at St. Croix, where they obtained a set of Spanish papers, and under a foreign flag pursued the traffic along the coast of Africa, and returned with the slaves to the same port, where they were all sold, saving only the two persons found on board; one of whom a man nick named Bacchus was brought forward at the trial, he could speak no language but that of his native country, the other, a woman, is hired as a domestic in the Jerseys, both having been liberated. The ship is confiscated and the penalty

[368] ¹ Mass. Gazette and News Letter, Dec. 7, 1770.

incurred by the law will be levied on the owner, who is a man of opulence.⁵

July 10, 1805.⁶

The brig Washington, capt. Harner, from Philadelphia to the west coast of Africa, was cast away on a reef of rocks off Cape Vine, on the 10th day of May and the brig and cargo lost, but all hands saved and taken prisoners. Capt. Harner came passenger in the sloop Juliet, from Goree to Charleston.

⁶ Charleston Courier, July 10, 1805. This vessel continued in the slave trade, though not in the hands of the Philadelphia owners: "The brig Washington, formerly of Philadelphia, but purchased on the Coast by capt. Trask, was cut off by the natives at Ryie, in the River Gambia, on the 1st October. Two of her crew were killed, and one made his escape. The captain was on shore during this transaction. She had on board 38 slaves" (ibid., Jan. 10, 1807). The fact that no New York nor Philadelphia vessels appear in the list of those delivering cargoes of negroes in Charleston between 1804 and 1807 by no means proves that there were no vessels from these two cities engaged in the slave traffic, but rather suggests that they found greater profit in selling in the West Indies. In 1805 the Benjamin of New York, Captain Newell, with slaves for Havana, was captured (ibid., May 3, 4, 1805, Dec. 27, 1806). The Bellona, 106 days from Africa and in want of food and water, reported on Dec. 27, 1806, was a New York ship.
